Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, who performed the marriage service fifteen years ago, was the officiating clergyman, and Rowland Randolph, who played the wedding march fifteen years ago, sang two hymns, "Abide With Me" and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." The other members of the bridal party who were present were: George Hummer, of Easton, Pa., the best man; Miss Ida Ramsay, of this city, flower girl; Miss Lottie Wilson, of Lebanon, maid of honor. Mrs. Herbert Buxton, who was bridesmaid, was unable to be present, but sent a handsome floral offering. The flowers were unusually numerous and beautiful, a barouche being required to carry them. Seven of Mrs. Hummer's closest friends sat near the casket until the close of the service. These were Mrs. Armstrong Mulford, Mrs. Lillian Kelly, Mrs. E. C. Wescott, Mrs. W. F. Thomas, Mrs. E. W. Poinier, Mrs. G. R. Wescott and Mrs. A. R. Causbrook.

Burial was in Hillside cemetery, the pallbearers being W. F. Thomas, of New Brunswick, Rowland Randolph, of New York, Armstrong Mulford, E. W. Poinier, W. R. Causbrook and George R. Wescott, of this city.

NAVAL GUN VIBRATION.

Conditions on a Warship When Heavy Firing Is In Progress.

The average civilian has a very vague idea as to the conditions inside a turret on a war vessel while heavy firing is going on.

The greatest force of the vibration from the firing of a gun is naturally just outside the muzzle, and that is outside the turret. So terrific is this vibration that if severe precautions were not taken the deck under the muzzle would be ripped to pieces, sheet iron doors would be wrenched from their hangings and skylights shattered. To guard against these effects the deck under the gun muzzle is re-enforced with steel plates about an inch thick and skylights are taken off and replaced with coverings of armor plate.

Of course a very considerable roar and jar are felt inside the turret. Men who are looking for the refinement of precaution recommend that gunners wear shoes with rubber cushioned soles and heels to lessen the jar on the deck.

The air vibration, due either to firing in one's own or some other turret, has caused many cases of gun deafness. To stuff the ears with cotton wool is, of course, the commonest expedient followed by men and officers alike. There is also what is called the Cheatham device, consisting of a mixture of clay and wool. It is very flexible, can be molded to any ear and still allows its wearer to hear orders.

Gun deafness may come immediately as a result of a ruptured ear drum or gradually owing to an injury to the auditory nerve.—London Answers.

ANCIENT ROMAN THEATERS.

Augustus Made the Women Sit Apart in the Highest Places.

When Rome was in her glory and the theater most popular distinctions between spectators long remained unknown. When distinctions were made the best seats were not assigned to the priests, for the drama had no such religious significance for the Romans as it had had for the Greeks, but were set apart for the more aristocratic portion of the community.

The orchestra was by law set apart for the senators. Later, perhaps after 67 B. C., the first fourteen rows back of the orchestra were, by the law of Roscius Otho, reserved at Rome for the knights, says Art and Archaeology. Similar arrangements obtained in Roman theaters outside of Rome, though in a provincial town like Pompeii as many as fourteen rows of seats can hardly have been necessary for the knights.

Augustus regulated the whole matter afresh. He confirmed the special privileges already granted to senators and to knights. He relegated the lowest classes to the highest seats and made the women sit apart, likewise in the uppermost places. It is possible that he was the sponsor also for the more exact regulations laid down concerning places of honor for magistrates, priests, etc.

The seats of highest honor were those on the tribunalia. Here the editor and the emperor sat on the right side. On the other tribunal the vestal virgins had their places, and with them the empress.

The Immensity of Space.

A photographic plate exposed to the heavens in a large telescope for any considerable length of time shows nothing but a continuous blur of light, indicating that the photographic eye sees beyond the reach of human vision such a multitude of suns that every part of space is filled. One may gain some inkling of the immensity of space by supposing the photographic plate exposed upon the remotest star it now records and looking out still farther to find the heavens still crowded with millions and millions of suns, each possibly having its own planets.

The Law of the Land.

The prisoner's lawyer was making an impassioned appeal to the jury.

"It were better," he thundered, "that ninety-nine innocent men escape than that one guilty be punished."

"I cannot allow that statement to go to the jury unchallenged," said the learned judge.

"Exception," thundered the lawyer, and the jury promptly voted to acquit the one guilty.—Philadelphia Ledger.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

YEA BO! WE'RE GOING TO HAVE A REAL, LIVE TEAM OF BALLTOSSERS THIS YEAR

Lift another load off your minds, gentle fans, we've solved another problem. Those who have been fearful that Plainfield would have no representative baseball nine this year, and there are plenty who had made up their minds to this end, will welcome the news heralding the advent of Britt Martin's Saurer baseball club into the city arena. Several weeks ago this prediction was made in an exclusive style by the Plainfield Daily Press' sporting department. Some there were who scoffed at the possibility of Ernie Dorflinger's "Pets" being pushed into the background but the announcement by Martin fell as a bomb into their camps.

Tuesday night Britt Martin and the moguls who govern the schedule for Parker Field will convene and affix their signatures to a season's contract for that playfield. Therefore there will be but one representative team, and that team will bear the Saurer handle.

Martin's popularity as a leader in local baseball circles may act as a reviving dose for the national pastime which has been on the wane in local circles for several years. For the past fifteen years Martin has held his own as one of the best infielders in this section and was one of the charter members of the old Clinton Avenue Baseball Club. Out of respect for this organization, from the Plainfield Pets developed, Martin refrained from putting a team on the field as a representative combination in opposition to Dorflinger last season. He piloted the destinies of the Saurer Club throughout a successful season and that organization has developed into a club that is well worthy of representing Plainfield.

Playing with Martin on the team are some of the best known semi-professional performers in this section of the State. Last year the veteran Martin led his team in hitting and fielding and is recognized as one of the greatest all-around players that ever played the game hereabouts.

With the founding of a representative ball nine comes the renewed agitation for a Central New Jersey League. At the present time only three teams are available for such a circuit, Westfield, Plainfield and Bound Brook. Plainfield will open its season at the latter place April 25. While not an advocate of Sunday baseball, Martin says he expects to be forced to take on several Sunday engagements but that a majority of his contests will be played on Saturdays and holidays.

The Saurers will have Parker Field May 1, 15 and 29, the 8 and 22 being given over to the Plainfield High School nine. From May 29 to June 26 the High School boys will have entire control of the field. After that date, however, with the exception of the afternoon of July 4 and one Saturday in August, the Saurer team will have exclusive use of the rendezvous. The Doctors' annual game for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital will be staged June 19 this year. The home season will open with the Elizabeth A. A. on Parker Field May 1. Several practices will be held prior to that date and if the Parker Field cannot be secured the try-outs will take place elsewhere.

OPEN SEASON WITH JOLLIFICATION HUNT

Many Riders Follow Hounds in Lively Sixteen-Mile Chase.

The Watchung Hunt opened the season Saturday afternoon with a jollification hunt, in which a large number of the riding members took part. The going was good and the hounds were unusually fast for this time of the year, and they led the riders a merry sixten-mile chase over nearby territory.

The hounds were met at the Horse Show grounds at 5:30 o'clock, and were cast in nearby. The first check was at Oak Tree, where the hounds were again taken up and cast in on the Williams estate. Crossing numerous farms, the riders headed for Metuchen, the check for the final line being at Rahway.

While crossing the Force farm, Edward R. Finch, of New York, came to grief and had a very narrow escape from serious injury. He lost his mount, and as he went off he turned a complete somersault, landing on his head. Fortunately, he wore a helmet, and this was the only thing that saved him from a severe injury to his head. The run was concluded about 6 o'clock. Owing to the fast pace only the following were able to finish:

Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H.; H. A. Bourne, S. D. French, Mayor H. W. Evans, H. L. Finch, A. C. Fox, Edward R. Finch, Colonel C. E. S. Bellows and Huntsmaan Harrison.

BORO FANS WILL BE TOO BUSY TO ROOT AT GAMES

"Salted peanuts and chewing gum; money to go for the new gym," was the cry heard at Hyde Oval Saturday afternoon during the North Plainfield-Rutgers "Prep" baseball gime, and many of the little fellows of the borough worked ernestly to make sales for the increasing of the fund which the Parent-Teacher Association intends to erect a recreation building in the borough.

For the first day the boys were very successful, and almost five dollars were realized from the sales to the spectators. These articles will be sold at every home game, and a lemonade stand will also be erected.

GIRLS' NINE HOLDS INITIAL PRACTICE

Y. W. C. A. Diamond Representatives Develop Speed at First Tryout.

Much enthusiasm was evinced by the Y. W. C. A. girls who came out for the initial baseball practice, which was held Saturday afternoon on the Belmont avenue field. Eight young women reported. The afternoon was passed mainly in explaining the rudiments of the game, catching, pitching and running bases. Prospects for a team are very good, many other members of the association signifying their intention of joining the squad at the next meeting.

Baseball is getting to be quite popular in a great many feminine schools, colleges and private clubs. A few years ago a girls' nine was an unheard of thing, but the healthful exercise the outdoor sport insures, the fine opportunity for the development of muscles and lungs, have overshadowed all prejudices, and the girls have indulged in the national pastime, playing a clean, refined and skilled game.

The next practice will probably be held the middle of the week, and all members who seek positions are urged to come out. The following young women reported Saturday afternoon: The Misses Marion Mair, Gertrude Mair, Elizabeth Wetherell, May Doughty, Alice Pope, Blanche Martin, Margaret Hawkins and Ethel Blazier.

P. C. C. WILL OPEN SEASON APRIL 24

Attractive Schedule Being Arranged by the Golf Committee.

Arrangements are being made for the formal opening of the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday, April 24, when there will be the first scheduled competition, which will probably be an 18-hole event for prizes. A number of improvements have been made about the course and clubhouse, which will add to the pleasure and convenience of the members.

As in past years, there will be a weekly competition for the golf committee cup this year, but a change has been made in the method of scoring points. Instead of giving three, two and one. This, it is believed, will prevent any one player from gaining such a lead as to kill the interest in the event in midsummer as has been the case before.

As usual, there will be a number of special events, the golf committee planning to make the schedule as attractive as possible. It has not been definitely decided just when the social season will begin at the clubhouse, but it is planned to hold the popular dinner-dances as usual, and other social functions will be announced from time to time.

ANNUAL DOCTORS' GAME.

The annual game promoted by the local physicians for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital will be played June 19. This is the date which the Playground Commission has set aside for the use of Parker Field.

WEAK IN THE PINCHES; N. P. H. S. LOSES OUT

Spasmodic Baseball Features Ten-inning Clash With "Prep" Team.

North Plainfield High School's initial baseball game of the season Saturday afternoon, with the Rutgers Prep aggregation, on Hyde Oval, went for ten rounds, and the boroughites were forced to bow to their opponents by a score of 6 to 5. The game was also the first of the year for the New Brunswick team, but their playing was better in the pinches than North Plainfield's, and they managed to tie the score in the ninth and cop the verdict in the first extra inning. The boroughites hit the ball in midseason form, totaling 12 safeties to their opponents' 7, but fielded poorly when tight playing was necessary. Ernest Stahl pitched a fine game, but eight errors behind him at critical times made runs for the Rutgers' team.

Stahl sent a fast one over the plate for a starter, which the batter never saw, and the umpire called it a strike. The first batter hit a high one to deep left, which was gobbled up Hebert. After getting the borough pitcher in a hole, McGovern, the second batter, found a straight one and drove it over centerfielder's head for two bases. Stahl setfled down and fanned a man. The fourth batter hit a high one over third base, but Townley and Dilts crosssed each other on the play and the man was safe on first. McGovern scoring with the first run from second base.

North Plainfield made all its runs in two innings, three being netted in the fourth round and two in the following season. Most of the runs were made by clean hitting, Rule being easy for the "Canucks." He was relieved in the eighth by Dienzer, who pitched airtight ball for three innings. With the score 5 to 1 in their favor the home players went to pieces in the sixth inning, and Rutgers crossed the plate twice. From that time until the end the borough team played a listless game and could not seem to regain any of the "pep" displayed in the early part of the contest, when their opponents were one run in the lead.

Stahl had the best of the pitchers' battle, fanning twelve men, while Rule disposed of two and Dienzer returned three to the bench. Stahl had plenty of steam, several puzzling curves and good control, but his teammates fell down. The score:

MARTIN OFF TO JOIN THE ST. PAUL CLUB IN OMAHA

After a week's vacation at his home in this city, Jack Martin left Saturday afternoon for Omaha, Neb., to join the St. Paul team, of the American Association. Jack was released last week by Manager Pat Moran, of the Philadelphia National League Club to the St. Paul outfit, and took advantage of a short layoff to come to this city before departing for the minors.

While at home Martin considered several other offers, but finally decided that his best course would be to accept the Philadelphia club's disposition of his case. Manager Moran still holds a "string" on him, and it is not unlikely that he will be brought back if Bancroft, the present shortstop, goes bad. The St. Paul team is playing an exhibition contest today at Omaha.

SLOCUM NO TERROR TO P. H. S. PLAYERS

Facing Semi-pro Hurler in First Game the Schoolboys do Good Work.

The Plainfield High School baseball team opened its season Saturday afternoon, tasting a defeat administered by the Camp Bowser nine. A rally in the eighth inning failed to tie the score. The game was clean cut and featured by some fast playing on the part of both teams. A poor start in the first inning by the High School boys gave the compers a chance to score some runs, but after this start the youngsters tightened up and second base was as far as any of the Camp Bowser players reached.

For Plainfield High School Brick and Denny twirled in great style. Brick served the ball up for the first five innings, allowing two hits and striking out eight men. Denny relieved him in the sixth inning, and allowed three hits and struck out five men. Both boys had fine control and good speed. A three-base hit by Doyle in the first inning was the feature of the game. The clout went clean over the left fielder's head. It appeared good for a home-run, but fast fielding by Kyle held the man on third base.

A few bad plays in the first inning threw away the High School's chances of landing the game. W. Schoonmaker hit the ball to Victorson, who fielded it cleanly, but missed his throw to first by about five feet, and the runner went to second. R. Schoonmaker hit to O'Leary at second who fumbled the ball and the runner reached first base. W. Schoonmaker went to third and R. Schoonmaker stole second. Craig flied out to left field scoring W. Schoonmaker. Doyle then clouted the ball for three bases and scored on Dumont's single; Slocum died, Brick to Hirsch and Daniels fanned.

Plainfield High School scored its two runs in the eighth. With two down O'Leary walked and stole second. Kyle was safe on an error at first base. Mills then singled, scoring O'Leary and Kyle. He stole second, but Rosenson ended the inning by hitting to Slocum, who tossed him out at first.

CANCELED FIRST GAME.

Because several of the regulars were out of town on their vacations, Captain Stewart, of the Leal School baseball team, canceled the game with Roselle for last Saturday, and another date will probably be fixed for the game. The private school leader did not want to open the season with a string of substitutes in the line-up, and decided to wait until next Saturday, when all the players will be home and start off right with Staten Island Academy on Crescent Oval.

TROPHY ENGRAVED.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball cup, presented by the Ritz for the city championship, has been suitably engraved, and has been placed on the trophy shelf in the library of the Somerset School. The names of the following players appear on one side: Marjorie Burtis, captain; Lillian Spencer, Lucy Douglas, Theresa McCullough, Elsie Debele, Bertha Keller and Rose Cooper.

TWENTY-SEVEN SHARPSHOOTERS COMPETE IN CLIMAX GUN CLUB'S COMPETITION

What was in all probability one of the most successful "shoots" ever held in this section of the State brought out twenty-seven clay-bird experts Saturday afternoon when the Climax Gun Club ran off a ten-event program on its local range. Three professionals, among whom was Neaf Apgar, of this city, exhibited some clever sharpshooting during the afternoon and all of the amateurs set up creditable marks. Apgar shot under the colors of the Peters Cartridge Company, and took second place by breaking 139 birds out of a possible 150. "Hank" Stevens, of the U. M. C., cracked all but nine out of 150 shots and thereby pulled down first laurels. Parcells, the third professional who was representing Parker Brothers, ranked third with a record of 123 out of 150. Interest centered about the work of the local gunner and he fulfilled the keenest expectations of his friends. His aim was good and in the fourth, fifth and seventh events he set up perfect scores. In the first, third and sixth events he bagged fourteen out of fifteen and in all the rest his record was thirteen out of fifteen. In taking first place "Hank" Stevens tallied the same number of perfect scores as Apgar but also netted five fourteens against his opponent's three. Stevens had a pair of thirteens.

Among the amateurs C. C. Randolph was "high gun" with 129 out of a possible 150. Randolph had one fourteen, seven thirteens and two twelves. He competed in ten events all of which were fifteen bird competitions. With a mark of 122 out of 150 John Terry came in for second honors getting one perfect score, one fourteen, two thirteens, one twelve, three elevens and one ten. Tom Brantingham was third with one less crack than Terry.

All of the strings were good ones and the success of the meet speaks for itself in the number of entries and the returns.

PROMISING OUTLOOK AT PARK GOLF CLUB

Active Season Will Be Opened May 30 With Interesting Events.

Owing to the fact that the grounds are not in as good condition as usual at this time of the year, the active season in golf will not open at the Park Golf Club until May 30, Decoration Day, although the course will probaably be open for general play before that time. The heavy snow of a week ago interfered considerably with the progress being made in putting the course in shape, for the snow remained on the mountain slope longer than in level places. The addition to the clubhouse now under way will be of great advantage in promoting social functions.

However, everything is going along nicely now, and the prospects are that the greens this year will be in much better condition than in the past. Owing to the rolling condition of the ground used for golfing heavy storms affect it more than in the case of level ground.

Charles B. Morse is chairman of the golf committee this year, and he and his associates are now busily engaged drafting the schedule, which promises to be unusually attractive. In addition to the regular events, team matches will be a feature.

Tennis will be another feature, as usual, a number of the members being fond of this sport. The fact that younger members have taken hold of affairs at the club this year gives promise of much activity. Already a number of new members have been elected and others are expected to join before the active season opens.

FILLS OPEN DATE.

Manager Roscoe VanCamp, of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, has filled his only open date in the schedule, May 22, with West Hoboken High School. The game will be played on Hyde Oval, and a return contest may be arranged orf some time in une.

BOWLING MATCH.

Voorhees and Luthman will roll for the best out of eleven games on the borough alleys tonight. The former recently defeated Vail, of the Elks' team.

GOOD beer has been a delight to mankind for more than 2,000 years. We are glad we make it.

Runaway June

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

SYNOPSIS.

June, the bride of Ned Warner, impulsively leaves her husband on their honeymoon because she begins to realize that she must be entirely dependent on him for money. She desires to be independent.

June is pursued by Gilbert Blye, a wealthy married man. She escapes from his clutches with difficulty. Ned searches distractedly for June, and, learning of Blye's designs, vows vengeance on him. After many adventures June is rescued from river pirates by Durban, an artist, who uses her as a model for "The Spirit of the Marsh." Mrs. Durban becomes jealous and drives June out. She is kidnaped by Blye and Cunningham.

June is taken by Blye to the boarding house of Mrs. Russel. She escapes, gets a job sewing and engages a cheap room in a tenement.

FOURTEENTH EPISODE.

In the Grip of Poverty.

CHAPTER I.

THE cold eyes of the dumpy landlady suddenly warmed. They had caught the glitter of a diamond.

"Wait a minute!" she called. "I think I'll take a chance on you, after all."

The beautiful young girl swayed in the doorway. Mrs. Waters caught her by the arms, put down the heavy bundle under which the girl had bent and led her to a chair.

"You need a cup of tea," the landlady rattled on, and her eyes strayed cornerwise to the tapering white hand upon which glowed a sparkling solitaire. The girl also wore a bright new wedding ring!

The woman waddled away, and June opened the bundle of pants which she had brought with her and began to sew.

"Put 'em up!" the bustling landlady with a neck like a crease cried. She lifted the garment from June's lap and tossed it aside. "You can't make a living sewing pants. A pretty girl like you ought to get a nice job in an office. Here's a cup of tea I got for you from Mrs. Parsons and a morning paper I got from Mrs. Kedzie. Drink your tea while I hunt you a job." And energetically she turned the paper inside out. My goodness! She had been about to drive away this beautiful young girl! And with that costly diamond ring on her hand and a brand new wedding ring! "I'll lend you car fare if you want it."

Within two minutes more she had her new lodger bundled out of the door and on her way "to hunt a job." Within two minutes after that a luxurious limousine had stopped in front of the new home of the runaway bride. The door opened, and a man with a white mustache sprang out, followed by a dark man with a black Vandyke. They dashed for the entrance, but a noise halted them. The sound came from the back of the car and was made by a large round lump which clustered around the spare tire. The lump was the private detective, Bill Wolf, and the face which he turned sidewise as the driver of the luxurious limousine ran back to him was covered with dust. The driver, a wide faced Italian, grinned as he saw that the involuntarily faithful sleuth was firmly attached to the tire covering by his cravat, which was entangled in a strap.

"Well, why don't you help me, you big wop?" complained the trapped detective.

"Help you? Sure!" The driver jumped behind Bill Wolf and kicked him with a sound like the beating of a carpet.

"Scatti!" called the black Vandyked man, Gilbert Blye, and the grinning Scatti ran to him.

Gilbert Blye pointed up the street. There tore toward them a family car, on the front seat of which, beside the chauffeur, sat a handsome collie, June Warner's Bouncer! The black Vandyked man whispered in the ear of his driver, and the gleam of joy came into the Italian's narrow slitted eyes.

Beautiful June Warner, more appealing than ever in her plain little black dress and her fragile pallor, entered the door which was lettered "Elizabeth Sawyer—Real Estate and Investments," and found herself in the railed off reception space of a large office which was alive with the hum of energetic business. Probably a dozen other applicants for the position which June had come to seek stood in this narrow space, comparing themselves critically with each other, but the timid little newcomer had but a very short time to endure their calculating scrutiny, for the door of a private office opened and a pleasant faced woman with a line of thought in her brow stood there, ranging over the girls with an eye of keen judgment, and popped back in.

A thin, stiff necked young woman came out and went directly to the beautiful girl with the plain black dress.

"Will you come in?" she invited with an unexpected agreeableness, and she led the way into the very center of this web of industry.

The family car stopped at the curb with a slam, and the collie, Bouncer, was on the ground. From the car sprang the young husband of June Warner, his jaws set and his fists clinched. There followed the stern father and the gentle mother of June, her bosom friend, Iris Blethering, and Iris' husband, Bobbie.

"They're in there!" called a dusty voice. It was the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf, still attached to the luxurious limousine by his strong cravat, but no one heard him. The party had rushed into the dim hallway.

June Warner's eyes brightened as she entered the private office of Elizabeth Sawyer. That pleasant featured woman sat at a desk piled high with a litter of papers. As she passed the desk June saw, standing amid the papers, the portrait of Elizabeth Sawyer, a tall, good looking man and three handsome children.

As Ned Warner rushed impetuously in from the street a figure sprang from the dim hallway. That figure was Scatti, and, closely pursued by the party from the family car, he tore across the big vacant room which occupied the ground floor and darted through a heavy iron door, and the pursuers piled in after him. It was then that the dark, handsome man with the black Vandyke slipped from his concealment beneath the stairway, sped lightly across the abandoned banking room and clanged the iron door, slipping the heavy crossbar into its place. His black eyes glowed as he heard the yell of dismay from behind those stanch doors, and he smiled.

Bill Wolf at last got his fingers unnumbed enough to open his pocketknife, and with this he sawed off his cravat just below the knot. He galloped straight across the street with a strange, sidelong motion and, entering a saloon, slapped a quarter on the bar.

"Four beers!" he husked with his dusty tongue. It was not until he had swallowed the third one that he took his nickel of change and telephoned to Honoria Blye.

A keen eyed man with bushy eyebrows came in to see Elizabeth Sawyer as June Warner sat patiently at the window. He put his hat on the corner of her desk and unbuttoned his smooth, neatly fitting overcoat.

"Well, Mrs. Sawyer, how about it?" he inquired, putting his hands on his knees.

Mrs. Sawyer had been busy sorting papers.

"I couldn't think of consolidating," she said crisply, with a shake of her head.

"Sorry." The man had laid a folded document before her. "All right, you won't consolidate." And the man's tone was regretful. "You're a very fine business woman, Mrs. Sawyer, and I don't mind admitting that you've made a real competition in our territory. How does this idea suit you?" He produced another document and spread it before her.

SILK COAT SUIT.

A dashing little coat suit in combination of Empire and military styles; this one of the most pronounced of the spring styles, but when worn by a chic and youthful figure is extremely attractive. This was made of putty colored faille and trimmed with buttons to match. The three-quarter sleeve is making an attempt to regain a place so long lost, and the repetition of the little pleatings of the underskirt here serves its purpose well. These pleatings are of self-tone taffeta. The general monotone of the toilet is relieved by the large black hat, trimmed with ribbons and streamers of green.

POLKA DOTS AND STRIPES ARE SMART.

Very new and distinctive are the season's polka-dotted materials. In the illustration a linen is figured with large polka dots encircled by rings, with smaller dots trailing aimlessly between. The collar of the simple shirtwaist is convertible, and a Medici collar is also included in the pattern, while the sleeves can be cut short and finished with flaring cuffs. The two-piece skirt is gathered to a two-piece yoke, and may be made with or without the pockets. Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8886 cuts in sizes 32 to 44 inches bust measure, and Ladies' Home Journal Pattern 8887 in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Dress in medium size requires 5¼ yards 36-inch material. Stripes of all styles and sizes and sizes are popular this summer, and are used in many attractive ways. A design for this purpose for the young girl is shown under Ladies' Home Journal Patterns 8869, 8870. This consists of a shirtwaist with a deep yoke and a collar that can be rolled back or buttoned close to the throat, and a two-piece skirt, with a trimming band that extends to form a panel in the back. Ladies' Home Journal Pattern 8869 cuts in sizes 32 to 44 inches bust measure and Ladies' Home Journal Pattern 8870 in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Dress in sizes 36 and 18 requires as illustrated 5 5-8 yards 36-inch material.

PLAN TO SPRING VOTE SURPRISE

Candidates Work Hard but Keep Mum on Success.

ONLY FIVE MORE DAYS TO WIN PRESS TOURS

In today's revised vote showing, the candidates are just holding their own. It might look to the outsider that little activity has been shown since the closing of the special prize contest. To the candidates themselves and their close friends it is another story—a story of piling up thousands of subscription votes to hand in on or near the closing hour of the contest and spring a surprise on these outsiders who have a notion there is not much going on these days. It seems that nearly every candidate has her mind set on winning the chaperon trip, and have planned to get in every possible subscription before the close.

Many candidates underestimated the number of votes required to win the first special prize, and, as a result, did not play their full hand. These same candidates will not be caught napping when it comes to the chaperon trip—they are going the limit and a little beyond for good measure.

The next revised vote exhibit will be made on Saturday, April 17, and will include all votes cast up to 8 p. m. Friday, April 16.

Only Five Days More.

Only five days remain in what is proving to be the best and biggest voting contest ever conducted in this section of the country, and in those remaining days there is no time for contestants to worry. Work is the proposition you are up against now; you have but a few days in which to make up all the time you have lost in the early stages of the race. A little setback or a trifling disappointment should not discourage a live contestant in the least. The race does not always go to the swift in a contest of this nature, but the steady workers generally loom up large at the finish.

Have You Been a Steady Worker?

If not, get busy and make up for the time you have lost the last few days. The time is short, but wonders can be done in five days with the proper amount of determination.

Remember that enthusiasm is a great asset, and those who really get to the top and win recognition are those who never for a moment lack the enthusiasm that comes from perfect confidence in their ability to win.

Don't let your enthusiasm diminish; everyone gets a fair deal; keep forever at it from now until the close of the contest and make yourself a winner.

It is time to gather in all those promised subscriptions now, as there are not many more days to collect them before the contest closes. Some people will say to you when you ask them for their subscriptions, "I will give you my subscription at the end of the contest if you think you will need it." A candidate needs all the subscriptions she possibly can get hold of. No candidate or anybody else knows how many votes a candidate needs to win a trip.

Humming Weeks.

The last few weeks' of the Press' Panama-Pacific tour contest have certainly been hummers. The women are working with might and main, and they have realized that only perseverance will win. Those who win these trips will do so on popularity and hustle, and on these alone. Don't expect to be able to sit at home and have the subscriptions brought to you. If you do you will be sadly disappointed.

It is an assured fact that the ladies selected by the people of Plainfield and vicinity to take these grand trips will be selected because they are popular and deserve the honor. All expense on these trips will be paid by the Press, and not one detail is overlooked in connection with any of the trips that could be of any possible convenience or pleasure to the successful ones. Take one of these trips.

BURIED IN ST. MARY'S.

The funeral of Theodore Mercier, whose death occurred at his home in Scotch Plains, was held in St. Mary's church Saturday morning, where a requiem mass was said by Rev. Father Sciola. There were many handsome floral offerings from friends of the family. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the following nephews acting as pall bearers. John Stillger, William Simmonds, Albert Burgmiller, George Burgmiller and William Lewis.

CHAPTER XIX.

I Meet Mrs. Titus.

WHILE we were crossing the muddy stream my secretary, his teeth chattering with cold and excitement combined, related the story of the night.

"We were just starting off for the boathouse up the river, according to plans, Max and Rudolph and I with the two boats, when the countess came down in a mackintosh and a pair of gum boots and insisted upon going along with us. She said it wasn't fair to make you do all the work and all that sort of thing. While we were arguing with her—and it was getting so late that I feared we wouldn't be in time to meet you—we heard some one shouting on the opposite side of the river. The voice sounded something like Britton's, and the countess insisted that there had been an accident and that you were hurt, Mr. Smart, and nothing would do but we must send Max and Rudolph over to see what the trouble was. It was raining cats and dogs, and I realized that it would be impossible for you to get a boatman on that side at that hour of the night—it was nearly 1—so I sent the two Schmicks across. I've never seen a night as dark as it was. The two little lanterns bobbing in the boat could hardly be seen through the torrents of rain, and it was next to impossible to see the lights on the opposite landing stage—just a dull, misty glow.

"To make the story short, Mrs. Titus and her sons were over there, with absolutely no means of crossing the river. It took two trips over to fetch the whole party across. Raining pitchforks all the time, you understand. Mrs. Titus was foaming at the mouth because you don't own a yacht or at least a launch with a canopy top or a limousine body or something of the sort.

"I didn't have much of a chance to converse with her. The countess tried to get her upstairs in the east wing, but she wouldn't climb another step. I forgot to mention that the windlass was out of order and she had to climb the hill in mud six inches deep. The Schmicks carried her the last half of the distance. She insisted on sleeping in the hall or the study—anywhere but upstairs. I assumed the responsibility of putting her in your bed, sir. It was either that or"—

I broke in sarcastically, "You couldn't have put her into your bed, I suppose."

"Not very handily, Mr. Smart," he said in an injured voice. "One of her sons occupied my bed. Of course it was all right, because I didn't intend to go to bed, as it happened. The older son went upstairs with the countess. She gave up her bed to him, and then she and I sat up all night in the study waiting for a telephone message from you. The younger son explained a good many things to us that his mother absolutely refused to discuss, she was so mad when she got here. It seems she took it into her head at the last minute to charter a special train, but forgot to notify us of the switch in the plans. She traveled by the regular train from Paris to some place along the line, where she got out and waited for the special which was following along behind, straight from Paris too. A woeful waste of money, it seemed to me. Her idea was to throw a couple of plain clothes men off the track, and, by George, sir, she succeeded. They thought she was changing from a train to some place in Switzerland and went off to watch the other station. Then she sneaked aboard the special which was chartered clear through to Vienna. See how clever she is? If they followed on the next train or telegraphed it would naturally be to Vienna. She got off at this place, and—well, we have her with us, sir, as snug as a bug in a rug."

"What is she like Fred?" I inquired. I confess that I hung on his reply.

"I have never seen a wet hen, but I should say on a guess that she's a good bit like one. Perhaps when she's thoroughly dried out she may not be so bad, but"—he drew a long, deep breath—"but upon my word of honor she was the limit last night. Of course one couldn't expect her to be exactly gracious, with her hair plastered over her face and her hat spoiled and her clothes soaked, but there was really no excuse for some of the things she said to me. I shall overlook them for your sake and for the countess'." He was painfully red in the face.

"The conditions, Fred," I said, "were scarcely conducive to polite persiflage."

"But, hang it all, I was as wet as she was," he exploded so violently that I knew his soul must have been tried to the utmost.

"We must try to make the best of it," I said. "It will not be for long." The thought of it somehow sent my heart back to its lowest level.

He was glum and silent for a few minutes. Then he said, as if the thought had been on his mind for some hours: "She isn't a day over forty-five. It doesn't seem possible, with a six foot son twenty-six years old."

Grimly I explained, "They marry quite young when it's for money, Fred."

"I suppose that's it," he sighed. "I fancy she's handsome, too, when she

We were halfway up the slope when he announced nervously that all of my dry clothing was in the closet off my bedroom and could not be got at under any circumstance.

"But," he said, "I have laid out my best frock coat and trousers for you and a complete change of linen. You are quite welcome to anything I possess, Mr. Smart. I think if you take a couple of rolls at the bottom of the trousers they'll be presentable. The coat may be a little long for you, but"—

My loud laughter cut him short.

"It's the best I could do," he said in an aggrieved voice.

I had a secret hope that the countess would be in the courtyard to welcome me, but I was disappointed. Old Gretel met me and wept over me, as if I was not already sufficiently moist. The chef came running out to say that breakfast would be ready for me when I desired it; Blatchford felt of my coat sleeve and told me that I was quite wet; Hawkes had two large, steaming toddies waiting for us in the vestibule, apparently fearing that we could get no farther without the aid of a stimulant. But there was no sign of a single Titus.

Later I ventured forth in Poopendyke's best suit of clothes, the one he uses when he passes the plate on Sundays in faraway Yonkers. It smelled of moth balls, but it was gloriously dry, so why carp? We sneaked down the corridor past my own bedroom door and stole into the study

Just inside the door I stopped in amazement. The countess was sound asleep in my big armchair, a forlorn but lovely thing in a pink peignoir. Her rumpled brown hair nestled in the angle of the chair; her hands drooped listlessly at her sides; dark lashes lay upon the soft white cheeks; her lips were parted ever so slightly, and her bosom rose and fell in the long swell of perfect repose.

Poopendyke clutched me by the arm and drew me toward the door or I might have stood there transfixed for heaven knows how long.

"She's asleep," he whispered.

It was the second time in twelve hours that some one had intimated that I was blind.

The door creaked villainously. The gaunt, ecclesiastical tails of my borrowed frock coat were on the verge of being safely outside with me when she cried out, whereupon I swiftly transposed myself and stuck my head through the half open door.

"Oh, it's you!" she cried, in a quavery voice. She was leaning forward in the chair, her eyes wide open and eager.

I advanced into the room. A look of doubt sprang into her face. She stared for a moment and then rather piteously rubbed her eyes.

"Yes, it is I," said I, spreading my arms in such a way that my hands emerged from the confines of Poopendyke's sleeves. (Upon my word, I had no idea that he was so much longer than I!) "It is still I, countess, despite the shrinkage."

"The shrinkage?" she murmured, slowly sliding out of the chair. As she unbent her cramped leg she made a little grimace of pain, but smiled as she limped toward me, her hand extended.

"Yes, I always shrink when I get wet," I explained, resorting to facetiousness.

Then I bent over her hand and kissed it. As I neglected to release it at once, the cuff of Poopendyke's best coat slid down over our two hands, completely enveloping them. It was too much for me to stand. I squeezed her hand with painful fervor and then released it in trepidation.

"Poopendyke goes to church in it," I said vaguely, leaving her to guess what it was that Poopendyke went to church in, or, perhaps, knowing what I meant, how I happened to be in it for the time being. "You've been crying!"

Her eyes were red and suspiciously moist.

As she met my concerned gaze, a wavering, whimsical smile crept into her face.

"It has been a disgustingly wet night," she said. "Oh, you don't know how happy I am to see you standing here once more, safe and sound, and—and amiable. I expected you to glower and growl and"—

"On a bright, glorious, sunshiny morning like this?" I cried. "Never! I prefer to be graciously refulgent. Our troubles are behind us."

"How good you are!" After a moment's careful scrutiny of my face she added, "I can see the traces of very black thoughts, Mr Smart, and recent ones."

"They were black until I came into this room," I confessed. "Now they are rose tinted."

She bent her slender body a little toward me, and the red seemed to leap back into her lips as if propelled by magic. Resolutely I put my awkward, ungainly arms behind my back and straightened my figure. I was curiously impressed by the discovery that I was very, very tall and she very much smaller than my memory recorded. Of course I had no means of knowing that she was in bedroom slippers and not in the customary high heeled boots that gave her an inch and a half of false stature.

"Your mother is here," I remarked hurriedly.

She glanced toward my bedroom door.

"Oh, what a night!" she sighed. "I did all that I could to keep her out of your bed. It was useless. I did cry, Mr. Smart. I know you must hate all of us."

I laughed. "'Love thy neighbor as thyself,'" I quoted. "You are my neighbor, countess. Don't forget that. And it so happens that your mother is also my neighbor at present, and your brothers too. Have you any cousins and aunts?"

"I can't understand how any one can be so good natured as you," she sighed.

The crown of her head was on a lowered. A faint line of distress grew between them. For a minute I stared down at the brown crest of her head, an almost ungovernable impulse pounding away at my sense of discretion. I do take credit unto myself for being strong enough to resist that opportunity to make an everlasting idiot of myself. I knew even then that if a similar attack ever came upon me again I should not be able to withstand it.

All this time she was staring rather pensively at the second button from the top of Poopendyke's coat, and so prolonged and earnest was her gaze that I looked down in some concern, at the same time permitting myself to make a nervous, jerky and quite involuntary digital examination of the aforesaid button. She looked up with a nervous little laugh.

"I shall have to sew one on right there for poor Mr. Poopendyke," she said, poking her finger into the empty buttonhole. "You dear bachelors!"

Then she turned swiftly away from me and glided over to the big armchair, from the depths of which she fished a small velvet bag. Looking over her shoulder, she smiled at me.

"Please look the other way," she said. Without waiting for me to do so she took out a little gold box, a powder puff and a stick of lip rouge. Crossing to the small Florentine mirror that hung near my desk, she proceeded before my startled eyes to repair the slight—and to me unnoticeable—damage that had been done to her complexion before the sun came up.

"Woman works in a mysterious way, my friend, her wonders to perform," she paraphrased calmly.

"No matter how transcendently beautiful woman may be, she always does that sort of thing to herself, I take it," said I.

"She does," said the countess with conviction. She surveyed herself critically. "There! And now I am ready to accept an invitation to breakfast. I am disgustingly hungry."

"And so am I!" I cried with enthusiasm. "Hurray! You shall eat Poopendyke's breakfast just to penalize him for failing in his duties as host during my unavoidable"—

"Quite impossible," she said. "He has already eaten it."

"He has?"

"At half past 6, I believe. He announced at that ungodly hour that if he couldn't have his coffee the first thing in the morning he would be in for a headache all day. He suggested that I take a little nap and have breakfast with you—if you succeed in surviving the night."

"Oh, I see," said I slowly. "He knew all the time that you were napping in that chair, eh?"

"You shall not scold him!"

"I shall do even worse than that. I shall pension him for life."

She appeared thoughtful. A little frown of annoyance clouded her brow.

"He promised faithfully to arouse me the instant you were sighted on the opposite side of the river. I made him stand in the window with a field-glass. No, on second thought, I shall scold him. If he had come to the door and shouted you wouldn't have caught me in this odious dressing gown. Helene"—

"It is most fascinating," I cried. "Adorable! I love flimsy, pink things. They're so intimate. And Poopendyke knows it, bless his ingenuous old soul."

I surprised a queer little gleam of inquiry in her eyes. It flickered for a second and died out.

"Do you really consider him an ingenuous old soul?" she asked. And I thought there was something rather metallic in her voice. I might have replied with intelligence if she had given me a chance, but for some reason she chose to drop the subject. "You must be famished, and I am dying to hear about your experiences. You must not omit a single detail. I"—

There came a gentle, discreet knocking on the half open door. I started.

"Come!" I said.

Blatchford gravely swung the door wide open.

"Breakfast is served, sir—your lady-ship. I beg pardon."

I have never seen him stand so faultlessly rigid. As we passed him on the way out a mean desire came over me to tread on his toes just as an experiment. Somehow I felt that he would say, "Thank you, sir," and there would be no satisfaction in knowing that he had had all his pains for nothing.

I shall never forget that enchanted breakfast—never! Not that I can recall even vaguely what we had to eat, or who served it, or how much of the naked truth I related to her in describing the events of the night; I can only declare that it was a singularly light hearted affair.

At half past 1 o'clock I was received by Mrs. Titus in my own study. The countess came down from her eerie abode to officiate at the ceremonious function—if it may be so styled—and I was agreeably surprised to find my new guest in a most amiable frame of mind. True, she looked me over with what seemed to me an unnecessarily and perfectly frank stare of curiosity, but, on sober reflection, I did not hold it against her. I was still draped in Poopendyke's garments.

At first sight I suppose she couldn't quite help putting me down as one of those literary freaks who typify intellect without intelligence.

As for her two sons, they made no effort to disguise their amazement. (I have a shocking notion that the vowel "u" might be substituted for the "a" in that word without loss of integrity.)

The elder of the two young men, Colingraft Titus, who being in the business with his father in New York was permitted to travel most of the time so that he couldn't interfere with it, was taller than I, and an extremely handsome chap to boot. He was twenty-six. The younger, Jasper junior, was nineteen, short and slight of build, with the merriest eyes I've ever seen. I didn't in the least mind the grin he bestowed upon me—and preserved with stanch fidelity throughout the whole interview—but I resented the supercilious, lordly scorn of his elder brother.

Jasper I learned was enduring a protracted leave of absence from Yale.

The hiatus between his freshman and sophomore years already covered a period of sixteen months, and he had a tutor who appreciated the buttery side of his crust.

Mrs. Titus after thanking me warmly and, I think, sincerely for all that I had done for Aline, apologized in a perfunctory sort of way for having kept me out of my bed all night and hoped that I would not catch cold or have an attack of rheumatism.

I soon awoke to the fact that she was in the habit of centralizing attention. The usually volatile countess became subdued and repressed in her presence; the big son and the little one were respectfully quiescent; I confess to a certain embarrassment myself.

She was a handsome woman with a young figure, a good complexion, clear eyes, wavy brown hair and a rich, low voice, perfectly modulated. No doubt she was nearing fifty, but thirty-five might have been your guess, provided you were a bachelor. A bachelor learns something about women every day of his life, but not so much that he cannot be surprised the day after.

I endeavored to set her mind at rest by politely reminding her that I could not have slept in the bed anyway, having been out all night, and she smilingly assured me that it was a relief to find a literary man who wasn't forever saying flat, stupid things.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

When Dick came home, worn to a frazzle with the hot wind and dust, he found Nell on the bed with a high fever. He realized that she was sick and his heart smote him for his callousness over her condition at that noon. He telephoned for the doctor, then set about helping her to bed.

When the doctor came she quietly resting. Dick followed him to the door.

"Is it anything serious, doctor?" he asked.

"In her case the nervous condition causes the fever. I can't tell how serious it may be. Is she worrying about anything?" he asked, looking sharply at Dick. "I know the grilling women of this town can give a person. I wondered if any such cause could be back of it."

"Oh, no; I think not," said Dick easily. "She doesn't worry over silly gossip. She has never mentioned the matter for weeks."

"With most women that would be proof, but not with all. She has not been sleeping; sleep will do her more good than medicine."

He climbed into his auto and was gone. Dick went to the pantry and picked up a lunch. While he was eating it a knock sounded at the door and Nell heard Miss Rudolph's voice, saying, "I saw the doctor stop here and ran over to see who was sick."

Dick's reply was too low to be heard, but again came the affected tones: "Let me help you. Shall I get supper for you?"

"The brazen intruder!" thought Nell fiercely. "Must she for ever be thrust down my throat?"

Dick closed the door of the living room and she could hear the low murmur of their voices a sshe tossed feverishly on her pillow. Finally she heard Miss Rudolph do down the step and the gate clicked behind her. Dick tiptoed into the room and noticed the bright fever spots in her cheeks and her quickened pulse.

"Miss Rudolph came to see who was sick," he explained, fully aware that she knew who had been there.

"She is officious as usual; I wish she'd stay away." Nell was too ill to keep guard on her tongue.

"She's kind-hearted and wanted to help," was Dick's tactless answer.

"If she had a particle of self-respect she wouldn't come her when she knows how much talk there is about you two."

Dick tried to change the subject, for he saw how excited Nell was getting.

"You care nothing for the position it places me in," she continued in a high voice. "That girl's wishes are alone considered," and she burst into hysterical sobbing. All the pent-up suffering of weeks was pouring forth now that the gates of self-restraint were down.

Dick soothed and quieted her, and she dropped into a troubled sleep

The doctor came early next morning. While he was taking her temperature, Miss Rudolph called at the door, and he noticed her quickened pulse.

"Miss Rudolph must not come here even to inquire," he told Dick. "She makes her more excitable. It is as I suspected. She is worrying over the gossip and, mark you've got to stop this worry if you want her to get through all right. It's the worst possible thing for her. I'm surprised that you know so little of a woman's nervous organism, and in these critical months she must be protected from worry."

Household Hints

SAVING WHITE FLOUR

Barley Bread—In Scotland, Norway and other climates where wheat is not grown, barley bread is used extensively. It is both wholesome and palatable. Mix the barley meal with warm water and a little salt, but no yeast. Mix to a stiff dough, roll into flat cakes, and bake before the fire or in an oven. Eat hot with butter.

Pumpkin Bread—Stew and strain a sufficient quantity of pumpkin; add enough Indian meal to stiffen it, with yeast and a little salt; when sufficiently raised, bake as in ordinary bread.

Corn Bread—Put one pint of meal into a bowl; pour over sufficient boiling water to just moisten it; it must not be wet. Cover and when cool add a tablespoonful of shortening, melted, and two eggs lightly beaten. Add a pint of thick sour milk, to which you have added a teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of water and mix thoroughly. Turn into a shallow pan and bake in a moderately quick oven for half an hour.

Bran Muffins—Dissolve one teaspoonful of soda in six tablespoonfuls of molasses, add one and one-half pints of sweet milk and a teaspoonful of salt; stir in gradually one quart of bran and one pint of graham flour. Bake in muffin tins one-half hour.

Hominy Bread—Mix together one pint soft boiled hominy, one teaspoonful salt, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, three eggs and two cups of milk. Mix together one cup whole wheat flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; add to batter, with more flour if needed to mix to a drop batter. Beat hard, bake in a shallow pan in a very hot oven.

Fine White Hominy or Grits—Take two cups to two quarts salted water, soak over night and boil three-quarters of an hour in a custard kettle; serve with milk and sugar, or when cold slice and fry.

Rice and Indian Bread—Beat three two cups white corn meal, one cup cold boiled rice, two tablespoonfuls melted butter, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoonfuls baking powder and one-half cup more milk. Beat hard, bake in shallow greased tin in hot oven.

Brown Bread—One pint corn meal, one pint rye flour, one teaspoonful brown sugar, one teaspoonful salt, two teasponfuls baking powder, one tablespoonful butter or lard, and three-quarters of a pint of milk. Sift together corn meal, rye flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. Rub in the shortening, add the milk and mix the whole into a batter. Bake forty minutes in a hot oven.

Apple Gems—Chop fine four sour apples, add one beaten egg, two tablespoonfuls of molasses, one and a half cups of corn meal, one and a half cups of graham flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add sufficient milk to make a thick drop batter.

Graham Fruit Cake—Sift three cupfuls of graham flour and add to it two cupfuls of white flour and sift again. Measure two cupfuls sugar and add to it one cupful of molasses. Take two cupfuls of milk and add a little at a time, alternating with the mixed flour to the sugar mixture. Beat well and add one teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice, soda and salt and three cupfuls seeded raisins and citron. Bake in a moderate oven an hour.

A SATISFYING MEAL

Take one pound kidney beans and soak over night. In the morning, cook until tender in just enough water to cover them.

It is best to drain when about half done and add fresh boiling water.

Chop two small onions and brown in tablespoon of butter or meat drippings.

Add this to the beans with one small can tomatoes and about one quarter pound cooked macaroni. Salt and pepper to taste and let simmer a few minutes.

This is nice with any kind of meat, and makes a satisfying meal for four

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Animal School.

Have you ever visited Animal Town?
If not, you will all like to hear
Of the Animal children, their work and their play
I know you will think they are queer.

The first thing you see when you get to the town
Is the Animal School, painted drab;
It sits on a hill, in a big grove of trees,
And is taught by a learned old Crab.

At eight every morning the Animals go
To school, and they study hard, too,
And on Fridays they sing, and each one speaks a piece
Exactly as you children do.

On the front row of seats are the Bees and the Ants,
The Birds too, because they are small,
And in the last row you will find the Giraffe,
Because he is so very tall.

The first thing each morning they have the roll-call,
Then they all fall to work with a zest,
But here is a funny thing—each Animal
Just studies the things he likes best.

Treeography and all its branches are taught.
The Squirrels and the Birds like that best,
For it teaches them which kind of trees have the nuts
And which are the nicest for nests.

And ever so many more interesting things
Are taught, but I don't know their names,
And then when recess comes the Animals play
All manner of interesting games.

But the thing that they really love best is to tease
Poor Schoolmaster Crab, I'm afraid.
Tomorrow I'll tell you of some of the pranks
These mischievous youngsters have played.

BELTED GOWNS.

Quaint Variations of This Style Favored For Youthful Figures.

BELTED SPRING SUIT.

The belted suit or the suit with the simulated belt is promised as a style leader among spring costumes. White, tan, putty and neutral shades prevail for these gowns.

A jaunty spring suit of white broadcloth is shown here. The skirt, partially circular, is laid in inverted box plaits in front. The loosely fitting jacket is belted with white kid and has a cutaway peplum falling in points at the side. Trimmings are of white novelty buttons. Worn with it is a wide brimmed sailor hat of blue satin.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS.

Worry About Work Doesn't Pay In the Long Run.

Business women frequently allow their responsibilities to weigh too heavily upon them. They do not forget their cares, but take them home, discuss them at the dinner table, take them to bed and once more they are heard at the breakfast table.

It is small wonder that business eventually drives them and the family to the point of tense nerves and much unhappiness.

The brain should not be robbed of its peace, especially at night, for nothing wears off its finer edge more quickly than worry, which naturally encourages insomnia.

Every effort should be made to indulge in outdoor diversions, active and passive, so as to suit one's needs and moods.

Long hours of office work and household labor shoud be followed by periods of play, mental or physical relaxation, which serve as a balance wheel. Depression is sometimes due to too little physical exercise. Few people suffer from fatigue where the circulation is normally active.

Trying to Cure Insomnia.

The immediate cause of insomnia is the presence of too much blood in the brain. The feet go to sleep first, so use a hot water bag or a soapstone first of all to see if you cannot draw the blood to the extremities or soak the feet in hot mustard water just before retiring, but you must not do this too often.

If very nervous put a mustard plaster at the back of the neck. The little ones already prepared and sold at the drug store for 5 cents each are nice for this purpose. One of the simplest and usually an effective method is to place a hot water bottle on the stomach. Never use drugs. They deaden, but do not heal.

FASHION'S FOIBLES.

Blues of many shades will be worn in the spring.

Princess polonaises are promised for the coming season.

Wide tucks as trimmings are coming into favor.

There are no radical changes in corset lines.

The military note continues to influence woman's dress.

The Turkish skirt promises to become popular.

Each month brings with it a wider skirt.

The coat dress is at present the smartest and most practical affair worn.

On a few of the new skirts the hems are stiffened.

Some of the new skirts are literally four yards around.

There is a growing tendency toward combining fabrics for children's dresses, the high, broad belt and full gathered skirt.

A MARGIN OF SAFETY

An engineer never thinks of building a bridge without allowing a sufficient margin of safety. No more can you build a successful career without a margin of "capital" safety in your business.

The average business man knows that it is not too little BUSINESS, but rather too little CAPITAL with which to handle his growing business, that gives him the most concern.

Why not, therefore, remedy this weakness by laying aside monthly, through the medium of our Installment Bond plan, say $25. In 38 months you will have acquired $1,000 additional capital to be drawn upon as your needs require.

Allow us to explain the details.

REFUTES POINTS MADE BY ANTIS

Senator Moses E. Clapp Takes a Crack at Assemblyman Mathews' Arguments.

CARTOONS A FEATURE

Suffrage Lecture in the Plainfield High School Auditorium Last Night Attended by Workers on Both "Sides of the Fence."

Voters, would-be voters and anti-suffrage exponents, numbering over 200, heard Senator Moses E. Clapp, of Minnesota, expound on the subject of "Equal Rights" in the Plainfield High School Auditorium, last night. Cramplin L. Riley, president of the Men's League for Women Suffrage, presided, and Mayor Leighton Calkins made a few remarks of an introductory nature. Suffrage workers from Westfield, Bound Brook and Elizabeth were in attendance and a number of "antis" were seated in a group in the rear section of the auditorium. Senator Clapp's remarks were enthusiastically received by his constituents in the suffrage cause, but there was no demonstration on the part of the opposing faction.

Singular though it might appear, Senator Clapp's talk was in a large measure merely a refutation of arguments presented by Assemblyman John A. Matthews and Miss Lucy Price at the recent suffrage debate held under the auspices of the Plainfield Democratic Club, the speaker last night doing what Senator Charles O. Hennessy and Miss Alice Carpenter failed to do for the suffrage workers on that occasion. Although it was nothing more than a co-incidence, Senator Clapp dealt with each argument presented by the anti debaters and his remarks had a "steam roller" effect on many of the points advanced at the double party meeting. Aside from attempting to shatter the bulwark of defense built up by the antis, Senator Clapp said in part:

"Womanhood is the mold in which all manhood is formed. She no longer is accorded the protecting arm of man, but is forced out in to the wide world to shift for herself. In her mission she meets with every obstacle and temptation a man encounters.

"What is a mother called upon to protect the home against? She has

SOMERSET TO BE A SALOONLESS COUNTY

Judge Parker Will Grant No Saloon Renewals in 1916—Two Applicants Refused.

Applications for "inn and tavern" liquor licenses made by Morris Latzko, of 27 Somerset street, and J. F. Jensen, owner of the Mountain Inn, on Somerset street, were refused by Circuit Court Judge C. W. Parker, sitting in Somerville, this morning. In anounncing his decision the judge said that saloon licenses granted or renewed in Somerset county this year would be good for but one year, and at the end of that time they would not be renewed.

Judge Parker put himself on record as being personally opposed to the issuance of any new licenses, and if his present plans materialize Somerset will be a saloonless county in 1916.

Latzko at the present time has a Somerset county wholesale license, and has wanted to take out an inn and tavern license for some time past. His place of business is just over the line that divides the city and borough.

MANY FRIENDS AT BIER OF MRS. JOSEPH DUNHAM

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, which filed the house to overflowing, the funeral of Mrs. Joseph S. Dunham, whose death occurred in New York, last Friday, after a brief illness, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Elwin R. Leland, on Sandford avenue. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, of which Mrs. Dunham had been a member for many years, was the officiating clergyman. In addition to reading scripture and offering prayer, he extended words of sympathy to the bereaved husband and relatives, taking the opportunity to touch upon the life of the young woman whose life had been so suddenly terminated.

During the service, Charles L. Lewis, who had been associated with the deceased in musical work, sang Brackett's composition, "Oh, Eyes That Are Weary," accompanied by Mrs. Lewis. A wealth of beautiful floral tributes were extended in sympathy by the company with which Mr. Dunham was employed in New York, and from relatives and friends.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being Erwin Leland and James Simpson, of this city; Albert Hammond, J. E. Skiff and Lewis Bond, of New York, and John Wilcox, of Princeton.

BUDGET APPROVED BY CITY COUNCIL

Public Hearing Will Be Held to Ascertain Public Sentiment on Items.

ECONOMY PRACTICED

Mayor Comments on the Drawing of the Budget—Citizens Invited to Attend Session When Each Department Expense is Explained.

Following the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night the councilmen met in executive session with Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, Treasurer William F. Arnold, and Tax Collector Townsend to go over the tentative budget with the finance committee and Mayor Calkins. The budget received the unanimous approval of all councilmen, and the arrangements for a public hearing on it were left to a committee of three consisting of Chairman Claybrook, of the finance committee, Corporation Counsel Reed and Mayor Calkins. The hearing will be held in the council chamber some day next week. The tentative budget will be handed over to the newspapers by the end of this week. The Mayor and finance committee have been working on it weekly since February, and believe that the taxpayers generally will approve their conclusions. Mayor Calkins in commenting on the budget said:

"Recognizing that people have had to economize in their personal affairs, the city officials have deemed it only fair, for the coming year at least, to practice strict economy in public affairs. New improvements and betterments have therefore been deferred, with the consent and co-operation of all Council committeemen and department heads. Total appropriations for 1915 are actually to aggregate less than 1914; not because less money is really needed, but because the Mayor and Council believe a real determined effort should be made to prevent a gradually increasing tax rate; and to do this it is imperative to stop spending for a period, and look about and take stock. The survey may point out the way. That is what is expected of it. In the meantime some of the things we want, and would like to have, should wait until we feel a little better able to afford them.

"At the public hearing the budget will be shown on a blackboard, and each item will be explained, and compared with previous expenditures for the same purposes. Any citizen present will be free to ask questions. The Mayor and Council propose trying to find out just how the people want their money spent. Not only economy, but publicity, is to be the watchword."

J., his bid of $84,556 was the lowest of twenty-one. He will have sixteen months from day of acceptance for completion of the building. FILING OF INDENTURE REVEALS A ROMANCE

Dr. Francis DuBois, Formerly of This City, to Wed in England April 19.

The filing of an indenture in the office of County Register Frank H. Smith, at Elizabeth, this morning, revealed an international romance, with a former Plainfielder as one of its principals. The covenant was executed by Miss Nora Helton Urquahart, daughter of Dr. Alexander Reed Urquahart, of Milnfield-Elgin, Scotland, and Dr. Francis DuBois, of Bournmouth, England, until four years ago a resident of this city.

An agreement is set forth in the indenture in which Miss Urquahart renounces all dower rights to the estate of Dr. DuBois in the event of his death after she had been made his wife on April 19. In lieu of the dower rights, she is to receive an annuity of $5,000. The indenture was drawn up and witnessed by Herbert D. Jameson, American vice-consul at London, England, and the address of both principals is given as Bournemouth.

The indenture was dated March 27, 1915, and in anticipation of the marriage of Miss Urquahart to Dr. DuBois on April 19 next. The latter resided in this city until he removed to England and was well-known throughout this section. He was a man of philanthropic tendencies and gave liberally to Muhlenberg Hospital and other institutions. It is believed that his meeting with Miss Urquahart came about as a result of association with her father in the course of practice, Dr. Urquahart being a prominent surgeon in Scotland. Much of Dr. DuBois' property is located in Plainfield and Union county, which explains why the indenture was filed at Elizabeth. Dr. Francis E. DuBois, of Belvidere avenue, is a nephew of the prospective bridegroom.

MAKES AN APPEAL FOR DELINQUENTS

S. T. Carter, Jr., Tells of Work at the Berkshire Industrial Farm.

MANY TRADES TAUGHT

Interesting Illustrated Lecture Before Monday Afternoon Club Shows How the Boys Make Good—Club Women Present Papers.

A large and interested audience attended the "miscellaneous topics department" meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club which was held in the parish house of the Congregational church, yesterday afternoon. The afternoon program was preceded by a business meeting during which the following papers were read: "Oue Responsibility to the Next Generation, Teaching of Self-control," Dr. Clara Krans; "Present Day Menaces (Alcoholism, etc.) and National Efforts to Combat Them," Mrs. Samuel T. Carter; "The Boy on the Street and Institutional Children—What We Are Doing for Them," Mrs. Frank D. Warren.

Following the addresses, Samuel T. Carter, Jr., who is connected with the Berkshire Farm for Delinquent Boys, gave a very interesting and instructive illustrated talk on what the farm is doing for the boys. Although the institution is a New York State one, many boys of other States are sent there indirectly through the courts. Though the institution is a Protestant one, there are a number of Catholic and Jewish boys kept there. Mr. Carter made an appeal for the delinquent boy of today, who is very often a misguided, misdirected lad and one who needs the aid, help and encouragment of the public. The Berkshire farm is doing this very thing, trying to give the boy the oportunity to make good, in an atmosphere of refinement and cleanliness.

The average age of the boy sent to the farm is from 12 to 16 years and their stay at the institution is from two and a half to four years. Nine out of ten cases that go there the boys are very keen and responsive and anxious to make good. The competition between them is extraordinary, and within a very short time many of them are entirely trustworthy and are left in charge of private offices and other work. They realize that the officers in charge have put this trust in them and dependent upon them to show what they are made of. The boys evince an unusual fondness for animals and gardening. Each one is given a plot of ground wherein he grows what he chooses and competes in the annual prizes given by the authorities. The farm has 400 acres of tillable land, 1,500 feet above the sea level. Beside gardening the boys engage in blacksmithing, printing, flower planting and dairy business. Sports form an important part of the curiculum, many expert teams being put out in the following: Hockey, football, basketball and baseball. They also have a magnificent track team.

Mr. Carter quoted a number of instances where the boy came to the farm a pronounced thief, absolutely opposed to obey, and then the slow change day in and day out until by the time he is ready to leave the institution, he is an entirely different boy. As a rule, the majority of them are very responsive and anxious for a chance to make good.

"Although an institution can never replace a home, the former will have to exist until the homes of the drunken father and mother are made bright for the boy," said Mr. Carter. "The environment of the boy has much to do with their after life."

BOY SHARPSHOOTERS USE CAT AS TARGET

Then Offer to Produce Carcass to Show Judge "the Good Job They Did."

Charged with shooting cats and using the carcasses for vivisection purposes, Clinton Berrien, of Madison avenue, and John Cottrell, of West Sixth street, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, neighbors headed by Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, local agent for the S. P. C. A., appearing as complainants. Berrien admitted his culpability in both counts, but Cottrell denied having a hand in the "butchering." After a heart-to-heart talk Judge DeMeza suspended sentence in both cases.

According to Mrs. James Fleming, a neighbor of Berrien's the accused youths last night indulged in a little target practise and during the early hours of the evening sent four .22 calibre balls through the skull of a family pet of the Fleming's. Berrien admitted that his companion and himself both owned rifles and that they had "given the feline a respectable burial" after the slaughter. Judge DeMeza admonished the defendants for cruelty, but Berrien took exception to this statement and offered to "dig up the dead cat" and bring it into court to show that he "had done a good job with his gun." He further stated that Patrolmon Kelley, who arrested him, had complimented him on his markmanship. This Kelley admitted, adding that he would be willing to recommend Berrien to play the role of a "Pied-Piper" if the city should ever decide to rid itself of the felines which Judge DeMeza designated as "common nuisances."

A number of complaints have been received by the police regarding the laboratory said to be conducted by Berrien in his basement. This, if true, is a direct violation of the State laws. Berrien pleaded ignorance and promised to dismantle his operating den. Berrien admitted that he had experimented on a number of cats which he had decided were "public nuisances," but added that his work was done "for the good of humanity rather than with the object of torturing the dumb beasts."

"I'm not personally in favor of vivisection,' said Berrien, "but my notebooks will show that my dissecting has been done without pain to the cats and the results speak for themselves."

HIS ROMANTIC DREAMS LANDED HIM IN COURT

"You made me love you, I didn't want to do it." So sayeth George Zeller, of Lane avenue, today, after a mail flirtation that landed him in the city police court, this morning. George received a letter from an endearing young miss who signed herself "L. McGowan." In the communications the feminine admirer set George's heart afire with glowing love passages and pleaded with him to "leave his happy home" and meet her at Grant avenue and West Sixth street. George was unable to keep the date, hence the receipt of a second plea.

This love note carried twenty great big kisses and among other things "said that he was the 'best-est' man in the world and 'you're just the boy for me'." Inspired by the tone of the communication, George set out on a hunt for his admirer and was told that she worked in the telephone office on East Fourth street.

After he had approached two pretty "hello' misses on successive nights George's love story reached a sad climax, Sergeant Maurice Higgins stepping in with a summons for Zeller to take Judge DeMeza into his confidence. In the police court, this morning, George's 'great big beautiful doll" failed to appear, but in her stead two attractive misses from the telephone office played the role of complanants. George admitted approaching them, but, explained his actions by saying that the letters were the cause, he being bent on finding the heartbreaker who had written to him. Judge DeMeza reprimanded the youth for his actions and after giving him to understand that he was the victim of a practical joker, he suspended sentence.

SHORT BLOCKADE ON C. R. R.

The Reading express, passing through this city shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, was stalled for forty minutes near the Liberty street bridge, in the West End, because of a broken "shoe," thus holding up two other passenger trains for a considerable time. An emergency locomotive from the Dunellen roundhouse was sent for to haul the disabled train into the Jersey City terminal, but by the time it had arrived at the scene of the trouble, the broken part had been repaired.

PLAN WARSAW ATTACK

Von Hindenberg Said to Have Asked for 300,000 Men—Ossowiec Bombarded Inffectively for Ten Hours by Germans.

Washington, April 13—President Wilson admitted today that he had received word from the Vatican that Pope Benedict was ready to co-operate with him in re-establishing peace in Europe. The President declined to comment on the offer or whether he had made reply to it. The suggestion was entirely informal, it was learned, and came through several sources in an unofficial manner.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS DISCUSS PROBLEMS

Conference of Sunday School Superintendents Held in This City.

The Plainfield Sunday School Superintendents' Association held a conference at the First Presbyterian church last night, the program including addresses, singing and devotional exercises. The chief speakers of the meeting were Edward W. Dunham, superintendent of the Third Presbyterian church Sunday school, of Trenton, and treasurer of the New Jersey Sunday School Association, and Edward W. Cooper, superintendent of the South Orange M. E. Church Sunday School and former president of the New eJrsey Sunday School Association.

Both speakers dwelt upon the subject of "Children's Day," the former giving some practical suggestions as to the order of service on that occasion, and endorsed the plan of children's processionals. Mr. Cooper's topic was "The Program," and he gave valuable hints regarding the laying out of the program for Children's Day, so it is make it as attractive and interesting as possible. A round table was also formed in which there was a general discussion regarding Children's Day.

Three problems were also discussed. They were (1) What is the best time for a Sunday school session? (2) how to build up an adult class? and (3) how can membership be retained? Miss Etta Raybert, soprano soloist of Trinity Reformed church, rendered two solos, and the audience joined in the chorus. Rev. Dr. Chrles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, had charge of the devotional services.

ITALIAN DRAWS A KNIFE ON AUSTRIAN

Joseph Lawrence Tries to Give Demonstration of a Real Fight.

There has been so much general talk of late of the possibility of Italy entering the European war on the side of the Allies, an Italian, Joseph Lawrence, 35 years old, a laborer employed in the construction of the borough's sewerage system, thought he would demonstrate to the loungers at the laborers' camp on Jackson avenue and Third street, how easily Italy would lick the Austrians.

So he drew a knife and approaching an Austrian, who answers to the name of Tony Beiger, he said "Come on and fight," and with those words he flashed a knife which he drew slashingingly into Tony's heavy overshirt. Fortunately the knife never even scratched Tony. It was also very fortunate that Tony was a better runner than the son of Italy or otherwise Tony might have been mortally wounded.

The Italian was lodged in the borough jail, the arrest having been made by Marshals Owen Mohan and W. H. Snyder on a warrant sworn out by Tony. When arraigned before Recorder Campbell in the Borough Hall this morning, the Italian was fined $20, which was paid.

The reception is given by the Epworth League of the church. The committee in charge consists of Mrs. Firman H. Gise, chairman; Mrs. H. S. Townley and Miss Lilla Stites. An attractive musical program has been arranged.

ITALIAN FINED $5.

Daniel Gidia, the commissary of the camp on Jackson avenue, where the sewer laborers board, was fined $5 by Recorder David S. Campbell, in the Borough Hall, yesterday afternoon, on a charge of violating section 4 of the borough ordinance, by offering beer for sale. The complaining witness was the complainant in the slashing case, Tony Beiger, and not Joseph M. Maier, the local wholesale liquor dealer, as stated in last evening's paper. Mr. Maier did not know anything about the case until after it had been tried. The court in fining Gidia severely reprimanded him and warned him that he would be sent to New Brunswick if the offense was repeated.

ANOTHER SEWER CAVEIN.

Another laborer was a victim of a cavein of the sewer trench yesterday morning. This time the victim was completely covered by the earth. He was quickly dug out, however, and apeared to be little the worse for his experience as he continued his work of the day. The cavein occurred in front of the residence of William Brokaw, on Dunellen avenue, towards which place a 7 foot trench had been dug for the laying of latteral pipe for house connections. The laborer was in this trench.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its apppearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—Adv.

Better yet, you might send some one out-of-town a subscription to receive The Daily Press every day at the rate of 10 cents a week or $5.00 a year.

HELMET GIRDED MEN FIGHT SMOKE

New York Adds Rescue Company to Fire Department.

The establishment of Rescue Company No. 1 in the fire department of New York city marks a new departure in fire and smoke fighting work that will spread to other cities. The men enter subcellars filled with highly carbonated smoke, ammonia fumes, chemical gases; bore their way deep into the holds of burning ships and quench fires before they have gained headway.

ONE OF NEW YORK'S NEW "SMOKE FIGHTERS."

They are able to do this by reason of smoke helmets containing sufficient oxygen to furnish proper air for breathing for the space of an hour and a half. Telephone attachments to the headgear enable the officers to report to chiefs on the sidewalk.

ONE "OUT OF WORK'S" PLAN.

Paraded Up and Down Broadway With Sign In His Hat.

With the opening of spring it is hoped by the federal, state and municipal authorities that the gravity of the unemployment problem, which proved so serious in the past winter, will be lessened. All of the big cities have their great bodies of men seeking work, although not many of the unemployed have imitated the young draftsman who paraded Broadway, New York, with a sign affixed to his hat: "I Need a Job Badly. Mech. Draughtsman Is My Trade."

"LOOKING FOR WORK" IN NEW YORK.

In a recent address in Chicago an official of the United States department of labor, in explaining the plan by which that department in co-operation with other departments hopes to minimize unemployment and at the same time relieve the labor situation in the rural districts, estimated that not 25 per cent of the men needed in the wheat belt at harvest time could find employment there at other times.

SUNDAY IN PATERSON.

Billy Sunday has been the object of a lot of criticism from the New York papers, the reporters covering his meetings in Paterson apparently having been given instructions to misrepresent what he is doing. It is therefore interesting to learn from a Paterson paper the truth about the success of his campaign thus far in the silk city. Says the Morning Call editorially:

Not since the 20,000 people gathered around the Erie depot on the evening that James G. Blaine passed through Paterson; nor since the 18,000 gathered at Colt's hill to hear William J. Bryan speak, has there been seen such a crowd together in this city as there was at the Tabernacle on Thursday night to see and hear the wonderful Billy Sunday. We do not believe there is any exaggeration in the Call reporters' figures stating that the audience in the building numbered 10,000 and that at least 6,000 more could not get in. They were turning them away a little after seven o'clock and there was a solid procession reaching to Main street and every car was packed to the doors. When it was over, a little after nine o'clock, every car coming down Broadway was filled to more than its capacity. At the same time there were thousands of people walking on the sidewalks and in the middle of the street. All the large autobuses that were running were also crowded. We do not remember ever seeing such a big crowd of people in Broadway or any other street of this city. Does not this give the lie to those who have been saying that Mr. Sunday had met a frost in Paterson? This wonderful little man has hardly commenced his campaign. The hitting the trail process has not yet been initiated. When that begins look out! If the old Nick does not take alarm and skedaddle out of town as fast as he can go then it will be a wonder. And about that time the Tabernacle, large as it is, will not be half big enough to hold the crowd. We guess that Billy Sunday is right when he says that he has got the devil on the run.

Senator Clapp's address last night on the suffrage question has served to again stir up a lot of discussion on the topic. While the Press believes that the vote should be extended to those women that want it, on the theory that every person of age and in their right mind should be entitled to the suffrage, it must be admitted that the results in Chicago, as in other parts of the country do not bring a lot of comfort to those who have believed that the women voters would take a different view of politics and candidates from that of the man. The Pittsburg Leader, which is one of the leading pro-suffrage newspapers of the country, sums up the situation when it says that voting will get the woman voter no more than it has brought to the man citizen, which is nothing. It is the use she makes of the ballot that will tell. If the woman voter in Illinois is going to travel no further than the feet of her male fellow citizen lead her, as in the Chicago election, she will stand much in need of education.

Neither the people of the United States in particular nor the white nations in general are represented by the heavy and big-fisted Kansan who is now the champion of the prize ring, and it will be matter of small consequence if he, like his dark-skinned predecessor, should now plunge into vicious pursuits and waste his strength in riotous living; but for his own sake it is to be hoped that he will voluntarily put a check rein upon himself and at least not become a fugitive from justice forced into exile from the land of his birth.

Everyone is willing to swat the fly when he puts in appearance, but think how much more effective it would be to see that all filth is cleaned up and that the garbage can is kept tightly sealed now, so that there will not be so many flies to swat.

King Fan is gradually coming into his own. The Federal League is under way, and there will be more local interest in the games in that league this year because of the presence of one of the teams in Newark.

After reading the account of the German spy system in the Saturday Evening Post, we are almost led to suspect some of the Germans we meet in every day life.

MOOSE WILL INSTALL OFFICERS MONDAY NIGHT

The installation of officers of the Loyal Order of Moose, which was scheduled to take place at the meeting last night, was postponed until a special meeting which will be called for next Monday night, because of the large amount of business at last night's meeting. The committee in charge of the carnival, which will be held during the week of May 17, reported progress and many new and classy attractions have been booked.

It was decided not to enter a representative baseball team in the Moose League organized last Sunday at Elizabeth. A team will be formed, however, and will play independent ball on Saturdays and Sundays. A committee, consisting of the following members, was appointed to take charge of the matter: Edward Conklin, Amos Stites, Edward Dahl and Victor Lawton. Several applications were received and two accepted last night.

BOY TRAIN JUMPER HAS LEG AMPUTATED

William Kessler, an eighteen-year old boy, whose home is at 1552 Avenue D, Bayonne, fell from the Lehigh Valley train near South Plainfield this morning and received injuries that almost caused his death. He was hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital, where the physicians found it necessary to amputate the left leg below the knee. The youth also was badly lacerated about the head and body. His condition this afternoon was reported as being favorable.

The facts of the accident have not been made known but it is believed that Kessler was jolted from a freight car while stealing a ride.

CRAIGIELEA LODGE GIVE A SOCIAL AND ENTERTAINMENT

A dime social was held last evening by Craigielea Lodge, Daughters of Scotia Auxiliary to Clan MacKenzie, Order of Scottish Clans, at the lodge rooms, 109 Park avenue. Many members and guests were present from suburban towns and enjoyed an excellent program of enterment.

Among the entertainers were: James Jamison, tenor; Miss Doig, who recited, and Mr. Bennett, the local acrobat. Dancing was indulged in until a late hour. At midnight a collation was served.

WILL DELIVER LECTURE.

Alexander Johnson, director of the department of extension at the Vineland Training School, will deliver a lecture in the auditorium of the Plainfield High School Thursday night.

MANY YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY POST LENTEN DANCE

One hundred and fifty young people of this city and borough enjoyed the post-lenten dance given in Debele's Hall last night. The grand march was led by Miss Edith Broucher, of Raritan, and James O'Neil, of this city. Dancing was enjoyed until 12 o'clock, music being furnished by Paroubek, Squires and Sunr's orchestra, of this city. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

The following young people were on the committee having charge of the affair: Miss Frances Newman, Miss Elizabeth Day, Mrs. Harry Mattis, Mrs. Godfrey, Mrs. Edward Conshay, Jr., Jack Connoly, George Howe, Henry Mattis and George Giddis. The patronesses were Mrs. James E. Bailey, Mrs. Hillaire Blatz, Mrs. Alfred LaRock, Mrs. Edward Moraller, Mrs. B. A. Paroubek, Miss M. Byrne and Mrs. Edward Conshay, Jr.

INSTRUCTION GIVEN TO COMPANY K IN GUARD DUTY

The weekly drill at Company K. last night consisted of guard duty, that of posting and relieving guards. There will be no drill next Monday night because of rifle examinations. Tonight Lieutenant A. R. Phillips and two non-commissioned officers will go to Somerville and act as scorers for the Company M tests which are being given this week. Tomorrow night, Lieutenant J. B. Conkling, Sergeant George B. Howell and Corporal M. E. Glover will go to Somerville for the same purpose.

On the nights when the local company has its qualification tests one officer and two non-commissioned men from Company M will act as scorers.

The local boy, who is well known for his dancing ability, gave an exhibition of his specialty and drew a large amount of applause.

Several persons who witnessed the performance are trying to get him for a theatrical team.

Last year when the cotton market was at its lowest and the South was begging people to "Buy a Bale" we took advantage of the situation and made a contract with a large bedding concern in Louisville, Ky., for a year's supply. We received a shipment in February and juding from the way they sold at that time the present shipment won't last long. They are positively the best values we have ever seen in our experience of twenty years. We could readily sell them all at wholesale at the prices quoted, but we prefer to give our customers the benefit instead.

"I am determined to put a stop to recklessness on the part of local taxi-cab drivers and the next man who comes before me is going to be made an example of," said Judge DeMeza, in the city court, this morning, in dismissing a charge against Chris Mobus, an employe of the Plainfield Cab Company.

"I was coming down Front street last night and saw you driving your machine wide open,' said the judge. "I am getting tired of seeing you men at the railroad station taking the corners on two wheels and attempting to break speed records on our crowded streets. The next time you or any other driver comes before me you can expect to have your license revoked for a period of one year."

The driver admitted to have been travelling thirty-two miles an hour.

ASK FOR BETTER POLICE SERVICE

Residents of West Third Street Complain of Boys' Actions to Council.

$11,500 FOR LIBRARY

Bonds of Commissioners Are Filed and Appointments Are Approved —Weldon Contracting Co. Awarded Contract for Street Work.

Business chiefly of minor importance occupied the attention of the Common Council at its adjourned meeting last night. It was expected that the appointment of additional policemen would be made, and that the proposed amendment to the police ordinance would be presented, but this was deferred to April 20, to which time another adjournment was taken at the request of Mr. Babcock, chairman of the police committee.

Samuel Taub, in a communication, asked for better police protection on West Third street, in the neighborhood of Plainfield avenue, complaining of the acts of boys, who, he said, recently threw stones at Rabbi Canter, who admonished them for wrongdoing. The matter was referred.

The bonds of Charles C. Randolph, Elias H. Bird and W. H. Abbott, as street assessment commissioners, were filed, and a resolution offered by Mr. Blatz and adopted, confirmed the appointment of Armstrong Mulford, Charles L. Kling and H. C. VanEmburgh as sewer assessment commissioners.

The directors of the Plainfield Public Library certified to the Council that it would need $11,500 for the coming year for the maintenance of the library and reading room. This was referred to the finance committee.

The council received an invitation to attend a mass meeting to be given in Newark the last of the month under the auspices of the National Association for the Study and Education of Exceptional Children. A communication from the Monday Afternoon Club, urging the adoption of a "safe and sane" Fourth of July ordinance, which the city now has, was received and filed and a copy of it was directed to be sent to Police Chief P. S. Kiely.

Upon the recommendation of Councilman Francis J. Blatz, Frank Caruso's request for permission to erect a revolving barber pole on West Front street was refused.

A resolution by Mrs. Blatz, which was adopted, authorized the purchase of a portable pumping engine from the J. H. McGowan Company, of New York, as an auxiliary aid in the sewer work. The engine will cost $475, and will have a capacity of 400 gallons per minute. It will be delivered inside of forty days.

Another resolution by Mr. Blatz, which was adopted, referred to the street committee, the communication from the Board of Freeholders regarding the improvement of Grove street in connection with the building of a new bridge. Mr. Blatz explained that the committee desires to secure a few rights of way before recommending further action.

The Weldon Contracting Company, of Rahway, was awarded the contract for the permanent improvement of West Third street, according to an ordinance recently adopted. Its bid was $4,635.10, which was nearly $1,100 lower than the next lowest bid.

The Thompson Auto Company was granted permission to install a 500-gallon tank beneath the sidewalk in front of its place of business on Park avenue for the storage of gasoline, and Mary F. Reid and John Northern were granted licenses to conduct employment agencies upon the payment of the usual fee.

REFUTE POINTS MADE BY ANTIS

government. If the refinement of womanhood can't stand the activities of politics then there is something wrong with the American standard. If the polls are not a fit place for women they are not a fit place for men. We have to raise the standard of manhood rather than lower the standard of womanhood and that's what we will be doing by enfranchising women. I just have enough faith in American manhood to make myself believe that he will make the poling places fit for women.

"What will women do if she gets the vote? When they brought in our United States Constitution men never though they would have a vote on many issue for the welfare and prosperity of the country. Therein lies the answer. We don't know what women will do until she gets an opportunity. Out of that in which there is good, there must come good; and out of that in which there is bad there must come bad."

Throughout the evening, during intervals between speeches, Stephen H. Haff rendered a number of piano elections. Under the direction of Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite, the following women acted as ushers: Miss Hope Ivins, Miss Audrey Eaton, Mrs. E. Haliday, Mrs. Lamar VanSyckle, Mrs. Henry C. White, Miss Louise Booth, Miss May Rodman and Mrs. W. M. Powers.

For forty minutes preceding Senator Clapp's talk the audience was entertained with the novel idea of staging living models as cartoons, this being one of the features of the evening's program. Miss Helen Hyde, an anti-suffrage worker, volunteered her services as a representative of the opposing faction and in the last cartoon she appeared astride a hobby horse.

The first cartoon, entitled "Representative Government," showed Albert Zerega playing the role of a voter; his wife, Mrs. F. O. Ball; mother, Mrs. C. C. Wheeler; daughters, Miss M. Townsend and Miss Helen Hyde; aunty, Miss Eva Ward. The question was, "If you have to represent your family, who represents you?" The second question, "Is this a square deal?" was portrayed by Miss M. Townsend, C. C. Wheeler and Thomas Ball. The third, "His Master's Voice," was given by D. Fred Aungst, Mrs. F. O. Ball and C. C. Wheeler.

Germany has failed to pay to Bulgaria the portion of the loan she agreed to remit on April 1, according to a Sofia despatch to the Petit Parisien, which says it is believed Germany distrusts the Bulgarian attitude.

Berlin, April 13—The official war statement today says:

"French troops made attacks Monday near Berry au Bac and between the Meuse and Moselle near Maicery, east of Verdun near Marcheville, southeast of Maicery, on the Maicery-Marcheville front, and south of Hartsmannsweiler Kopf. They were everywhere repulsed.

"German aviators dropped numerous bombs upon Poperhinghe, Hazebrouck and Cassel which are occupied by the English. Northeast of Suippes the enemy again used projectiles developing asphyxiating gas.

"In Priest Wald there has been day and night fighting with the Germans slowly gaining ground.

"On the eastern front the situation is unchanged."

Rome, April 13—King Victor Emmanuel and ex-Premier Sonniwo, who holds the portfolio of foreign affairs in the present cabinet, conferred yesterday afternoon for an hour and a half with members of both the previous and present cabinets. Beyond an admission that the cabinet council had under consideration military measures nothing of the nature of the discussion was divulged.

WHIRLWIND PACE URGED FOR RACE

Contestants Given Timely Tips on Winning Costless Frisco Trips.

It is the practice of many papers to have a daily chat with their readers through the editorial columns, offering felicitation for the good things done by their patrons. This, however, is a brief "heart-to-heart" talk with the contestants in the Press' PanamaPacific Tour Contest, and the friends who have aided and who will further help them in the quest of votes.

Today each contestant is on the threshold of the last lap in the race. There are only four days in the contest to cram all the votes you can secure. It is up to you to realize every promise and get every possible available subscription. You cannot have too many votes. Votes on subscriptions are the only ones that will help you from now on.

There is just one simple thing for each contestant to do who wishes to wind up her campaign with a whirlwind finish and secure every possible subscription. Start today. Delays are dangerous. The winners will be those who keep everlastingly at it. The tour department has urged the candidates to do their very best right along, but now it wishes to lay special stress on the final necessity of looking everything in the face and seeing where it will be necessary to try hard, extra hard, as it is the last week of the contest, so that if you are to be returned a winner nothing will be left undone on your behalf.

Be confident, and let others see that you are confident, but not oversanguine to the point of having fully determined that no further effort from you is needed. Every opportunity that exists will be taken advantage of by "the live wires" now, at once, today. Four days from today the votes will all be in and the race remains with you, whether you will be the winner in your district or not. This is the admonition of the Press to the women in the race, now that the final lap of the race is at hand.

We anticipate a deluge of vote during the closing hours and would request candidates who desire information in regard to expiration dates, addresses, etc., of subscribers to get it straightened out before the final hours of the contest, as the contest department will be too busy issuing special coupons to look up this information for them.

Wise candidates will heed the advice given above and report their subscriptions early and take away the special coupons to be deposited later. In so doing the valuable hours nearing the close can be devoted to clearing up the few remaining subscriptions obtainable only at this time.

Candidates will be required to deposit their special coupons themselves and not leave it to the contest department.

The Contest Manager takes this opportunity of expressing his satisfaction with the exhibition of kindly feeling toward each other that has characterized the bearing of the candidates, showing that, while not receding an inch in the amount of good-natured rivalry that has been consistently maintained, they are not going to allow any showing of animosity to develop.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual congregational meeting of Trinity Reformed church will be held tomorrow evening, when elders and deacons will be elected. The members of the Consistory whose terms expire are: Elders, Robert Clark, Jr., Henry E. Gayle and Theodore Van Zandt. An elder will also be elected to fill the unexpired term of Albert L. Force, who died recently; deacons, Alfred K. Willett; William R. Kriney, Arthur B. Cole.

to combat all that springs from the lust and greed of man. The woman has been assigned to the special guardianship of the home and if you want her to do her work thoroughly and efficiently you have to supply her with the proper weapon for protection, and that's the ballot. You say she doesn't need the ballot because she can do her part by exerting an influence over the father, son and brother who casts a vote. Therefore if you believe that she is competent to influence the voter in the proper way you cannot deny that she is competent to vote herself. If you believe that politicians should be influenced by a third party on what grounds can you withhold the ballot from women?

"It has been said that too great a sacrifice of time would be necessitated if women would prepare themselves to vote intelligently. Yet you admit that they are well enough versed at the present time to influence the ballot caster. Would it take any more time for them to proper equip themselves with voting knowledge?

"Another objection has been advanced in the argument that voting would detract from and in time destroy the refinement of our women. We want this refinement but we want it as a vitalizing force in our Initial Scholastic Tilt a Notable Victory for P. H. S.

The Plainfield High School baseball team opened its scholastic season yesterday afternoon, with a victory over High Bridge High School, on Parker Field, by the score of 4 to 0. Both teams put up a good game of ball, although the High Bridge boys were weak at the bat, being able to score but two singles off Denny's delivery. Batting when hits meant runs won the game for Plainfield. The feature of the game was a beautiful three-base clout by Benny Rosenson, the ball hitting the left field fence. He also clouted the ball for a two bagger between left and center field. O'Leary knocked out a two-base hit in the fifth inning, but was left on third base when the next two men were thrown out at first.

Only one High Bridge man reached second base. This was in the second inning when McGinley hit safely and attempted to steal second. O'Leary muffed Apgar's throw, but the next man hit a roller to Denny and died at first, retiring the side. The only other hit of the game for High Bridge came in the ninth inning with two men down. Doland hit over shortstop for a single, but Brant forced him at second and ended the game.

LUTHMAN TAKES ODD ROLL IN MATCH WITH VOORHEES

"Art" Voorhees and Ernest Luthman had a hot bowling match on the Somerset street alleys last night, the latter taking six out of ten games, making the eleventh unnecessary for a decision. The winner had a little the better of his opponent all the way through, and rolled better scores when he needed a game to tie up or get into the lead. He spilled a total of 1,965, which gives him an aveage of 196.5 per game. Voorhees scored at total of 1,318, for an average of 184.1.

Luthman's four best scores were 225, 243, 226 and 200, while Voorhees made a 213 and 203. The results follow:

Luthman, 156, 225, 164, 199, 243, 189, 199, 226 164 200.

Voorhees 160, 190, 213, 197, 173, 190, 173, 203, 191 161.

FRANK BRUGGY IS STILL STICKING WITH BRAVES

Frank Bruggy of Elizabeth, who played with the Plainfield baseball team several years ago, is still with the Boston Braves, and from present indications, it looks as if he might preliminary workouts Bruggy made a fine showing, and pleased Manager Stallings. When the Boston Club arrived in New York Sunday he visited his home, but is now again in Boston with his teammates.

"Flick" Luyster, who played in this city the same time as Bruggy, has not yet signed his contract with the Lawrence Club, and is holding out for a better offer. Luyster was one of the best players on the Lawrence team last year, and his playing was a big factor in winning the pennant.

THOMAS M'CARTY ELECTED OFFICER OF MOOSE LEAGUE

Thomas McCarty, of this city, was elected vice-president of the Moose Baseball League for the coming season at a meeting held Sunday. The president is Oscar DeHart, of Elizabeth. The league will probably open on May 2. There will be a meeting of the new officials at Jersey City next Sunday to make complete arrangements and form a schedule. There will probably be eight teams on the circuit.

The lodges represented at the meeting were Elizabeth, Plainfield, Jersey City, Orange and Rahway, while Union Hill, Hoboken, Newark and New Brunswick will probably be represented.

GOLF CHAMPS ON LINKS AT PINEHURST

The fifth north and south amateur golf championship at Pinehurst, N. C., was featured by bad playing on the part of almost all the stars who participated. The pictures show, at the top, Ouimet driving off from the first tee, left to right: Herreshoff, Ouimet, Wilson and Ross going to the seventeenth hole. All have their clubs in their hands.

DECORATION DAY CYCLE RACES OFF

Plainfield Motorcycle Club Decides Not to Compete With Brooklyn Organization.

The Plainfield Motorcycle Club will not hold its annual twenty-five mile handicap road race this year, as has been the custom for the past five years, according to Jack Horner. The race, which has always received entrants from all over the metropolitan district, has been most popular every year, and will undoubtedly be missed.

The reason for the calling off of the race is that a Brooklyn organization applied for a sanction for a road race on Decoration Day before the local club, and received it. Plainfield also obtained its regular sanction, but with a similar race on in Brooklyn, one that would be staged in this city would undoubtedly prove a failure. Plainfield is in the "met" district, and the local club has always counted on entrance fees from out-of-town riders to help make the affair a success. While there are many local riders who would compete, there are not enough to make the event a success so it has been put off.

Although the twenty-nve mile classic has been put off the list, the local club has plans for local races to take place on Decoration Day, Monday. It includes short distance bicycle races and there may also be a few motorcycle events. Features such as a slow motorcycle race, motor-paced bicycle races or hill climbing contests may be put on the schedule, which would make an interesting program. Nothing definite has been settled on the matter as yet, but it will probably be taken up at the next meeting.

MAJOR WILLIAM B. MARTIN IS RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT

Major William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, a member of the Tyrian bowling team, champions of the Masonic League, has been reelected president for next year. Arrangements are being made for a dinner to be given in honor of the "champs," but no date has yet been set.

No prizes were offered this year, but next year every member of the winning team will get a gold medal and the Masonic trophy. Plainfield was represented this year by two teams, from the Anchor and Jerusalem Lodges.

ANOTHER ONE-MAN MATCH.

Walter "Quaker" Vail, of the Elks' bowling team, has challenged Art Voorhees, of the borough, to another match of eleven games, to be played on the Somerset street alleys. Voorhees defeated Vail a short time ago. No date has been set for the match.

N. P. H. S.-CLINTON GO BOOKED FOR HYDE OVAL

North Plainfield is scheduled to play Clinton H. S. at Hyde Oval tomorrow afternoon. The game was originally booked to be played at Clinton, but the first game there will probably be arranged for some time in June.

The Clinton boys have played several games already this season, and will undoubtedly give the boroughites a good run. Ernest Stahl will probably do the pitching. The teams will probably line-up as follows:

N. P. H. S.—Hebert, lf; Van Deventer, cf; Dilts, ss; Townley, 3b; Van Mater, cf; Conroy, 2b; Mead, 1b; Smalley, c; Stahl, p.

C. H. S.—Knight, 2b; Bonnell, 1b; Voorhees, lf; Hann, cf; Tine, c; Smith, ss; Hackett, rf, 1b; Pferd, 3b; Gebhardt, p.

P. H. S. PLAY THIRD GAME ON PARKER FIELD

The first baseball game of the series between the Plainfield and Westfield High School nines, will take place on Parker Field tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. It will be the third go for the local team, and Westfield has played one.

Westfield lost its first game of the season, 6 to 4, to Kearny, and the Ninth street aggregation also dropped the initial encounter, 3 to 2. The teams will probably line-up as follows:

BOYS TO PARADE FOR BABY SHOW

Scouts Plan Big Demonstration to Create Interest in Exhibition.

ROUTE IS ANNOUNCED

Applications Received at Last Night's Meeting of Scout Council for Promotions—Scout Examiners Who Will Sit Tonight.

Final plans were made by the Boy Scout Council, at the Y. M. C. A., last evening, for the torchlight procession to be held to extend public interest in the "Baby Saving Show" now being held here. The date was fixed for Monday night and the following route was selected:

Assemble at 7:30 at City Park, troops forming with Troop 5's fife and drum corps at front and Troop 7's at rear with visiting troops in center of line. Right will rest on West Eighth street. Proceed to Arlington, to Fourth, to Plainfield avenue, to Third, to Spooner avenue, to Second, to Madison, to Front, to Duer, to Lincoln place, to Somerset, to Chatham, to Westervelt avenue, to Front, to Richmond, to East Second, to Berckman, to Third, to Watchung, to Front. Counter march on Front street past reviewing stand and form on Watchung avenue opposite Y. M. C. A. for award.

All the members of the council have been invited to be present at the point of review. Invitations have been extended to troops of neighboring cities to participate in the procession. In case of rain the parade will be held on the following evening. The suggestion of William M. Wherry, Jr., that the boys help this cause by means of a torchlight parade had the full endorsement of the council and an expression of thanks was made to Robert Fairbairn, of Westfield, for having donated the flag which will be competed for by the various local troops. The award will be given to the troop having the most effective device, transparency, costume or tableaux representing the purposes of the "Baby Saving Show." Some very interesting features have been promised for the parade.

Members of the council present last night were: First Vice-President T. A. Davis, who was in the chair, Second Vice-President L. M. Leek, George T. Leighs, F. E. Bach, F. K. Anderson, C. E. Bond, F. M. Genung, O. W. Smith, Dr. Henry M. Maxson, Paul R. Collier, First Deputy A. V. Searing, Jr., W. D. Murray and Dr. George T. Moore. Dr. Norman W. Currie was made the successor of J. W. Aughiltree, who recently moved from the city.

Applications were received from Howard Hall, troop 9, for promotion to first-class Scout, and Jack Faucett, troop 5, applied for examination in bird study. Columbus Day, October 12, was set aside as Boy Scout field day when the annual troop championship flag donated by Paul R. Collier will be competed for.

Arrangements were made whereby boys deserving promotion in Scoutcraft will have immediate attention by an examining board. The delay incidental to lack of examiners at sittings of the Court of Honor will be eliminated hereafter. Designations will be made on application to the Scout commissioner. Examination for first-class and merit badges will be held tonight in the First Presbyterian chapel.

Every other council meeting beginning with that of May 10 will be open to Scoutmasters and assistants for conference regarding problems in Scout work. The general subject next meeting night will be "Summer Hikes and Troop Problems."

Commissioner Allen E. Beals reported that through the interest of Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan the way was being cleared for the formation of a troop at South Plainfield, where Edward TenEyck is trying to organize patrols. South Plainfield was taken into the jurisdiction of the local council last night to facilitate this extension of the Scout movement.

Boy Scout examiners sitting as a Court of Honor tonight will be George T. Leighs, F. K. Anderson, L. M. Leek, F. E. Bach, William Abbie, Dr. N. W. Currie, F. M. Genung, Dr. Henry M. Maxson, C. E. Bond and Frederick A. Martin.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Motorcycle Club will be held in the clubrooms Thursday night of this week. A feed and social time will follow the business meeting.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

"In Marta of the Lowlands," which is to be shown at Proctor's Theater tomorrow afternoon and evening at all performances, is shown Mme. Kalich's supreme dramatic triumph. That gifted emotional actress portrays a role that will live forever as one of the greatest demonstrations of pantomimic art ever recorded on the screen. The play was written by Angel Guimera, the distinguished Spanish author, and, besides its powerful dramatic powers, is full of poetry and color which permeate the emotions and the very existence of the mountain people.

Marta is a beggar child, who is adopted by Sebastian, the wealthy landowner. Sebastian makes Marta his victim. He wishes to marry a wealthy woman, but at the same time retain his influence over Marta. He therefore arranges through Tomas, the hermit, to marry her to Manelich, a simple, untutored shepherd of the hills—a rough child of nature, who kills wolves with his hands and knows nothing of guile and deceit. The wedding is consummated, Manelich being under the impression that Marta loved him, and being truly in love with her. Later he learns he has been tricked, while Marta, who at first believed that Manelich had been bought with the master's gold to become her husband, finds her conclusion wrong, the honesty of his love compelling her own. Then come developments which makes the drama one of the most passionate, intense, trenchant character studies ever created.

Mme. Kalich makes Marta a patient sufferer, a tragic sufferer, indeed, as she bravely endures all the cruelty and indignities that are thrust upon her by the ruthless 'master."

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

In addition to "Cameo Kirby," the five-part Paramount feature at the Plainfield Theatre today, the patrons of this house will have the pleasure this afternoon and tonight of seeing the third episode of the serial film, "The Black Box." From the portions that have already been seen it is plainly evidentt, "The Black Box" will be the most successful picture of this kind that has yet been brought to this city.

The big feature at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow will be the five-part production, "The Conspiracy," based on the play of the same name. It is guaranteed to be a thriller, but not in a sense of melodrama or "blood and thunder." The house will be given over to the Belgian Relief Fund entertainment Thursday night, and the week's program of pictures will be rounded out Friday and Saturday with the special picture, "Cinderella," with charming Mary Pickford posing the title role. This film is now being shown in New York city at advanced prices, and is packing every theatre to capacity. The regular prices will prevail when it is shown here.

Advance Notice!

Is there Music, with its Joy and Love and Life in YOUR Home? If not, you are vitally interested in

This Unusual Announcement

Bought at forced sale for cash the name, good-will, patents, patterns and merchandise of the Henry and S. G. Lindeman Piano Company, including 612 Pianos and Player-Pianos, we begin Thursday, simultaneously in our two stores, New York and Philadelphia

A Sale of New Pianos and Player-Pianos

UNLIKE ANY OTHER

New York has been overrun with so many "syndicated sales" of pianos put into stores by outside ownership and management that we feel it necessary to say at the outset:

These pianos and player-pianos are owned absolutely by John Wanamaker, sold by John Wanamaker and guaranteed by John Wanamaker—the guarantee following each instrument into the home and remaining there.

We own the Lindeman factory, which has bought out the control of the Henry and S. G. Lindeman organization, as explained below. This factory on Eleventh Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, New York City, is open to visitors at all times. It occupies a large modern up-to-date efficient building thoroughly equipped for piano-making.

We own also the Emerson piano factory in Boston and the Schomacker piano factory in Philadelphia.

The making and selling of pianos is a fixed part of the Wanamaker business.

Protecting the Fine Old Lindeman Name

Henry Lindeman, the father and grandfather of the makers of these pianos, established his business in New York in 1836. The business continued under one ownership, one management and in one factory, producing more than a hundred thousand pianos, until 1900 when Henry & S. G. Lindeman set up a separate establishment.

In 1910 John Wanamaker took over the good-will, patents and patterns of the original company, Lindeman & Sons. And in 1914 Lindeman & Sons absorbed the Henry & S. G. Lindeman Company.

Thus is welded together under Wanamaker guidance all the Lindeman piano interests, protecting and preserving for all time this fine old piano name and product.

With the amalgamation, sixty Henry & S. G. Lindeman pianos, practically completed, came into our hands. These we placed on sale last Autumn. They sold immediately.

In addition came 612 Henry & S. G. Lindeman instruments in process of manufacture. These we completed in the Lindeman factory, getting the materials from manufacturers who supplied them to Henry & S. G. Lindeman, purchasing them at low prices because not usable for other purposes.

Producing the instruments in this way at very low cost, we now offer

At a Little More Than Half Price

The Henry & S. G. Lindeman Piano for as little as
$165

The Henry & S. G. Lindeman Player-Piano
for as little as

Payable a Small Sum Down and a Small Sum a Month

New York and community alone would no doubt quickly take into its homes all of these 612 instruments. Never before, that we know of, have pianos and player-pianos of such high quality been offered at prices so low. Yet we owe it to our customers in both cities to give equal chance to all, and so we open the sale simultaneously in our two stores.

Actually on Our New York Sales Floor

Thursday will be 245 of these instruments—New York's first allotment. See them. Count them. Examine them. Test them. Compare them with any instruments you choose. There is no mystery. Everything is open and above board. All the pianos are new, perfect, and splendid in tone. Any one will become a life-long friend in your home. But just because you live all your life with a piano and make it your friend you should choose it carefully.

There are nine styles of these Lindeman pianos—in mahogany, walnut and oak.

Four styles of player-pianos—in mahogany, walnut and oak.

"Standard" Action in the Players

The new 88-note model, of course, playing any roll of music.

The "Standard" is one of the actions that we use in our roll-of-honor pianos, when we do not use the Angelus. It is simple in construction, strongly built, exceptionally flexible, easy of control, and gives the highest shades of phrasing.

Deliveries Begin at Once

No need to wait. The actual piano you select goes into your home at once—bringing with it music and joy and love and life.

Young people stay home when there is music there.
Old people stay young.
Everybody stays happy.

FREDERICK PAULDING DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

Noted Actor Gives Recital on Oliver Goldsmith and Thomas Moore.

Frederick Paulding, who delighted local Shakespeare lovers two months ago with a recital of "Hamlet," at the Columbus Club, returned last night and gave two addresses, one on Oliver Goldsmith and one on Thomas Moore. A brief history of the life or each man, their work, and a review of several poems composed the program of the evening.

In speaking of Oliver Goldsmith, the speaker said it was doubtful if the world would have ever known him if it had not been for the bulldog tenacity of Johnson to clear the way for his friend. "English character, English scenes, tinted with Irish wit, tender spirit, and gentle sadness like a smile dipped in tears, are characteristics of his works," said the speaker. "Goldsmith was born in Ireland in 1728, son of an Irish clergyman, and although his parents destined him for the church, he showed no inclination for it as his lifework. He was a cheerful and acknowledged failure in every line of work he attempted, and was always in debt. In 1766 he established his fame with 'The Vicar of Wakefield,' and from then on his renown was a fact. In 1774 he died in poverty and debt, but, nevertheless, universally loved.

"Five years after the death of Goldsmith, Thomas Moore was born, and from the earliest days of his boyhood he was imbued with poetry and imagination. At the early age of fourteen his first sonnet was published in a London magazine. Moore is called by many a lyric poet. Many of his poems are patriotic, and there is a fervor, pathos and melody of diction, interspersed with Irish verse, passion, uplift and loyalty. One of the remarkably fine things in Moore's life was his great friendship with Byron, although these men were absolutely different in character, each was attracted by the genius of the other. Byron's "Tom Moore" depicts the great love the former had for his friend. At the age of sixty-five Moore died."

Mr. Paulding reviewed several of the lesser known poems and works of these poets, among them being the following: Goldsmith, "Male Attitude Toward Poetry," "A Citizen of the World," "Deserted Village" and "She Stoops to Conquer;" Moore, "The Meeting of the Waters," "A Cry for His Country," "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," "Love's Young Dream" and "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Hall.,'

Mr. Paulding is an unusually fine speaker, holding the attention of his audience all throughout the evening. His appearances in Plainfield are treats for all lovers of fine literature.

CHAPTER XX.

I Indulge in Plain Language.

I TOOK them over the castle—that is, a part of the castle. Mrs. Titus would not climb stairs. She confessed to panting, but drew the line at anything more exhausting. I fear I was too palpably relieved when she declined to go higher than the second story.

"It isn't necessary, Mr. Smart," she said sweetly, "to go into the history of the wretched Rothhoefens, as a Cook's interpreter might do. You see, I know the castle quite well, and I have had all the late news from my daughter."

"Of course," I agreed. "Stupid of me not to remember that you are descended from"—

"Mother isn't half as stuck up about it as you might think, Mr. Smart," interrupted Jasper junior glibly. "She prefers to let people think her ancestors were Dutch instead of merely German. Dutch ancestors are the proper thing in Jew York."

"Japple," said his mother severely, "how often must I caution you not to speak of New York as Jew York? Some day you will say it to a Jew. One can't be too careful. Heaven alone knows when one is in the presence of a Jew in these days."

"Oh, I'm not Hebraic!" said I quickly. "My ancestors were Dutch. They came over with the original skin grafters."

She looked puzzled for a moment. The countess laughed. Then Jasper saw the point. Colingraft was the last to see it, and then it was too late for him to smile.

We had tea in the loggia, and I dined with the family in the countess' apartment at 8 that night. I think Mrs. Titus was rather favorably impressed when she beheld me in my own raiment. Britton had smoothed out my evening clothes until they almost shone, and I managed to carry myself with unusual buoyancy.

Everything went very well that evening. We were all in fine humor, and the dinner was an excellent one. I perpetrated but one unhappy blunder. I asked Mrs. Titus if she knew the Riley-Werkheimers and the Rocksworths in New York.

"Visually," she said succinctly, and I made haste to change the subject. The countess looked amused, and Colingraft said something about it being more than likely that we did not have any mutual acquaintances in New York. His sister came to my rescue with a very amusing and exaggerated account of my experience with the Riley-Werkheimers and Rocksworths. Jasper was enthusiastic. Something told me that I was going to like him.

My troubles began the next day, and at the rather unseemly hour of 8 o'clock in the morning. Colingraft came down the hall in a bath gown and slippers, banged on my bedroom door and wanted to know why he couldn't have hot water for his bath. He was too full blooded and all that sort of thing, he said, to take a cold plunge. Moreover, he wasn't used to taking his tub in a tin cup. (That was his sarcastic way of referring to my portable, handy bathtub.) I asked him why he didn't ring for Britton, and he said he did, but that Britton was assisting Jasper in a wild chase for a bat which had got into the lad's room during the night.

"Thank your lucky stars it didn't get into mother's room," he said surlily. I silently thanked them.

He made such a row about his tub that I had to give him the pail of hot water Britton had placed in my bedroom preparatory to my own bath.

At breakfast Jasper complained about the bats. He couldn't for the life of him see why I didn't have screens in the windows.

Later on Mrs. Titus, who had coffee and toast in her room, joined us in the loggia and announced that the coffee was stone cold. Moreover, she did not like the guest chamber into which she had been moved by order of the countess. It was too huge for a bedchamber, and the iron window shutters creaked all night long.

"But you love the view you have of the Danube?" I inquired rather mournfully.

"I don't sit in the window all night, Mr. Smart," she said tartly.

I at once insisted on her resuming possession of my bedroom and promptly had all of my things moved into the one she had occupied during the night. When the countess heard of this arrangement she was most indignant. She got me off in a corner and cruelly informed me that I hadn't the vestige of a backbone. She must have said something to her mother, too, for when evening came around I had to move back into my own room, Mrs. Titus sweetly assuring me that under no consideration would she consent to impose upon my good nature and hospitality to such an extent, etc.

During the day at odd times Colingraft made lofty suggestions in regard to what could be done with the place to make it more or less inhabitable, and Jasper—who, by the way, I was beginning to fear I should not like after all—said he'd just like to have a whack at the thing himself. First thing he'd do would be to turn some of those old, unused rooms into squash and racket courts, and he'd also put in a swimming pool and a hot water plant.

Late in the afternoon I stole far up into the eastern tower to visit my adorable friend Rosemary. We played house together on the nursery floor, and I soon got over my feeling of depression. But even in play I was made to realize that I was not the master of the house. She ruled me with the utmost despotism, but I didn't mind. She permitted me to sip honey from that cunning place in her little neck and managed to call me Unko. My heart grew warm and soft again under the spell of her.

The countess watched us at play from her seat by the window. She was strangely still and pensive. I had the feeling that she was watching me all the time and that there was a shadow of anxiety in her lovely eyes. She smiled at our pranks, and yet there was something sad in the smile.

I was young again with Rosemary and full of glee. She took me out of myself. I forgot the three Tituses and with them many of my woes. Here was a cure for the blues—this gay little kiddie of the unspeakable Turnowsy!

I lay awake for hours that night, but when I finally went to sleep—and heaven knows I needed it—it was with the soporific resolution to put my house rigidly in order the very next day. The Titus family (omitting the countess and Rosemary) was to be favored with an ultimatum from which there could be no appeal. John Bellamy Smart had decided—with Morpheus smoothing out the wrinkles of perplexity—that he would be master in his own house.

My high resolve flattened itself out a little after the sound sleep I had, and I make no doubt I should have wavered sadly in my purpose had not a crisis arisen to shape my courage for me in a rather emphatic way.

Shortly after breakfast Mrs. Titus came downstairs very smartly gowned for the street. She announced that she was going into the town for an hour or two and asked me to have one of the Schmicks ferry her across the river. There was a famous antique shop there—memory of other days—and she wanted to browse awhile in search of brasses and bronzes.

I looked at her aghast. I recognized the crisis, but for a moment was unable to marshal my powers of resistance. Noting my consternation, she calmly assured me that there wouldn't be the least danger of detection, as she was going to be heavily veiled and very cautious.

HIGH WASTED EFFECTS FOR CHILDREN.

The little frock with a high-placed belt is smarter this season than one with the familiar, low Russian waistline. Here is a very authoritative frock from a specialty shop of exclusive character and the design suggests the favorite Dickens' model though this frock is in one piece. It is of pink linen with cuffs and collar of white linen and white pearl buttons. The pockets in the belt add a modish touch.

"I hereby agree to sell, assign and transfer the business conducted under the name of Elizabeth Sawyer to Edward Jones for the sum of ——."

Again she laughed and shook her head.

"You see I left the amount blank," he insinuated.

"That's the only amount I'd accept at present," decided the woman. She passed her hand for a moment over her eyes. "You see, Mr. Jones, I've given so much to make my business a success."

To make her business a success! June Warner glowed with the mere hearing of the words. She felt more encouraged in this room than she had anywhere since she had taken her own impulsive step toward independence.

A tall, good looking man came into the room, the man of the picture on the desk. Mrs. Sawyer's hand had been pressed over her eyes. At the entrance of her husband she sprang up with an exclamation of pleasure, her face glowing, and turned to him.

The poor little runaway bride glanced hastily out of the window, and the tears sprang into her eyes. How she longed for Ned! Dear Ned!

Dear Ned was in a small, dim room, lighted by one high window, across which were June's father and mother and Bobbie and Iris Blethering, and standing in the corner, with his back to the wall, was the wide featured Scatti.

Ned Warner confronted Scatti.

"You're the man; I want to see you!" he declared, his voice trembling with suppressed fury. "Now, I want some information, and I'm going to have it!"

Scatti leaned comfortably into the corner.

"Will you speak, or won't you?"

"Hold on, Ned!" Bobbie Blethering had caught that muscular arm as it was tensely drawn back. "Let me try this fellow." And little Bobbie took the lead with easy assurance. "Now, see here, old man," he said, "you like money, don't you?"

A gleam in the little narrow eyes.

"Now, suppose we start bidding," went on Bobby, pleased with his progress. He extracted a long black pocketbook from somewhere inside and opened it and fluttered the canary and orange colored bills and the pale green ones.

"Say $50, say $100, for just a bit of conversation," soothingly remarked Bobbie and separated that amount, fluttering it tantalizingly before the gleaming eyes.

Scatti shifted uneasily in his corner.

"For God's sake, man, can't you talk?" said stern John Moore. "You know where my daughter is."

Scatti's lines twisted and twitched, and he lowered his eyes. They all gathered close to him.

WHICH YILL YOU PROTECT?

One family out of every five must furnish a boy for the army of drunkards or the trade" must go under.

Are you willing to contribute a boy? You have no right to say your neighbor shall contribute his boy.

Why not pay your taxes with money instead of with your own and your neighbor's boys?

A young man drunk is somebody's vote staggering around. Is it yours.

Two-thirds of all the drunkards contract the drinking habit before they are twenty-one years old; nearly one-third before they are sixteen, and about 7 per cent. before they are twelve.

Three employes of the Pabst Brewing Company were recently arrested on complaint of Mrs. C. E. Pauline, president of the Lakewood (Ohio) Union. In February free samples of beer were distributed in Lakewood, a dry suburb of Cleveland. Later, by telephone, Mrs. Pauline was asked for an order for beer, which she promptly gave. After the beer had been delivered she brought against the men the triple charge of soliciting, giving out free samples of beer and selling in dry territory. The case is being watched with great interest, as it is the first of its kind under the Beal law.

During the year 1914, by votes of the people or court decisions, over 10,000 liquor saloons, clubs, breweries and distilleries were ordered to be closed.

Never in the history of the great reform has there been such an eventful year as the one that has just closed. In the American Issue we have taken pains to keep our readers informed, but at the close of the year it is fitting that a summary be given. Below in calendar form we recite briefly a number of the chief events, all of which have been reported in detail in our columns during the year.

Standing out as great landmarks of progress are the items regarding "Industry and Alcohol," "Prohibition in Russia," and "The Majority of the United States House of Representatives Voting for National Prohibition."

New Jersey Special Commission on Care of Dependents reports that alcoholism is the greatest single cause of crime and insanity, and moderate drinking is responsible in a great degree for inebriates and insane epileptics and subnormal children.

American Car and Foundry Co., Berwick, Pa., has warned employes not to visit drinking places going to or coming from work, and gave notice that they will replace all drinking men with non-drinkers as rapidly as possible. Thirty per cent. reduction in accidents resulted from this order.

The Hoster-Columbus Breweries Company, Ohio, a $12,000,000 corporation, has gone into the hands of a receiver. Reasons assigned: "Decreased demand for beer, adverse legislation, and the voting dry of many States and counties in the last eight years."

Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of Russia's armies, has ordered that no beer or wine shall be sold throughout the regions under martial law; and a like order has been promulgated at the capital city, Petrograd. Press reports are that for four consecutive days not an arrest for drunkenness was made in Petrograd, a city of two million people.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD.

What the doctor said had given Dick a jolt. Had Nell really been unhappy over the miserable gossip, he wondered? She had been so quiet he had never dreamed it was in any way a vital matter with her. As he sat by the bed and heard her moan in her sleep, his conscience gave him a good lashing. To him the affair had had all the excitement of a battle, but to poor little Nell, whose pride had kept her still, had his persistence looked like anything serious?

Then, too, his cheap defiance of his faithful old mother's attempt to show him his error; the whole thing looked miserable enough when viewed in the light of suffering to Nell.

She opened her eyes and smiled up into his face, reaching out a hot little hand to him.

"Is my little girl better?" he asked, dropping on his knees by the bed.

"I think so," she answered.

"Will it make you worse to talk a little? I have something to say to you," he continued. "I am sorry, oh, so sorry, I did not take your advice and keep out of this babble of tongues. I am afraid I have made you unhappy. I never gave the matter enough thought to realize that, which shows how utterly selfish I have been. What you said after Miss Rudolph called opened my eyes. Will you forgive me, dear?" he asked.

"What will you tell Miss Rudolph?" she asked, a little anxiously. "I do not want to be dragged into this, you know."

"That would have been easy enough at any time and is especially easy since the elopement story. I will tell her that for the sake of her good name, we must not be seen together at all; that that is the only way to quiet the chattering tongues." Dick was soothing her hot forehead with his cool hand.

"You know you said she did not care for that," Nell reminded him.

"Mother said that was all the greater reason for me to be careful for her, and she was right. I knew it all along, but would not admit it," he replied.

Her arm stole around his neck. "I hope you know it was only for other people's opinion to stop the gossip that I cared. I never thought you loved her, dear," she whispered.

"It's time to take your medicine. Now you must go to sleep so you will get well fast. Close your eyes and I will fan you. The doctor said sleep was what you needed more than medicine. Have you been lying awake worrying?"

"Not many nights," she answered. "It has been too hot to sleep."

When the doctor came that night he said, "Her nerves are quieter, but the fever continues. We must break that up. Who can you get to take care of her. We might get a trained nurse from Kansas City."

"Perhaps her mother can come," suggested Dick.

"That would be best if it can be managed."

So Dick sent a night letter to Mrs. Reeves, telling her of Nell's condition and asking her to come at once.

Household Hints

WORTH KNOWING

Split short piece of rubber hose and nail pieces on bottom of step-ladder legs to keep from slipping.

Leather chairs often become greasy looking where the arms and head rest on leather. To remove these marks boil half pint linseed oil and let it stand till nearly cold. Then pour in half pint vinegar, still till it is well mixed and bottle; to use, pour a few drops on a piece of flannel and polish off with soft dusters. This will thoroughly renovate all leathers.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Young Carrots Dish—Scrape carrots, put into sauce pan with a small onion, a bay leaf, a little salt and pepper. Cover with water and stir until tender. Place on a dish a mound of mashed potatoes; take up carrots, stick them around potatoes to form a dome. Thicken the stock in which carrots were boiled with a little flour or cornstarch. Pour it over carrots and sprinkle with chopped parsley. It tastes as good as it looks.

Hot Cross Buns for Good Friday—One cake yeast, one cup milk scalded and cooled, one tablespoon sugar, 3¼ cups sifted flour, one-fourth cup butter, one-half cup sugar, one egg, one-fourth cup raisins (or currants), one-fourth teaspoon salt. Dissolve yeast and one tablespoon sugar in lukewarm milk, add 1½ cups flour to make sponge, heat until smooth. Cover and let rise in warm place free from draft about one hour. Add butter and sugar creamed and egg well beaten, raisins (or currants) well floured, the rest of flour (or enough to make a moderately soft dough) and salt. Turn on board, knead lightly, place in greased bowl, cover, set aside in warm place until double in bulk (about two hours). Shape with hands into medium-sized round buns, place in well-greased shallow pans about two inches apart, cover, let rise again about one hour (or until light). Glaze with egg diluted with water. With a sharp knife cut a cross on top of each bun. Bake twenty minutes. Just before removing from oven dust with sugar moistened with water. While hot, fill cross with plain frosting.

Corn Meal Custard—Make a thin mush in usual way. Stir an egg with two tablespoons of sugar, add a pint of milk; add this to the mush and let come to a boil. Season with vanilla or nutmeg. A lump of butter is an addition to the flavor, and the amount of milk and sugar may be varied to suit taste and the mush you wish to use. Good hot or cold.

Baked Spaghetti With Eggs—Four hard-boiled eggs, four ounces spaghetti, one heaping tablespoon butter, two tablespoons grated cheese, half cup white sauce, a little salt and pepper. Put spaghetti in pan of fast-boiling water and cook until tender. Put a layer of spaghetti, then one of slices of hard-boiled eggs, in baking dish; dust these with a little salt and pepper. Next put in more spaghetti, then more slices of egg and so on until dish is full, ending with spaghetti. Pour white sauce over this and sprinkle cheese on it. Put little bits of butter on top. Bake in thickly buttered fireproof dish in slow oven fifteen minutes. Serve in dish in which it was cooked. Decorate with sliced eggs and chopped parsley.

Escaloped Salmon and Peas—One can salmon, one can peas, two cups white sauce, bread or cracker crumbs. Drain oil from salmon, remove any skin or bones and flake in small pieces. Butter pudding dish, sprinkle with crumbs, put in layer of salmon and peas. Cover with white sauce and repeat until all is used. Cover top with buttered crumbs and bake in hot oven until crumbs are brown. Serve hot.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Animal School.

Said Schoolmaster Crab to his pupils one day:
"I'm going to make a new rule.
The first one who's tardy the least little bit
Will have to stay in after school.

"Now bear this in mind, I won't tell you again,
And I'll take no excuses at all;
So don't fail to be here in plenty of time
To respond to your name at roll-call."

Next day when the children went into the school
They saw there was one vacant seat;
Then they looked out the door and saw Gerald Giraffe
Come sauntering along up the street.

They all held their breath for they thought he'd be late,
But this young Giraffe had no fear.
As he passed by a window and heard his name called
He poked in his head and said, "Here."

Then he walked in the door and sat down in his seat
As calm and as cool as could be.
"I guess that's the time that I fooled that old Crab
By having a long neck," said he.

But Professor Crab said, "Since you feel that you've been
So remarkably clever you may
Just turn right around and go outside and stand
With your head through the window all day."

So Gerald Giraffe had to stand just that way,
Though he certainly felt like a fool,
But it cured him entirely and, after that day,
He was always the first one at school.

WRITING to Timothy, the Apostle Paul said (1 Tim. v. 8)—

"But if any provide not for his own, and especially those of his own house, he has denied the faith."

It is just as much a man's duty to provide for his family that they should not want after he is taken away as for him to provide for their daily wants while he is with them.

Can you afford to disregard this teaching?

One way not to disregard it is to carry a life insurance policy.

A MARGIN OF SAFETY

An engineer never thinks of building a bridge without allowing a sufficient margin of safety. No more can you build a successful career without a margin of "capital" safety in your business.

The average business man knows that it is not too little BUSINESS, but rather too little CAPITAL with which to handle his growing business, that gives him the most concern.

Why not, therefore, remedy this weakness by laying aside monthly, through the medium of our Installment Bond plan, say $25. In 38 months you will have acquired $1,000 additional capital to be drawn upon as your needs require.

Allow us to explain the details.

WORDY TILT ON CONSOLIDATION

Councilmen Milne and Cowperthwaite in War of Words in Boro Council.

ADOPTED RESOLUTION

Council as a Body Requests Assembly Committee to Support Measure—Council Committee Makes a Conflicting Report.

Those who have been instrumental in awakening an agitation over Senate Bill No. 286, pertaining to the consolidation of two municipalities similar to Plainfield and North Plainfield, went at it "hammer and tongs" in the Borough Council, last night, Councilmen Alexander Milne and B. S. Boyer upholding the opposition and Councilman Allan Cowperthwaite fighting against any attempt to check the passage of the bill. Councilmen Boyer and Cowperthwaite worked in conjunction with the laws and ordinance committee in getting up a report on the bill and presented it to the Council last night. Mr. Boyer reported that the bill was in direct conflict with the law of 1900, providing for a commission of three to present a plan so that the two municipalities could be properly consolidated with a satisfactory governing body. Mr. Cowperthwaite said that it was neither in conflict or conformity with the measure of 1900.

Asked for an opinion Corporation Counsel Isaac F. Hunyon said that the bill was not in conflict and added "that an eleventh hour attack had been made to beat it."

Councilman Milne took objection to Mr. Hunyon's remarks and said that his reply was not based on facts and that the language used was in poor taste.

Councilman Cowperthwaite's resolution that the Asembly committee in charge of the bill be requested to report it favorably in amended form providing for the appointment of commissions was passed. This was opposed by Councilmen Milne and Boyer. In the course of the argument, Mr. Cowperthwaite stated that Mr. Boyer and himself had agreed to make a report that Senate Bill No. 286 does not conform nor conflict with the law of 1900 and that Mr. Milne and others had induced Mr. Boyer to "eat crow." He added that they had also made an unsuccessful attempt to make him "eat crow." He alleged that Mr. Milne was attempting to impede legislation without any good reason. Concluding, he said: "Those who favor consolidation and the passage of the Senate bill are quite as good citizens and just as much interested in the welfare of the community as Mr. Milne and any other opponent."

Mr. Milne retorted with a number of questions relative to the wrongs likely to arise in the case of the acceptance of the consolidated form of government. Mr. Cowperthwaite, however, said that he was not there to be cross-examined and that he was acting according to the dictates of well-informed opinions concerning the fitness of the proposed legislation.

SLICK LOOKING BIKE THIEF MAINTAINS STIFF UPPER LIP

Efforts on the part of Sergeant Higgins and Chief Kiely to "wring" a confession from James Andrews, the suspected bicycle thief, having proven futile, the prisoner was committed to the Union county jail at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon in default of $500 bail, under which, he was held by Judge DeMeza for the Grand Jury. In the opinion of the police Andrews is one of the slickest thieves they have had to deal with in several years.

Despite the fact that he was put through a gruelling cross examination by the police officers he maintained a "stiff upper lip" and refused to divulge the identity of supposed companions who have been operating the "bicycle game" on a big scale in this section. He was arrested on a similar charge by Captain Flynn two years ago.

Although of foreign birth Andrews speaks good English and when interviewed by a Daily Press reporter yesterday he would talk on everything but the crime of which he is accused. He was well dressed and keen to observe any movement on the part of those outside his cell door. He claims no acquaintances here and refuses to tell where he came from.

BUSINESS MEN LEAD TOO STRENUOUS A LIFE

Dr. Boynton Says Too Few Have Acquired "The Gentle Art of Leaving Off."

Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, minister of the Clinton Avenue Congregational church, in Brooklyn, told the Men's Club, of the Crescent Avenue church, last night, that there is entirely too much "carrying the message to Garcia" being done by the men of America today, and that the time has come for a sober second thought about trying to make life happier, instead of accumulating fortunes. The subject was "The Gentle Art of Leaving Off," and Dr. Boynton said that too few people found it impossible to "leave off" until they gave out, when they were tackling a business problem.

Throughout his remarks he illustrated with amusing anecdotes and jests at the expense of the overworked business man. He said that nowadays it was nothing unusual for ten or fifteen of the men from the congregation of his church, and other churches for that matter, to have to stop business during a year and go to sanatoriums, because they had not acquired the art which he was describing. There has been too much tendency on the part of business men to neglect their families in the quest for dollars, but since they have been moving from city to country, where the outdoor life can be enjoyed, the tendency to take things a little easier is growing. He said that the man who takes Saturday off during the winter and Saturday and Monday during the summer should not be criticised as a shirker, but more as a person who was learning "the gentle art of leaving off." Dr. Boynton was cordially received by the audience, many of whom had met him on previous occasions. He has been a personal friend of Dr. John S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, for many years, and he expressed great delight at being able to speak to the gathering last night.

After Dr. Boynton had concluded his address, the annual meeting of the club was held, at which time the following officers were elected: Leslie R. Fort, president; Brockholst K. Miller, vice president; O. Chester Johnson, secretary and treasurer; DeWitt Hubbell, Howard Carter, DeWitt Barlow and Oscar W. Smith, executive committee. The president and vice-president were elected as the representatives of the club on the Federation of Men's Clubs.

HISTORIC MOUNTAIN INN BADLY DAMAGED

Fire Discovered Last Night Guts One Side of Borough Landmark.

Water and fire last night, damaged the old Mountain Inn, at Somerset street and Greenbrook road, to the extent of $450, an hour's work on the part of the borough fire department being required to get the flames under control. The call was sent in for the apparatus shortly after 10 o'clock from box No. 143.

Quick response on the part of the entire department probably was responsible for the confinement of the ruin to the Greenbrook road side of the big frame building. When the fire-fighters reached the scene the whole north side was a mass of flames and the entire structure appeared doomed. Two streams of hydrant hose were laid by the firemen and tons of water had to be turned on the fire before it was put out.

Besides the damage done by flames in the northern side the remaining portion of the building was scorched and water soaked. Investigation conducted after the conflagration revealed the fact that the blaze had probably been started by a gasoline lamp.

HOWARD RILEY WEDS MISS KATHERINE HOWES

Howard Riley, formerly of this city, and Miss Katherine Elizabeth Howes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Howes, of Fourth avenue, Roselle, were quietly married on Monday, April 5, in St. Ann's church, Brooklyn, by Rev. William G. Thompson.

The groom is well known in this city and borough, and has a large circle of friends. While here he was a member of the choir of Holy Cross church, and attended the borough High School. The couple are at present living with Mr. Riley's grandmother, Mrs. S. Wadams, of Grove street, but intend going to housekeeping in the borough.

Bernard Shaw's "The Man of Destiny," and J. M. Barrie's "The Twelve Pound Look," are to be given by a group of local amateurs at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow night, under the auspices of the Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee. The proceeds will be turned over to the chairman of the local relief committee, Mrs. Frederick Wallace, and employed for the purchase of milk supplies for the Belgian babies.

In "The Twelve Pound Look" the principal part is taken by Mrs. Lemuel Serrell. She is the former wife of Sir Harry (Charles H. Lyman), and Miss Helen Joy takes the part of the present wife.

The committee considers itself especially fortunate in being able to present "The Man of Destiny." It is one of Bernard Shaw's favorite plays, and he often refuses to allow it to be given by amateurs. Brown Rolston takes the part of the young Napoleon. Mrs. Maxwell Perkins, formerly Miss Louise Saunders, takes the part of the young French woman who steals the general's dispatches. The lieutenant whom she deceives is Walter Righter. Hugh Jarvis is the Italian innkeeper, whose inn is the scene of the entire action. The rehearsals of both plays have been under way for the last two months.

As an additional feature, the Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee has secured Thomas Edison's private motion pictures for tomorrow night, which will be shown during the intermission between the plays. Mr. Edison has sent the pictures here personally, and the Plainfield public will have an opportunity to view some of the best output of the Edison Company in the photoplay field.

ROUTINE BUSINESS IN BORO COUNCIL

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of Grace Episcopal church the members and friends will have an opportunity of hearing both sides of the question of suffrage discussed by able and experienced speakers at a "ladies' night" affair, to be held in the parish house, Monday night, April 19.

Alexander Millar, of Madison avenue, an ardent and enthusiastic supporter of "votes for women," will present that side, while Mrs. Orville D. Oliphant, of Trenton, an active anti-Suffragist, will be the opposing speaker.

The meeting will be held at 8:15 o'clock, and the members of the club are urged to bring their friends. A cordial invitation is extended to all, both men and women. The debate promises to be an able and instructive one, and the subject is one in which all should be interested at this time, since the voters of this State are to be called upon to decide the question at the polls in the fall.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR PARENTS OF PUPILS

Given by Miss Noel J. Bullock at Enthusiastic Meeting in Jefferson School.

The April meeting of the Irving-Jefferson Parent-Teacher Association was held at the Jefferson School yesterday, when an enthusiastic audience listened to a very interesting and helpful paper which was read by Miss Noel J. Bullock, on "How Parents Can Best Aid in School Efficiency."

The article included some of the problems which the teachers find difficult to solve. In mentioning these, suggestions were modestly given, leaving to the decision that only by nearly co-operation between parents and teachers can the best results be gained in school management. The talk was concluded with a monolog entitled, "Mrs. Preston Visits the School." This provided a great deal of amusement for all present.

After this a social hour was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. John Dunn. Several selections were given on the pianola which were greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. Juan Babcock presided and it was declared that the afternoon had been most pleasantly and profitably spent.

MOTORCYCLIST INJURED.

Albert Jaeger, of Lee place, was able to return to work today for the first time since he was injured in a motorcycle accident last Saturday. He was about to start off on his machine with a side passenger, when the sudden jerk caused the latter to fall backward, knocking Jaeger's grasp from the handle bars. He was thrown to the ground and a projection gouged large piece of flesh from one leg. He has since been under the care of Dr. Frederick Hughes. The motorcycle was quite badly damaged.

INDICT FOUR MORE IN TANZER HEARING

Information Furnished by Local Witnesses Said to Have Been Responsible.

On information said to have been furnished by several Plainfield witnesses additional indictments were found by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday in action being conducted against Rae Tanzer after she had brought suit against James W. Osborne charging breach of promise to marry her. Counts were found against David and Maxwell Slade, attorneys for Miss Tanzer, charging them with having "corruptly endeavored to influence witnesses in a proceeding before the United States Commissioner, obstruct and impede the due administration of justice." Indictments were also made against Albert J. McCullough, an operative employed by the J. J. Hannan Detective Agency, alleging conspiracy with the Slades. Rae Tanzer was indicted for having "devised a scheme to defraud James W. Osborne, through the use of the mails." The overt acts alleged against the Slades in the conspiracy indictments are:

That David Slade paid $10 to Frank D. Safford, formerly clerk in Hotel Kensington, at the Mountain Spring House, Greenwood Lake, March 22 two days before Safford identified J. W. Osborne as the "O Osborne," who registered with Rae Tanzer at the local hostelry.

That, March 22, David Slade took Stafford to his home in the Northold Apartments, Broadway and 151st street, New York.

That McCullough, at the hearing escorted Stafford into the Commissioner's room and there pointed out J. W. Osborne.

That David Slade pointed James W. Osborne out to Rae Tanzer as Osborne came into the Commissioner's room at this hearing.

That on the evening of March 24, after the hearing, David Slade paid Safford $14.

That McCullough, after the hearing, assisted Safford to "flee and secret himself."

That McCullough on March 28 accompanied Safford to Rockville Center, L. I.

New Haven, April 14.—Benjamin, Maxwell and David Slade were born Slootsky, had his name changed to Slootskyfi had his name changed to Samuel Slade Oct. 6, 1893, in the Superior Court here, by Judge Frederick B. Hall. Benjamin, who looks after the New Haven business of the firm, was graduated in law from Yale in 1895. Maxwell was graduated in 1902 and David in 1904.

LARGE ADDITION FOR SAURER PLANT

Company Receiving Bids for Erection of Building With Area of 12,000 Feet.

Recent heavy orders received by the International Motor Company have so taxed the capacity of the Saurer plant, Clinton avenue and West Front street, that an addition to the shops has been decided upon by the board of directors. Plans have been prepared for a large storage building to be located at the lower end of the yard. It is to be of frame construction with concrete floor, having a total area of 12,000 square feet. Estimates are now being secured and the contract will be awarded within a few days.

The Saurer plant continues to run day and night with a large force of men, some of them even working Sundays in order to keep up with the rush. Orders for more than 400 trucks have been received since last fall and the call for them is still coming in fifty at a time. Most of the vehicles are intended for European shipment although quite a number have been ordered by American manufacturing concerns.

BALTIMORE CLERGYMAN'S VISIT IS POSTPONED

The rector of Grace church has announced the postponement of the anticipated visit from the Rev. Dr. Charles Fiske of Baltimore, until an early date in May. It was expected that he would preach at Grace church morning and afternoon on Sunday next, but practical obstacles have arisen to interfere with the exchange between Mr. Stevenson and Dr. Fiske.

It is, however, anticipated with a degree of certainty that Dr. Fiske will visit the parish a few weeks later than the date originally announced.

DARDANELLES DELAY

Conflicting Reports as to Activity of Fleet From London and Athens—Anti-War Demonstrations in Vienna.

London, April 14—A report from Petrograd that the Kaiser had assumed personal direction of the defense of the Carpathians and the upper Hungarian plains, is doubted. Another rumor from Petrograd to the effect that General Von Hindenberg has asked for 300,000 more men for renewed assault on Warsaw is regarded as improbable.

Two allied warships were severely damaged by fire from the Turkish forts in the bombardment of the Dardanelles on Monday, according to despatches from Constantinople today, passed by the press bureau as without confirmation. A British cruiser, the Turkish war office said, was hit by shells and a torpedo destroyer was damaged.

The Admiralty has issued no statement regarding the bombardment. The official statement from Constantinople and unofficial reports from Sofia and the Island of Tenedos indicate that the attack was resumed on a larger scale than has been developed since the sinking of three allied battleships on March 18.

The Turkish war office announced that several enemy ships entered the strait and participated in the bombardment. The attack was entirely unsuccessful, according to the Turks, the land batteries forcing the retirement of the fleet early in the evening.

A Dedeagatch correspondent wired to Sofia that allied warships engaged in a heavy bombardment of the Dardanelles forts on Monday. The attack was most violent at about 5 p. m., according to the Dedeagatch despatch, which added that the roar of the big cannon could be heard for more than forty miles.

A despatch from the Island of Tenedos mentioned only two warships as participating in the Monday attack. The British destroyer Renard ran past the Turkish forts at high speed, penetrating ten miles inside the strait, according to the Tenedos despatch. The battleship London followed, drawing most of the fire of the Asiatic batteries, those on the European shore remaining silent. The Triumph bombarded a battery on Saturday, but drew no response, according to information at Tenedos.

Athen, April 14—Continued fog and wet weather make aerial reconnaissance over the Dardanelles impracticable and delay further naval operations there. A dash up the strait for ten miles yesterday by the British destroyer Renard took it further into Turkish waters than any vessel has yet gone.

Rome, April 14—Austrian official reports published today in the Idea Nazionale, state that the situation in Vienna is alarming. Anti war demonstrations occur frequently and martial law is about to be declared to enable the military to hold the

BOROUGH MAN WITHDRAWS APPLICATION TO BOARD

Considerable surprise was manifested at the meeting of the Teachers' Committee of the North Plainfield Board of Education last night when Julian C. Pal De Villars, who was considered the mostly likely candidate to the vacancy in the High School modern language department, withdrew his application. It is understood that Mr. Pla de Villars' name had received the endorsement of the entire committee and the Board members had congratulated themselves on being able to secure his services.

In withdrawing his name the borough teacher said that he had another offer in view. He has been acting as a substitute in the school for several weeks and his term expires April 19.

CRIMINAL ACTION LIKELY.

Washington, April 14.—Criminal prosecution of the officers of the Riggs National Bank is to be instituted as soon as the civil suit is out of the way. This was declared today on the best of authority. Controller Williams, however, would not discuss it. That is a matter that will be developed later he said. Officers of the Riggs Bank said they were in no manner alarmed by the government threat of a criminal suit.

OLD FRIENDS AND NEW-COMERS AT ROTHBERG'S.

The proposition of old friends and new-comers at Rothberg's is about fifty-fifty.

We are building the Rothberg shop for "Most Things Men Wear" on the basis of mutual confidence and good will.

TELLS WONDERS OF EXPOSITIONS

Ex-Mayor Describes What Contest Winners Will See.

In order that the candidates and their friends may get an idea of what is in store for the winners in The Press' Panama-Pacific Exposition contest, we publish in part the impression of an eyewitness of the two expositions—one at San Francisco and the other at San Diego—that the winning candidates will see. The eyewitness is none other than ex-Mayor Seth Low, of New York city, and his description will be most interesting to the candidates and their friends.

Ex-Mayor Low's description of Expositions:

"I advise every American to go who can possibl do so. There is no sacrefice within reason that should not be made to get there. In all probability this will be the last world's fair for a long, long time. The present generation is not likely to see another. Under present conditions it is inconceivable that there should be one for many years to come, and this fair is something the people of the country, least of all those in the East, cannot well afford to miss. It is beautiful beyond words.

"It may seem a long ways off to us in New York, but it really isn't. The four-day trip is delightful. Mrs. Low and I enjoyed every minute of it. The last time we were in California previously was twenty-six years ago. The trip took six days then. My advice is, 'Go to the fair.' I can't make that too strong."

Beauty Everpwhere.

"I have never seen anything more beautiful than thearchitecture of the whole exposition. The courts are superbly arranged, and the tree-planting is remarkable. The light effects at night have never been equalled. The lights are all concealed and shed a beautiful glow upon each building. Dominating them all is the Tower of Jewels, an immense structure adorned with bits of cut glass. At night colored lights are trained on this, and it becomes a huge mass of beautiful, many-colored spangles.

"Then there are lagoons. I have never seen such reflections. Buildings 200 feet high are mirrored in every detail from bottom to top. It is really marvelous, all the more so when one considers that only a few years ago the grounds where the fair is situated were appalling swamps. The majority of the buildings stand on made ground. I was told that where the central building, called the Court of the Universe, stands, formerly the water was forty feet deep.

"It is a great credit to the people of San Francisco that they had the nerve to put this thing through. Last August it was a mighty serious problem whether to go ahead or stop with the work nearly done. San Francisco had the courage to go ahead, and it is reaping its well-earned reward."

Mr. Low said that it was a mistake to suppose the war had deprived the exposition of its international character. There were more nations represented as exhibitors than at any previous fair, he said. Some of the foreign exhibits are still on their way aboard the United States collier Jason.

San Diego Exposition.

Mr. Low says he opened his eyes still wider when he visited the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego. He was struck most of all by the beauties of the horticulture there and was astonished to learn that the luxurious plants and trees he saw were growing on what was once a barren waste.

"At San Diego," he said, "they have transformed their mesa, as the desert outside the city is called, into a Garden of Eden. The top soil of this mesa was hard pan of the worst variety. Nothing would grow on it. But by blasting holes for each tree and shrub they managed to get down below the hard pan, where the soil was fertile. A tree nursery was started five years ago, and now the mesa is one of the most beautiful parks I have ever seen. Every tree and shrub has been transformed and is kept alive by irrigation. One would hardly believe it possible, considering that for six feet or more the soil of the mesa is good for nothing."

It would be a mistake to see the San Francisco fair and not the smaller one at San Diego, according to Mr. Low.

The Panama-Pacific tours offered by the Press are well worth making every effort to capture. Twenty-three days of travel across the American continent without one cent's cost to the tourist certainly sounds like a dream. And some one candidate is going to win two trips. Four happy women will certainly spend a most pleasant summer. See that you are one of them.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

People who thought that Sidney Chaplin, the new comedy star of the screen, would not be able to reach the heights in which his famous brother, "Charles of the big feet," has been dwelling alone for some time, found out their mistake yesterday at the U. S. Astor Theatre, where "Sid" convulsed two capacity audiences with his new two-reel comedy, "Gussie's Day of Rest." At his very best, Charle Chaplin never created more fun and hilarious excitement than did his younger brother in his laugh-making medium, and it's a sure guess that today's audiences will appreciate him as fully as did those of yesterday. The attraction will close with this evening's performance. The most notable offering of the season in the dramatic line is "The Celebrated Scandal," which will open tomorrow for a two-day engagement. The picture features no less a star than Betty Nansen, of the Royal Theatre, of Copenhagen, an actress who has been decorated by kings and emperors, and whose art and mental attainments have added lustre to the fame of Ibsen, whose heroines she has created, and of whom Ibsen has said, "She does not act; she is." "The Celebrated Scandal" is a play that gives the royal actress a splendid opportunity for the display of her marvelous powers of emotional expression. Her role is that of a young wife whose friendship for a youthful relative of her husband is made the subject of idle gossip, until the jealousy of the husband is aroused and the erstwhile happy home of the two is wrecked. Killed in a duel with the chief scandal-monger, the husband's honor is avenged in turn by his young relative, who then turns upon the pack of idle busybodies with terrific denunciation, making a climax that is unsurpassed in its dramatic intensity and appeal to the human sympathies. Edward Jose, former leading man with Sarah Bernhardt, gives Miss Nansen magnificent support.

—It pays to use the advertising columns of The Press.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

In the delightful detective comedy-drama, "The Conspiracy," by Robert Baker and John Emerson, which is to be shown at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow, one of the most thrilling of recent theatrical successes, John Emerson appears in the role originally created by him in the stage production of the drama, that of Winthrop Clavering, the eccentric old author of crime stories and solver of mysteries, a unique and artistic portrayal that especially deserve screen immortality. The production also marks the first presentation of Charles Frohman to the motion picture public. A decided treat is in store for Plainfield Theatre patrons Friday and Saturday next, when the modern version of "Cinderella" will be the attraction. Miss Mary Pickford, the highest-priced camera actress in the country, has posed the part of the pathetic but bewitching little cinder-girl, and she is ably supported by a specially selected cast. Popular prices will prevail at all performances, although "Cinderella" is being shown in New York at Broadway prices.

NATION-WIDE PROHIBITION.

Senator Sheppard, of Texas, is of the opinion that the English movement for restricting the use of alcohol during the war will greatly aid those who urge an anti-liquor amendment to our Federal Constitution, and he confidently predicts "national prohibition in the United States within four years if not sooner."

This attributes to a temporary war measure in England a greater influence than it could possibly exercise in the United States, but there can be no question as to the strength the American prohibition movement already possesses. In a country where home rule is a sacred article of political faith, and where the right of States to make their own laws within certain limitations is generally conceded, it would seem to be as inevitable as appropriate that our forty-eight commonwealths should act separately in this matter, or even that the right of separate action should be granted to counties or communities. Unquestionably the local option idea is based on the old and cherished principle of home rule.

It would appear, therefore, that nation-wide prohibition has been thought of and demanded because State and local prohibition statutes have to a large extent failed of their purpose. The "dry" States of Maine, Kansas, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Mississippi, Tennessee, West Virginia and North Dakota being known to be well supplied with intoxicants through shipments from the outside, the success of the movement seems to demand the abolition of the liquor traffic throughout the entire country by Federal enactment. Yet complete success for national prohibition is manifestly even more difficult of attainment.

Irrespective of the moral, or political merits of this question, men of every opinion who are quite frank must agree that the only way to make State prohibition fully effective is to stop all interstate traffic, cutting the State off completely from its neighbors, and that the only way to make national prohibition fully effective is to forbid all international commerce by sea and literally build an insurmountable wall the whole length of the Canadian and Mexican boundary lines.

In the end, after all the proposed schemes had been tried, including the radical extreme of a Federal constitutional amendment, it would probably be found that the best results, even from the prohibitionist point of view, could be attained by high license and watchful official supervision of the liquor traffic, such as we have in Plainfield.

Judge DeMeza has several times warned reckless automobilists that they must behave themselves better and yesterday he told a local taximan that if he or any other hacker was brought to the station-house for speeding they would lose their license. If a few of them were given stiff fines the desired result would be accomplished. Incidentally it would not do any harm to be a little more particular about autos displaying proper licenses. On Sunday a big touring car went down Watchung avenue at a thirty-mile an hour clip, and there was no license plate displayed on the rear. Another time recently a car was noticed on East Fifth street running with a 1914 license.

The resignation of Rev. C. L. Goodrich removes from local activities a man who has been closely identified with the growth of Plainfield for thirty-one years. He will leave behind a host of friends, both in and out of the Congregational church, where he has labored so long and faithfully.

WAR NEWS

people in check.

Berlin, April 14 (by wireless)—The folowing statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"A night advance by the enemy at Berry au Bac failed. Northwest of Verdun the French employed yesterday against our line a mine developing yellow smoke and asphyxiating gases.

"Fighting continues between the Meuse and the Moselle. During a strong attack against the Maicery-Marcheville line the French penetrated our position at one narrow section of Marcheville, but were speedily driven out again by a counthis front their attack broke down.

"No battles occurred in Priest Wald. In the Vosges the French failed to advance against Schoppenweth Kopf southwest of Metzeral.

"Eastern theatre—Situation remains unchanged."

Paris, April 14—The war office gave out the following today:

"Calm was generally maintained along the front throughout yesterday. A Zepelin threw bombs on Bailliful with our aviation grounds as its objective. This was not hit. Three civilians were killed.

"Two German aeroplanes were forced to descend to earth within our lines, one near Braine, the other near Luneville. The aviators were made prisoners. A third German machine was winged by the fire of our advance post near Nores, north of Verdun, and fell 600 yards from our lines. One aviator was hit by a bullet."

Washington, April 14—In compliance with the request of Captain Thierfelder of the Kronprinz Wilhelm, Secretary Daniels today issued orders for the examination of the ship by the same of board as officiated in the Eitel Friedrich case. Just as soon as the board decides the amount of repairs and coal and supplies needed to last to the nearest German port, the time limit for the stay of the ship will be fixed. This date will be kept secret.

The breach between German ambassador Von Bernstorff and the State Department was widened today. Secretary Bryan flatly denied that he had referred newspaper correspondents to the German embassy to obtain the text of the recent note from the German government concerning the failure of the United States to expedite the importation of foodstuffs for the civil population of Germany.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH MEN'S CLUB ELECTS

The annual meeting of the Men's Club of the Congregational church was held last night, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, E. L. Morgan; vice-president, W. L. Marshall; secretary, J. C. Evans; treasurer, Charles E. Steiner. The reports of the various departments were read and were very encouraging, and the treasurer's report showed a balance on hand.

The club adopted a set of resolutions last night regarding the recent death of William McIntosh, of the borough, who was a member of the club. A social time followed the business meeting, and refreshments were served.

The club now has a membership of about forty members, and five were admited at last night's meeting.

ATTENDING CONVENTION.

The delegates from the Park Avenue Baptist church, who are attending the second annual convention of the Women's Baptist Foreign Mission Societies, of the Atlantic district, being held in Trenton today, are the following: Mrs. B. F. Hudson, Mrs. D. M. Runyon, Mrs. F. St. J. Fitch, Mrs. E. F. Vail, Mrs. Walter Freeman and Mrs. D. F. Hadley. Those from the First Baptist church include Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs. G. H. Robins and Mrs. J. A. Manning.

E. J. Cooley, of Carlton avenue, who underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital last week, is doing nicely under the care of Dr. Frederick J. Hughes.

BOTH HOUSES FAVOR CO. K ARMORY BILL

Passed by Senate This Morning—Little Likelihood of Erection Soon.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon's bill for an appropriation by the State of $5,000 for a new armory for Company K of this city passed the Senate today. It passed the House several weeks ago and it will now go to Governor Fielder for his signature. In view of the fact that the appropriation bill has been put through the money will not be provided this year.

The need of an armory for the local company is apparent. The organization now occupies limited quarters in the Schepflin building in West Front street, but despite this handicap the standing of the company among the sixty other infantry organizations in the State has been high during the last fourteen years, according to the adjutant-general's report.

The company has no outdoor rifle range and for this reason it is impossible to have the men practice prior to shooting their record course at Sea Girt. The local sharpshooters, however, have always done good work on the ranges, and last summer they carried off one of the trophies and the individual shooting of the men was also of a high order.

Captain Charles Peterson went to Trenton this morning in the interests of the measure.

ROSENBAUM BROS. OBSERVE THEIR THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Congratulations are being extended today to Samuel and Henry Rosenbaum of the dry goods firm of Rosenbaum Brothers, who are celebrating their third anniversary in business. This progressive firm removed to their present location three years ago from 237 West Front street, where the U. S. Astor Theatre is now situated, the store previously being occupied by Levy Brothers. The firm has greatly improved the interior of the store, also putting in a new front and adding a bargain basement and using the entire second floor for a millinery, cloak and suit department. The firm started with six employes and today it is employing fourteen.

Henry Rosenbaum, junior member of the firm, was very optimistic today in discussing trade conditions, and suggested that it would be an excellent plan for the Business Men's Association to invite the public to express its views and thus bring merchant and customer in closer relation.

CRAIGIELEA LODGE HOLD DANCE AND CLIPPING SOCIAL

Members and guests of Craig-a-lea Lodge, Laughters of Scotia, spent a most enjoyable time at a "dime and clipping social," held at their lodge room in Coward Hall, on Monday night. Solos were rendered by Miss La Poidervin and Mrs. Alfred Seidel. Mrs. William VonSyckel acompanied on the piano. Alex Bettie, Mr. Jameson and George Pearson rendered selections, accompanied by Mr. McHeon and Joel Ollear. Piano and violin solos were given by Mr. Daniels and Teresa Kregar. Recitations were given by Elizabeth Doig. Harry Lauder's latest compositions were exceptionally played by Miss Betty Mara. At a late hour refreshments were served and before leaving the entire company sang "Auf Lang Syn."

The school's basketball team, champions of the Interscholastic League, had its picture taken yesterday. Those in the group were Captain Daniel F. McNamee, Manager Nicholas Zelmas, William Peacock, William Wheelan, Benjamin Rosenson, Fred Chamberlain, Coach Ralph Patch, Edward Ryder, Sheldon Coudray.

WILL PAY FOR TEETH.

Upon the agreement of James E. Jackson, a Somerset street butcher, to pay for some teeth belonging to James Boyle, of 18 Somerset street, police court action in the case was terminated this mornig, when the two met. The two appeared before Justice Snape yesterday afternoon, and Jackson was held in $500 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Cotton Felt Mattresses

All the Way from Old Kentucky

At Extraordinary Low Prices

See Window Display

Last year when the cotton market was at its lowest and the South was begging people to "Buy a Bale" we took advantage of the situation and made a contract with a large bedding concern in Louisville, Ky., for a year's supply. We received a shipment in February and juding from the way they sold at that time the present shipment won't last long. They are positively the best values we have ever seen in our experience of twenty years. We could readily sell them all at wholesale at the prices quoted, but we prefer to give our customers the benefit instead.

SUNDAY GOLF FOR WISCONSIN

Ban on Movies Also Lifted In Blue Law Amendment.

Official recognition will be given to Sunday golf in Wisconsin by the proposed amendment to the blue laws, which will lift golf from the list of proscribed Sunday sports and which will make formally legal some of the amusements which were not dreamed of when the Wisconsin Sunday laws were passed.

The Heim bill, amending the blue laws, provides that moving picture theaters can be considered exempt from the list of things forbidden on Sunday, and another amendment has been sent in by the committee which exempts golf and baseball and other sports as long as they do not disturb the peace of a community.

BET ON A LONG WAR.

Brooks Club Adds Another Entry to Notable Betting Book.

One of the most famous betting books in London is a musty volume wherein members of the Brooks club have recorded for more than a century and a quarter their wagers upon all sorts of questions, including the duration of a war or the fall of a ministry. The last bet appearing in its pages is £50 to £5 that the present war will be over before five years.

Among earlier entries, when odds were laid and taken upon the duration of the war with the American colonies and the outcome of the struggle with France, the name of Charles James Fox continually appears.

TO DISCUSS CARE OF DEFECTIVE CHILDREN

Alexander Johnson, of Vineland Training School, to Speak at High School.

Alexander Johnson, director of the department of extension at the Vineland Training School, will speak in the Plainfield High School Auditorium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, when he will discuss some of the educational possibilities of the work being conducted under his supervision. Dr. H. M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, in speaking of this work, said:

"Much has been written and much has been heard of the care of defective children, but the people of this city have rarely had the opportunity of listening to a man who has reached forth his hands and grappled with the subject from a practical standpoint, and is accomplishing a work that is attracting attention from educators throughout the country. People are just coming to realize that three or four persons in every one hundred are not equipped mentally so as to fully take care of themselves.

"If these same young people were put under right conditions and wise direction and control they would undoubtedly be helped to lead different lives and be of some use in the world. New Jersey is trying an interesting experiment in this line in the southern part of the State, having a colony of men and women who most unfortunately have been neglected so long, but who are now protected from evil influences, and are furnished occupation and interested in varius forms of pleasure, according to the temperament of the individual.

"Dr. Johnson will describe this work in detail as part of his lecture, and will illustrate various phases of it with lantern slides. From an educational point of view, as well as the joy of listening to a man of the oratorical ability of Dr. Johnsn, there is no doubt but that a most representative Plainfield audience will attend."

The lecture is announced formally as "Defective in Picture and Story," and the topic is "The Weakest Children of the Great Mother State." It is held under the auspices of the Board of Edcation, the Charity Organization and the Association of Special Class Teachers. The lecture is for adults, and the presence of children is not desired.

INSTITUTE NEW HOMESTEAD.

W. T. Morgan, district manager for the Brotherhood of American Yeomen, will institute a homestead of the brotherhood at Bound Brook, at 8 o'clock tonight. He will be assisted by D. L. Coleman, foreman of Queen City Homestead, and Irving Kunzman, esquire, of this city, and Emil Stremlow, esquire, of Perth Amboy; foreman of Raritan Homestead, 4896. About twenty leading citizens of Bound Brook comprise the charter membership of the new homestead.

HELD A DIME SOCIAL.

The Brightside Circle of King's Daughters held a "dime" social at the home of Mrs. C. Frank French, of Washington avenue, last night, and it was a great success. There were about twenty-five present, and the money is for the circle's semi-annual contribution. Miss Hazel Selby entertained with recitations, and Miss Cora Bird rendered several vocal solos. Various parlor games were enjoyed by all present. Refreshments were served during the evening.

SUGGEST NAME FOR CITY'S NEW SCHOOL

W .C. T. U. Secretary Wants It Named in Honor of "Frances E. Willard.

An accumulation of routine business was disposed of by the Plainfield Board of Education at its meeting in the Plainfield High School last night. A communication was received from Mrs. Carrie L. Bennett, corresponding secretary of the W. C. T. U., requesting the Board to name the new Evergreen avene school in honor of Frances E. Willard, the founder of the W. T. C. U. The letter cited the fact that the city of Washington had authorized the erection of a statute to her memory, and that Plainfield would be taking a step in the right direction by following the example set by the national capital.

The Board appointed an advisory committee to act in conjunction with the management of the Household Center established in the rear of the Plainfield High School building. Charles R. Bostwick is the supervisor of practical arts in the institution, and the following workers have been named to assist him: Mrs. G. Stuart Simons, Mrs. Charles B. Morse and Mrs. Asa F. Randolph.

President Cox reported that his attention had been called to a bill that has been sent to the Governor for his signature, which made it mandatory for Boards of Education to purchase all supplies manufactured in the penal institutions of the State and preventing the Board from purchasing any supplies made outside of these institutions. Mr. Cox said that he had forwarded his objections to this bill, basing his action upon the fact that under its terms the prison authorities would establish the standard of material used by the schools, which action, he thought, to be harmful to the citizens of the State.

Considerable time was consumed in discussing the possibility of providing better eductional facilities for children in the extreme East End of the city, but no definite conclusions were arrived at.

The Ladies' Nest of Owls had been invited to the social session which followed the business meeting and there was a large gathering when the program commenced in the lower hall. President E. Yannotta was in charge and the following numbers were given: Selections by the Owl's stringed orchestra, selections by the Owl's quartette; vocal selections by John LaPresto. Highly interesting addresses were made by Prof. Lombardo, of New Brunswick, who speaks seven languages and is court interpreter for Middlesex county; Felluccia Pucci, of Perth Amboy, president of the Italian Stores, Inc., and Dan Di Leonardo, of this city who is past president of the Italian Nest of Owls. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

The annual reports were read and showed the society in a prosperous condition and all funds pledged had been raised. The subject of the meeting yesterday was "Native Indians in America" taken from the book entitled "In Red Man's Land." Miss Smalley, the hostess of the meeting, served refreshments during the afternoon.

CHILD DIES FROM BURNS CAUSED BY SCALDING SOUP

Annie Torlia, the three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rafael Torlia, of 27 Race street, died in Muhlenberg Hospital this morning, from burns received at her home Sunday morning. The child attempted to lower a window and in doing so pulled over on herself a pot of scalding hot soup that had been set out to cool.

The child was terribly burned about the head and body and after receiving medical treatment at home was taken to the hospital. Practically no hope was entertained for her recovery from the start and the child lived in terrible agony until the end.

BAT NELSON HAS CHANCE IF HE FIGHTS FREDDIE WELSH IN HAVANA NEXT MONTH

Bat Nelson's recent twenty-five round go with Jimmy Fryer, a Philadelphia welterweight, has spread the idea that the old-timer is not yet on the shelf. The remarkable vigor he showed for one of his fighting years and the pep he had behind his punches has convinced ringsiders and promoters that Bat is still able to put up a mighty good fight.

In his fight with Freyer Bat displayed all of his old rushing tactics, and they were as effective as of yore. He took a lot of hard wallops without a sign of fatigue, and seemed fresher at the close of the fight than when he began.

Many fight fans are inclined to feel that Bat's comeback is to be classed with the many he has staged before. When the news spread that he was ambitious to fight Freddie Welsh in Havana in May the guffaws were many. Just the same, Bat means to be taken soberly and will fight Welsh if he gets half a chance.

Even though Bat is as old and palsied as many would have us believe, he might still have a chance to cop. The pictures above show a method that Bat might well study and perhaps employ with great success.

DECLARES HALF HOLIDAY FOR NEWARKERS' OPENING

Mayor Raymond, of Newark, yesterday issued a proclamation suggesting that business houses, wherever possible, make Friday, the opening day of the local Feds, a half holiday, inasmuch as Newark has now been placed on the big league baseball map. The Mayor also suggested that business and private houses be decorated.

Mayor Raymond realizes that a half holiday will prevent many persons reporting "sick" and save the lives of office boys' grandmothers until later in the season.

A request that the Mayor issue a "suitable proclamation" for the opening game was made last week by the Common Council. The Mayor says in the paper that "the people of Newark are desirous of showing their appreciation of the selection of Newark as a representative of a major league."

This class is growing in popularity each week. Some of the best know business men of the city have joined the class and are expressing their enthusiasm in the work. The fundamentals of the art of public speaking are studied, and experience and criticism in extemporaneous speaking acquired.

As each member is about to go upon the platform a subject is presented to him. With no previous preparation he is supposed to make a three-minute speech—the general impression created— demeanor on the platform, gesture and vocal expression receiving criticisms and suggestions from the members of the class and the instructor.

Any who are interested in the work of the class will be made welcome. There is a slight charge of five cents a lesson. An unusual opportunity is offered to acquire power and elegance in vocal expression and practice in extemporaneous speechmaking. The manner in which one speaks his mother tongue is looked upon as showing more clearly than any other one thing, what his culture is, and what his associations have been.

The class is conducted under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee.

SCHOOL BOYS PRESENT AN ORIGINAL PLAY

"It Migh Have Been serious," an original three-act play, was presented in the borough last night by five schoolboys. Those who took part and arranged the show were Ralph Taylor, Franklin Rowley, Jack Cannon, Francis Cannon and Robert Blair. The affair was presented in the barn in the rear of the home of A. A. Cannon, of Somerset, and the boys, who made up their own parts, were assisted by Mrs. A. A. Cannon.

The two feature parts were Mrs. Lang and the stenographer, and they were taken by Franklin Rowley and Francis Cannon, respectively. Dressed up in female togs, these two youngsters certainly made a big hit with the audience. There were about seventy present, and the youthful thespians realized over $7 profit, which will be given to the Parent-Teacher Association building fund. Jack Cannon, a book agent, took the comedy part, and received much applause.

The cast of characters and synopsis follows: "Mr. Lang," Ralph Taylor; "Mrs. Lang," Franklin Rowley; "stenographer," Francis Canon;; "book agent," Jack Cannon, and "Brother Bob," Robert Blair; time, the present; place, first act, dining room in Lang's house; second, Mr. Lang's office; third, same as act one.

LINCOLN WAS SHOT FIFTY YEARS AGO

Many Recall Time the Nation Was Plunged Into Grief.

Washington, April 14—It will be just half a century ago tonight that Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, was shot and fatally wounded by John Wilkes Booth. Millions of Americans have come since that fatal night to view the theatre where he was shot and to stand a moment in the little room in the house across the street where the Great Emancipator passed away.

The Ford Theatre, where the assassination occurred, will soon be torn down, and the little house across the way will be preserved, it is expected, by the government, with its big collection of Lincoln momentoes gathered by private parties.

On the night of April 14, 1865, a performance of "Our American Cousin" was being given in the theatre. It was Good Friday, and President Lincoln, his energies relaxing at the conclusion of the great Civil War, took his family to the theatre.

On the morning of the eventful day, President Lincoln had the first opportuity of many months to have a long talk with his eldest son, Capt. Robert Lincoln, who had been serving on the staff of General Grant. Father and son breakfasted together at the White House, and then had a long talk concerning the profession which the young staff officer was to adopt. It was due to President Lincoln's advice that Capt. Lincoln gave up his military career and continued his study of law.

Later in the forenoon the President attended the last meeting of the cabinet. All the members were present except Mr. Seward, the Secretary of State, who had been injured in a fall from his horse. General Grant was present, and occupied by invitation the seat of Secretary Seward. The situation after the close of the war was discussed, and President Lincoln spoke with kindness of General Lee and expressed himself strongly against harsh measures in the South. The terms of Lee's surrender were fully approved.

During the afternoon, the President received many visitors, and toward evening he was tired out. He had promised to attend the theatre that night, and rather than disappoint the people, who had looked forward to the event, he prepared to go. Just before starting for the theatre, President Lincoln paid his customary visit to Secretary Stanton at the War Department. It just happened that the President, while returning to the White House, accompanied by Secretary Stanton, referred to the often-expressed fear that some assassin would seek his life. The President said he was confident that his guards would prevent any attack. Many times before he had stood without protection and talked to gatherings at the White House.

The President was accompanied by Mrs. Lincoln, his two sons and Major Rathbone, and the party occupied a box at the right side of the stage, and about fourteen feet above the level of the stage.

It was at the close of the first act that Booth fired the fatal shot and leaped from the box onto the stage, injuring his leg in the fall. Before Booth escaped, he stabbed William S. Withers, who blocked his way. It was Withers who positively identified Booth.

Booth escaped through a window in the rear of the theatre. He dropped into an alley way that remains today, and fled through the night. He was hunted down and shot while refusing to surrender.

Wounded to death, President Lincoln was carried from the theatre amid a scene of intense excitement. He was taken to a house across the street, occupied by a tailor named Peterson. In a little room of that house he died the following day, April 15, surrounded by members of his family and the officers of his cabinet.

With the death of Secretary John Hay ten years ago, all of the officials who had met the President at his last cabinet meeting and had stood at his deathbed have passed away. Secretary Hay was given the ring worn by the President. He had it made over with a crystal setting, containing a lock of President Lincoln's hair. This was the ring which President Roosevelt wore at his inauguration.

The deed of the assassin plunged the nation again into grief. A few days of rejoicing had preceded the event, rejoicing over the close of war which had cost so many precious lives and enormous sacrifices. Lincoln's death was a great catastrophe, both to the North and the South. The North had lost their brilliant leader, the South had lost one of its greatest friends.

GIDEONS WILL DISTRIBUTE BIBLES IN THE HOTELS

The Plainfield Camp of the Gideons, the local branch of Christian Commercial Travelers' Association of America, which was formed in this city last November, has been doing a great work. Next week three local hotels will receive sixty-three Bibles, one for each guest room. This result has been accomplished by the co-operation of the Federation of Men's Bible classes. The Gideons have placed a Bible in 277,686 hotel guest rooms in the United States and Canada during the last six months, an average of more than 4,000 each month.

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock there will be a praise service held in the Y. M. C. A. in recognition of the completion of this work in Plainfield. A general invitation is extended to all who are interested in the distribution of the Bible. The Bibles for the Plainfield hotels are now on display in the window of Edward A. Laing's store, 151 West Front street.

TO GIVE A NOVEL CONCERT.

Under the auspices of the Congregational church, and for the benefit of the building society fund, a "Kitchen sink-phoney" concert will be given in the parish house tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock and Friday evening at 8:15 o'clock. The women of the church who have the affair in charge have been working energetically to make it a success, and it promises to be a novel and enjoyable concert.

PAYS A TRIBUTE TO HIS COMRADE

Death of Charles Rogers Recalls Interesting Incidents of the War.

The burial in Hillside cemetery, Saturday afternoon, of the body of Charles B. Rogers, a former Plainfielder, who passed away in the Tennessee Soldiers' Home, has elicited the following contribution from one of the departed soldier's comrades, as a little tribute to the memory of one who served his country well:

"Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

"The notice of the death of Charles B. Rogers, occurring at the National Soldiers' Home, at Johnstown, Tenn., last week, brings to mind some fond memories of the bygone days. Comrade Rogers was one of the Plainfield boys of Co. H, 30th N. J. Vols. This Co. when enrolled and sworn in the United States service numbered 101 men, forty-two enrolled from Plainfield and the remainder was made up from Westfield, Springfield and Elizabeth. On September 3, 1862, Co. H left home to go into camp at Flemington where the regiment was mobilized. On September 17, the Company was mustered in the U. S. service and left camp for the seat of war. Thinking it might be of interest to some of the older citizens of Plainfield the following names are taken from the original orderly sergeant's book all the boys being from Plainfield: James F. Hubbard was made captain; Edward C. Mulford was made second lieutenant; Lewis B. Hoff, orderly sergeant; J. Newton Jenkins, Charles H. Randolph, Harry Champlin, George Ryno, Randolph Thorn, Alfred Runyon, Peter Hoagland, Joseph P. Martin, George W. Townley, Lewis H. Ayers, Ira R. Vail, Jeremiah Bilyea, Benjamin Wright, Nathan V. Compton, James Young, Jerry Halsted, Abraham E. Harris, William J. Ayers, Walter Herring, Aaron F. Randolph, Nathan B. Vermeule, Jacob M. Jennings, John Leforge, Jacob Manning, Orlando Moffett, James L. Mundy, Daniel B. Naylor, Alfred Perry, J. Clem Randolph, Charles B. Rogers, Francis S. Runyon, Nelson Runyon, Theodore J. Runyon and Edward Stewart.

"A sad feature with the pleasant memories is that only a few are left as survivors. They are Judge Nelson Runyon, Nathan V. Compton, Jacob Manning and Charles H. Randolph.

"CHARLES H. RANDOLPH."

MRS. MARY ARMOR WILL SPEAK HERE

The "Georgia Cyclone" to Give Two Addresses in Plainfield May 9-10.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Macon, Ga., known as the "Georgia Cyclone," will speak in this city on May 9 and 10 under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. of Plainfield. Announcement of the place of meeting for May 9 will be made later, but on Monday night, May 10, Mrs. Armor will speak at the Plainfield High School, and the public is invited. The report of the Georgia State W. C. T. U. convention has this to say of Mrs. Armor:

"Then, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, the peerless woman orator of America, filled the vast audience, which crowded to hear her with admiration, amazement and delight at the torrent of facts, logic, pathos, humor, love, pity, wit, sarcasm and faith which gushed forth in her own inimitable manner as she prophesied, recalling the signs of the times, why the United States would have National Constitutional Prohibition by 1920.

"But why attempt to describe what she said? There is but one such woman in the world, and Georgia has her. Mary Harris Armor is a Georgia product. God has called her to fight the liquor traffic, not only in Georgia, but in the nation, and the Union Signal readers know just how she is answering the call."

LADIES' AID SOCIETY GIVES SPRING LUNCHEON

The spring luncheon given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, yesterday noon, was well attended. The dining room was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants. The affair was arranged by the officers of the society, and was a thorough success. The committee was composed of the following: Mrs. L. M. French, chairman; Mrs. G. H. Marvin, Mrs. Henry Gee, Mrs. A. H. Osmun, Mrs. S. H. Tugwell and Mrs. N. Y. Hull.

After the luncheon a business meeting was held and routine business discussed. It was decided to hold monthly all-day meetings, which are to be known as "church days," and when the three societies will meet, namely, the Home, Foreign and Ladies' Aid. A luncheon will be served at each meeting.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON,

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr McCutcheon.

"My dear Mrs. Titus," I murmured in my dismay, "it isn't to be considered. I am sure you won't persist in this when I tell you that Tarnowsy's agents are sure to see you and"—

She laughed. "Tarnowsy's agents! Why should they be here?"

"They seem to be everywhere."

"I can assure you there is none within fifty miles of Schloss Rothhoefen. Our men are in the city. Four of them preceded me. This morning I had Mr. Bangs telephone to the hotel where the chief operative is staying—in the guise of an American tourist, and he does it very cleverly for an Englishman too—and he assures me that there is absolutely no danger. Even Mr. Bangs is satisfied."

"I am forced to say that I am by no means satisfied that it is a safe or wise thing to do, Mrs. Titus," I said, with more firmness than I thought I possessed.

She raised her delicate evebrows in a most exasperating, well bred, admonitory way.

"I am quite sure, Mr. Smart, that Dillingham is a perfectly trustworthy detective, and"—

"But why take the slightest risk?"

"It is necessary for me to see Dillingham, that is the long and short of it," she said coldly. "One can't discuss things over a telephone, you know. Mr. Bangs understands. And, by the way, Mr. Smart, I have taken the liberty of calling up the central office of the telephone company to ask if they can run an extension wire to my dressing room. I hope you do not mind."

"Not in the least. I should have thought of it myself."

"You have so much to think of, poor man! And now will you be good enough to have Hawkes order the man to row me across the"—

"I am very sorry, Mrs. Titus," said I firmly, "but I fear I must declare myself. I cannot permit you to go into the town today."

She was thunderstruck. "Are you in earnest?" she cried after searching my face rather intently for a moment.

"Unhappily, yes. Will you let me explain"—

"The idea!" she exclaimed as she drew herself to her full height and withered me with a look of surpassing scorn. "Am I to regard myself as a prisoner, Mr. Smart?"

"Oh, I beg of you, Mrs. Titus"— I began miserably.

"Please answer my question."

Her tone cut me like the lash of a whip. My choler rose.

"I do not choose to regard myself as a jailer. My only object in opposing this"—

"I have never known anything so absurd." Two bright red spots appeared in her cheeks. "Your attitude is most extraordinary. However, I shall go to the city this morning, Mr. Smart. Pray give me the credit of having sense enough to— Ah, Colingraft!"

The two sons approached from the breakfast room, where they had been enjoying a 10 o'clock chop. Colingraft, noting his mother's attire, accelerated his speed and was soon beside us.

"Going out, mother?" he inquired, flicking the ash from his cigarette.

"If Mr. Smart will be good enough to withdraw his opposition," she said icily.

He gave me a sharp look. "What's up?"

"Mrs. Titus doesn't seem to realize the risk she runs in"—

"Risk? Do you suppose, Mr. Smart, I would jeopardize my daughter's"—

"What's up?" repeated Colingraft insistently.

"Mr. Smart calmly informs me that I am not to go into the city."

"I don't see that Mr. Smart has anything to say about it," said her son coldly. "If he"— He paused, glaring

I looked him squarely in the eye. If he had possessed the acumen of a polywog he would have seen that my Dutch was up.

"One moment, Mr. Titus," I said, setting my jaw. "I have this to say about it. You are guests in my house. We are jointly interested in the effort to protect the Countess Tarnowsy. I consider it to be the height of imprudence for any member of your family to venture into the city now or at any time during her stay in this castle. I happen to know that Tarnowsy is having me watched for some purpose or other. I don't think he suspects that the countess is here, but I greatly fear that he believes I am interested in her cause. He suspects me. You have heard of our recent encounter. He knows my position pretty well by this time. Mrs. Titus says that the man Dillingham assures her there is no danger. Well, I can only say that Dillingham is a fool, and I don't purpose having my own safety threatened by"—

"Your safety!" exclaimed he. "I like that! What have you got to be afraid of?"

"You seem to forget that I am harboring a fugitive from justice," I said flatly.

Mrs. Titus gasped. "How dare you"—

"The Countess Tarnowsy is wanted by the authorities for kidnaping, and I think you know the facts quite as well as I do," I went on harshly. "God knows I am doing my best to protect her. I am risking more than you seem to appreciate. If she is found here my position isn't likely to be an enviable one. I am not thinking solely of myself, believe me, but after all I contend that I have a right to assert myself in a crisis that may affect me vitally. I trust you will see my position and act accordingly—with consideration if nothing else."

Mrs. Titus did not take her eyes off mine while I was speaking. There was an expression of utter amazement in them. No one had ever opposed her before in just this way, I gathered. She didn't know what to make of it.

"I fear you exaggerate the extent of your peril, Mr. Smart," she said dryly. "Of course I have no desire to put you in jeopardy, but it seems to me"—

"Leaving me out of the case altogether, don't you think it is a bit unfair to the countess?" I asked in some heat. "She doesn't want to go to jail."

"Jail?" she cried angrily.

"That's no way to speak about"— began Colingraft furiously.

I broke in rashly. "If you please, Mr. Titus, be good enough to keep your temper. I have no desire to appear harsh and arbitrary, but I can see that it is necessary to speak plainly. There isn't anything in the world I will not do to help you and the countess in this unfortunate business, Mrs. Titus. I hope you believe me when I say as much. I am her friend. I want to be yours if you will let me. But I reserve the right to say what shall be and what shall not be done as long as you are under my roof. Just a moment, Mr. Titus! I think we are quite agreed that your sister is to depart from here on the 14th of the month. I am to be her escort, so to speak, for a considerable distance in company with Mr. Bangs. Well, it must be clearly understood that not one of you is to show his or her face outside these walls until after that journey is over. That's plain speaking, isn't it?"

"I shall go where I please, and I'll go to the town today"— roared Colingraft, getting no further for the reason that his mother, seeing that I was desperately in earnest, gave vent to a little cry of alarm and clutched her big son by the shoulder. She begged him to listen to reason.

"Reason!" he gasped.

"If you—or any of you—put a foot outside these walls," I declared, "you will not be allowed to re-enter. That's flat!"

"By cricky!" fell in fervent admiration from the lips of Jasper junior. I glanced at his beaming, astonished face. He positively was grinning. "Good for you! You're a wonder, Mr. Smart! By cricky! And you're dead right! We're darn fools!"

"Jasper!" gasped Mrs. Titus.

"Good for you, Jasper!" I cried warmly and took the hand he proffered.

"Colingraft, please take me to my room," murmured the mother. "I—I feel faint. Send for Aline. Ask Mr. Bangs to come to me at once."

I bowed stiffly. "I am sorry, Mrs. Titus, to have been so harsh, so assertive"—

She held up both hands. "I never was so spoken to in all my life, Mr. Smart. I shall not forget it to my dying day."

She walked away from me, her pretty head held high and her chin suspiciously aquiver. Colingraft hastened after her, but not without giving me a stare in which rage and wonder struggled for the mastery.

I ran my hand over my moist brow. "Gee!" said Jasper junior. "You've corked her all right, all right." He followed me into the study, and I couldn't get rid of him for hours.

CHAPTER II.

IN the bare little room upstairs stood the well groomed Orin Cunningham, twirling his white mustache and counting some money into the hand of dumpy Mrs. Waters. Gilbert Blye stood by, his black eyes glowing. He stroked his black Vandyke with his long, lean white fingers, and he smiled a suave smile as Mrs. Waters, tying the money in a corner of her apron, pointed to the bundle of pants in the corner; then she moved the narrow washstand from in front of a door and inserted a key in the lock. She threw open the door, closed it again and gave the key to Gilbert Blye.

Gilbert Blye slipped the key in his pocket and drew forth a tiny gold watch. Mrs. Waters, standing beside him, saw in the lid the portrait of lovely June Warner. She looked up at the dark, handsome fellow and smiled significantly and touched the ring finger of her left hand and nodded her head in keen self approbation. Then she patted the little wad which was knotted in the corner of her apron. Gilbert Blye smiled his suave smile and went into the hall, where he telephoned to a vivacious brunette in her ornately decorated rooms and then to a man with thick lidded eyes and a round head, on which the short hair bristled.

In the office of Elizabeth Sawyer the tall, good looking man sat down, with a smile. Neither he nor his wife noticed or thought of the quiet little figure in the corner.

"Well, Betty, what can I do for you?" asked Sawyer cordially.

"Loan me some money, Harry."

"I'd rather give it to you," he said.

"I couldn't think of it." Mrs. Sawyer reached in her desk for a block of note blanks. "I shall need $5,000 if you can spare it."

"Certainly."

They both wrote at once, sitting side by side at the desk, he a check to his wife and she a thirty day note to her husband.

"You will get in trouble once in awhile, won't you, Betty?" laughed the man.

She looked at him reproachfully.

"You know why."

"Yes." He nodded sympathetically and, patting the hand which lay on the edge of the desk, picked up the photograph. "The babies. Betty, you're a wonder. What man's business could stand such interruptions?"

She smiled fondly at the photograph and then at him, then from her desk drew a small blank book. She turned to a page headed "Bills Payable." There were only two entries, and now she made a third. The dates of all three were about two years apart.

"That setback in my business was Harry." And with the tip of her pencil she touched the oldest child in the photograph. "And this one was Betsy. Today's note is the baby. It has taken me a year to catch up every time."

"No business can do without the boss," agreed the man. "That applies to everything, Betty. You look busy here."

"Oh, I forgot to tell you!" she laughed. She picked up the two documents which Edward Jones had insisted on leaving for her consideration. Her husband read them gravely and passed them back.

"Flattering," he smiled.

"Isn't it?" Her eyes brightened. They had seemed rather tired. "Of course the consolidation's absurd, but Jones would pay me a good price for an outright sale." And she pointed to the line left blank.

"I'll pay you a better, Betty."

"The reason I wouldn't sell to either of you is that I want to keep the business. I'm proud of it."

"All right." He shook hands with her. "A bargain's a bargain."

A boy came in. She had rung for him as soon as she had the check. She indorsed it now and put it in her bank book and gave it to the boy.

"The nurse is outside with the children," the boy reported as he turned to go.

"That's so." Her brow contracted as she looked at her memorandum pad. "I gave Mary an appointment. Harry was to go to the doctor."

"Harry!" The man was instantly concerned. "Is there anything the matter with Harry?"

"He's so nervous."

The nurse came in, carrying the baby and leading a beautiful curly haired little girl, whose face was smeared with chocolate candy. The boy, a fine, hearty little fellow, came stomping in and grinned pleasantly at his father and mother, standing with his sturdy legs outstretched and his fists jammed in his pockets.

"What did the doctor say?" asked Mrs. Sawyer anxiously, and the father leaned forward to listen.

"There's nothing the matter with him," reported the nurse, with a toss of her head and she glared vindictively at the boy. She was a person with wispy hair, an upturned nose and small gray eyes and thin lips, and the lips had a sharp downward droop at the corners. "The doctor says it's temper."

"Temper!" Mrs. Sawyer half raised in her seat, and her eyes flashed with indignation, but the father laughed.

"That's a matter of training," he observed.

"Harry, come away from there, dear!" called the mother.

"Aw, go on!" grinned the boy.

"Harry!"

The boy grinned engagingly.

"Harry!" The nurse's voice. It rasped like a saw file, and every one, even the quiet little figure over near the window, winced. "Didn't you hear your father and mother tell you to come away from there?" she screamed, and the boy kicked at her, his face turning scarlet, his lips pouting in an ugly square, his brows lowering viciously. The curly haired little girl rose out of the corner, where she had been contentedly playing with a discarded typewriter ribbon, and, toddling over to the nurse, kicked at her with all her small might; then, her duty performed, she toddled back to her corner.

"Mary," expostulated Mrs. Sawyer in distress, "you should not jerk the child that way. It only enrages him."

"He won't mind any other way, Mrs. Sawyer," retorted the nurse, her eyes flashing angrily. "You never see the children or you'd know how bad they are!"

"Betsy!"

"Great Scott!"

The little girl looked up at her father with a radiant smile, but as he rushed toward her she scrambled to her feet and ran, holding something behind her back. It was an ink bottle. He took it from her, and she screamed with all the strength of her lungs. The angelic looking mite was a sight to behold. Her face was sticky with brown chocolate candy, the purple stains from the typewriter ribbon were all over her white dress, and the blue ink was on her hands. She smeared some of it on her face and in her curly hair as she cried.

"My, oh, my!" half moaned Mrs. Sawyer. "Why is it that child is always so mussy?"

"Dirt just comes natural to her, Mrs. Sawyer," confidently explained the nurse. Harree!" Her teeth gleamed, and she made a dash for the boy.

He was swinging on the letterpress again, and the water pan was tilting.

Bobbie Was Thrust Aside.

He jumped to elude her, and the water spilled over a pile of mortgage blanks.

"You little demon!" screamed the nurse and made a clutch for him. Almost he escaped, but she caught him by the collar and shook him.

"D—n it, go to blazes!" yelled the boy in a perfect fury of temper.

There was a dead silence, in which Mrs. Sawyer felt the blood slowly leaving her face. Her husband was shocked into numbness. The quiet little figure in the corner near the window scarcely breathed.

Elizabeth Sawyer suddenly buried her face upon her arms and sobbed, but she raised her head in an instant. With a pale, set face she walked over and took the baby in her arms

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD.

"She will get along all right now with a few days' careful nursing," was the doctor's verdict the next morning.

The messenger boy handed in a telegram from Mrs. Reeves before the doctor left, and Dick tore it open nervously and read:

"Father is sick in bed. I cannot leave. Mother."

What was to be done?

Work at the office was piling up and simply must be done if there was any possible way to care for Nell.

"Isn't there anybody in Fairport who can be had even for a day?" Dick asked in desperation. I can send for my mother. If she could start at once she would arrive on the night train."

Dr. Ellson thought a few minutes. "Perhaps I can get Mrs. Jarvis. She was a nurse before her marriage and has accommodated me a few times. I'll phone as soon as I can drive over there."

Dick sent a dispatch to his mother as soon as he received word that Mrs. Jarvis would come, and hurried away to the office as soon as she arrived, leaving directions for her to telephone if any change for the worse was noticed.

Late that night Dick met his mother, who had dropped everything to come to the rescue.

Dr. Ellson had been afraid that Mrs. Morton would not be sympathetic enough to be a good nurse and was happily disappointed at her quiet efficiency. The first two nights Dick and his mother divided the watching that was necessary because of the medicine. After that Nell slept well.

"When can I take her home with me, doctor? We have an easy carriage and good roads," Mrs. Morton asked one morning when Nell began decidedly to mend.

"I hope by the first of next week; the change will do her good. Give her plenty of fresh eggs and milk."

"What about it, Richard? Are you still making yourself a target for all eyes with that stenographer?" she asked, eyeing him sharply while the plans were being discussed.

"No, I've come to my senses. I did not know it was really distressing Nell," he said. "Besides, Miss Rudolph is going away on her vacation next week."

"Good!" Mrs. Morton gave a short, satisfied nod. "I suppose she has two weeks. Can you have your turn then?"

Dick nodded. He was to come to the farm at week ends until his vacation began.

Nell sat up a little Thursday and Dick hovered around her, full of delight at her improvement. Mrs. Morton had a chance to spy on the laundress and reported that she used far more soap than was necessary. "You put your dresses in the wash before they are soiled at all," she told Nell. "It fades them and wears them out, such frequent washing, to say nothing of the bill for work."

Nell looked worried, so the subject was dropped.

After the ironing was done the next day, Mrs. Morton got out the steamer trunk from the attic and began packing it for the journey, Nell selecting the things to go and telling her where to find them. Soon the capable hands had everything ready for an early start Monday.

Household Hints

SOME PALATABLE PIES

The Pie of Five—One large, juicy lemon, one cupful of sugar, one egg, one good-sized potato and one cupful of water. Grate the rind of the lemon and add the lemon juice and egg. Beat well. Grate the potato or put through food chopper. Stir well with the other ingredients and then add the water. Place in a double boiler or sauce pan and let thicken, and bake in two crusts.

Brown Sugar Pie—Two-thirds of a cupful of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of butter and two tablespoonfuls of milk. Cook until waxy looking, then take the yolks of two eggs, one heaping tablespoonful of flour. Mix all together smooth, add to the above ingredients, cook until thick, and add vanilla. Have a baked crust, use the whites beaten stiff for the top, and return to the oven for a minute or two.

Grape Fruit Pie—First bake a shell as for lemon pie, then make a filling as follows: Mix one tablespoonful of cornstarch in a little cold water, and over this pour one cupful of boiling water. To this add the juice of two grape fruit, the grated rind and juice of one orange, the beaten yolks of two eggs, and the white of one, and a small piece of butter. Put all in the double boiler and cook until thick, stirring all the time. When done, put in the shell. Now beat up the white of the second egg with one-half a cupful of sugar until thick, and spread with a knife over the pie. Put in the oven and let brown lightly. Serve cold. This makes a delicious pie.

Delicious Spice Pie—The yolks of three eggs, one and one-half cups of sugar, one cup of cream, two tablespoonfuls of flour, two thirds of a cup of butter, one teaspoonful of spice, cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg. Mix the flour and sugar together, then cream with the butter. Add the yolks of the eggs, beating thoroughly. Next add cream and spices. Use the whites for the frosting.

Molasses Pie—One cup [illegible] one egg, two tablespoonfuls of flour and one tablespoonful of butter. Bake with one crust.

Turnip Pie—Put two cups of mashed cooked turnips into a basin, add three-quarters of a cup of brown sugar, three well beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of molasses, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one tablespoonful of powdered ginger, one teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon, and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt. Mix and bake in one crust like a pumpkin pie.

Sweet Potato Pie—Bake the sweet potatoes and cut them in half-inch slices, put them in a pie plate on the lower crust, fill the plate and sprinkle with butter and sugar and a little water. Put on the upper crust and bake.

SCRAPS OF LACE

Allover val lace makes excellent underwaists to wear with thin blouses. The edges of the underwaist are joined in a French seam overlaid with a lace tape on the right side. A sleeve of the lace reaches half way to the elbow and holds the shield. At the waist there is a lace beading wide enough to take an inch-wide ribbon.

Exquisite accessories in the line of lingerie pillow covers, bedspreads, workbags and table covers may be made from old embroidered underclothes, blouses and dresses. First, cut a pattern of the pillow cover, bedspread or whatever is to be made. Then cut the good parts of the embroidery into pieces of whatever shapes they will allow, and tack them in some balanced and regular form on the pattern.

Join the pieces together with narrow insertion, or where a scalloped edge happens to come at the joining whip it to the next section. Use lace edging for the outside finish.

As delicate doilies are rarely washed or cleaned, this is an excellent use to which to put old embroideries that do not stand much laundering.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Animal School.

One day Adolphus Alligator said, "I'll tell you what;
[illegible] school today because it is so hot.
[illegible] pond and have a swim instead.
Then we will tell Professor Crab that we were sick in bed."

Said Dora Duck, "Of course I'll go!" Dan Dog said, "I, too!"
And Billie Beaver said, "I think it will be fun to do."
And Freddie Fish said, "Count on me; it will be nice and cool;
Although I know the proper place for fishes is in school."

So off they went to Joneses' pond to spend a pleasant day;
But as it happened things turned out in quite another way,
For old Professor Crab said, "Ha! I mean to find out quick
Why all these pupils stayed away; I can't believe they're sick."

Then he set off across the field and very soon he heard
Them splashing. Said he, "They are in swimming, on my word!"
They were so busy playing round and shouting in their fun,
Professor Crab slipped in the pond unseen by anyone.

He first seized Daniel Dog, and said, "Come on, get out of here!"
And led him shivering up the bank, held firmly by the ear.
The other animals were all so scared they couldn't run,
And so the old Professor captured every single one.

And then they all began to cry as loud as loud could be.
Professor Crab said, "Stop at once, you're wet enough," said he
"In order that you may get dry," he told that shivering row,
"You'll do arithmetic; that is the dryest thing I know."

And so those animals were forced to add and multiply
Until Professor Crab was sure that they were good and dry;
And so he took them back to school, and I am pleased to say
That none of them has ever once played hooky since that day.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

ALL SUFFRAGE STATES ACT FOR WOMEN.

Every one of the eleven States where women have full suffrage now has mothers' pensions. The Legislatures of Arizona, Montana, Wyoming and Kansas passed such laws this year, and the other States had previously adopted the system which provides for the care of children of widowed or destitute mothers.

The same House in Maine which failed to give the necessary two-thirds to the suffrage amendment has just defeated a mothers' pension bill. The Senate, which did give the two-thirds to suffrage, was favorable to the bill for the mothers and children. Is there a connection?

FIRST VOTES CAST IN NEVADA.

Nevada women voted for the first time in history on March 27 at a special school bond election in Sparks. It was the first election held since the passage of the suffrage amendment last November. The number of women voting was 194 and the number of men 244. Both men and women voted heavily against the bonds.

Mrs. Lillian Stone was the first woman to cast her ballot at the schoolhouse, where the election was held. She went with her husband, and after voting, Mrs. Stone remarked: "Why, that's easy." This was the feeling of most of the women. The Sparks Tribune says that their intelligence "was a lesson to some of the male voters."

USES WOMEN BUT PAYS THEM LESS.

The American Express Company is putting young women in the places of men clerks in its executive offices in New York, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

"In one department we had nineteen men doing a certain kind of work," says Robert Mundle, an auditor. "When we dropped them we discovered that nine women could attend to the same work as well, if not better, than the men had."

But, whereas the company paid the men clerks $60 a month, it pays the women clerks $40.

NEW JERSEY NEWS.

Unusual Suffrage Activity Throughout the State.

Miss Florence Leech, field organizer for the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, announces that wherever she goes she find suffrage interest at white heat. Miss Leech has just finished a most successful week of campaigning in Ocean county, and is touring Gloucester county this week, speaking for the suffrage organizations in Woodbury, Glassboro, Pitman, Thorofare, Wenonah and other places. Through the efforts of Miss Leech and other volunteer organizers of the New Jersey Association, that organization now has 130 branches. Local headquarters are now being carried on by the following branches of the association: The DeHart League of Jersey City, the Boonton, Newton, Atlantic City, Summit, Passaic, Plainfield and Elizabeth Equal Suffrage Leagues, the Equal Suffrage League of the Oranges, the Paterson Woman Suffrage League, the Newark Woman Suffrage Party and the Trenton Suffrage Campaign Committee. Summer headquarters are soon to be opened in Camden, Wildwood, New Brunswick and other places.

BILLY SUNDAY AND SUFFRAGE.

The coffee house which is being conducted by the Woman Suffrage League of Paterson, and which adjoins the Tabernacle in which Billy Sunday preaches, is a great success. The league is not only making money by the sale of coffee, tea chocolate, soup, bread, pies and other good things, all made by the Suffragists themselves, but is daily enrolling new members from among the crowds who come to hear the revivalist.

NEWARK RECRUITING STATION.

The recruiting station which is being conducted by the Woman Suffrage Party on Broad street, opposite the City Hall, is meeting with great success. There are a number of interesting exhibits in the windows, but the one which attracts most attention, and which neither children nor grown-ups are content to pass without investigation, is that of a group of thirteen dolls, dressed in yellow, representing the twelve suffrage States and the territory of Alaska. Among the well-known Suffragists who are to speak at the special meetings held at the recruiting station are Everett Colby, Mrs. F. E. Pattison, ex-president of the New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Arthur Hunter, president of the Montclair Equal Suffrage League; Mrs. F. H. Colvin, vice-president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association; Miss Alice Lakey, the well known pure food expert; Miss Esther G. Ogden, president of the Elizabeth Suffrage League, and Dr. Ralph B. Urmy, of Newark.

BLUE TAFFETA FOR DANCING.

Amid the prettiest of the new flaring skirts are those designed for evening wear. Though the narrow skirts when not too extreme had much to recommend them after all there is nothing so daintily feminine as a flaring petticoat revealing glimpses of prettily shod feet. Blue taffeta served as foundation for this frock where the long-neglected skirt bottom has been recalled and trimmed first by a corded piping of the material and above this two bias folds. The unusually generous fullness of the skirt has been restrained at the hip line by a double row of shirring, the same marking the waistline. The upper portion of the surplice bodice is of lace joined beneath an applied garland of silk flowers to the lower portion of satin. Blue satin pipes the neck and sleeve edges.

A MARGIN OF SAFETY

An engineer never thinks of building a bridge without allowing a sufficient margin of safety. No more can you build a successful career without a margin of "capital" safety in your business.

The average business man knows that it is not too little BUSINESS, but rather too little CAPITAL with which to handle his growing business, that gives him the most concern.

Why not, therefore, remedy this weakness by laying aside monthly, through the medium of our Installment Bond plan, say $25. In 38 months you will have acquired $1,000 additional capital to be drawn upon as your needs require.

Allow us to explain the details.

BAPTISTS REVIEW SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Interesting Reports Are Presented at the Annual Parish Meeting.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

F. W. Jones Succeeds himself as Deacon; Alexander Gilbert and J. H. Case Chosen Trustees, and W. W. F. Randolph, Assistant Clerk.

Excellent reports showing a successful year were presented at the annual meeting of the First Baptist church, last night, and after the business of the evening there was a social hour and refreshments served. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the church, presided at the meeting calling for the various reports which were presented by the church clerk, O. B. Leonard, and other officers.

Considerable time was spent in discussing the matter of erasing certain names from the membership roll, persons who cannot be reached and others who have requested such action. In all the names of forty-three persons were erased last night. There are about thirty-one additional names to be acted upon. The present membership is about 700.

Frank W. Jones was re-elected deacon for the full term and Alexander Gilbert was re-elected trustee for a full term, and J. Herbert Case was elected a trustee to succeed the late George F. White, who died last year. Deacon W. F. Randolph was elected assistant to O. B. Leonard, the church clerk. Miss Laura J. Runyon was re-appointed a board of manager for the Baptist Home for the Aged, and Mrs. Howard M. Case, Miss May Shreve and Mrs. Mary Brown were re-appointed assistant managers for the Home.

The report of the beneficience committee presented by Samuel Case showed that last year's balance of $527.32 the year's receipts were $11,639.33, the present balance being $251.65.

The report of John G. McLaughlin, church treasurer, showed receipts of $7,799.08 from pew rentals, budget and basket collections, and the disbursements the same with a balance of $58.35, which included salaries, music, fuel, light, repairs, etc.

Wilbur W. F. Randolph in a special report for the beneficence committee, showed that 416 packages of envelopes had been sent out and $8,503.32 subscribed to the budget system for the year. Frank W. Jones, reporting for the deacon's fund, showed with last year's balance, total receipts of $1,237 and the present balance $422.25. Of this amount $814.75 was expended for the relief of the poor.

Mrs. G. H. Robins reported for the Women's Missionary Circle, which comprises all of the women's mission societies of the church, reviewing the year's work. Many boxes and barrels were sent to mission fields and the receipts fro mall sources amounted to $1,811.77. A few reports not ready last night, including the Bible school, will be presented next Wednesday night. During the social hour ice cream and cake were served.

MIANTONOMO TRIBE GIVE A LADIES' NIGHT AFFAIR

"Ladies' night" was thoroughly enjoyed by the members of the Miantonomo Tribe, No. 148, Improved Order of Red Men, and their friends, which was held in Unity Hall, last night. Fully two hundred were present from this and nearby cities. The evening was spent in an informal social way, dancing being the main feature, and at a late hour refreshments were served. Delegations were present from Iona, No. 14, of Plainfield; Tonaluka, of Cranford; Tonaluka Tribe, of Cranford; Menno, of Westfield, and Mariticong, of Somerville, and Shabbecong Tribe, of Hampton Junction.

The committee in charge of last night's affair was composed of the following: Thomas N. Parsons, chairman; Daniel W. Mundy, chairman of refreshment committee; Charles D. Holstein, secretary; Charles Meyer, Jr., floor manager, and Charles L. Holstein, Jr., assistant floor manager.

The affair last night was the first of a series of dances which were begun to increase the membership in the organization.

IMPUDENCE COST HIM $5.

Because he was impudent to Roundamen Andrew Saffron when the latter "called" him for riding a bicycle without a light on Liberty street, last night, Peter Szymarski was sentenced to pay a fine of $5 when arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court, this morning. He lives at 211 West Front street.

DR. B. F. LEONARD WEDS MISS SWAIN

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie Officiates at the Home of the Bride's Father.

Miss Stella Swain, daughter of Philip Swain, of Craig place, the borough, and Dr. B. F. Leonard, of this city, were married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's father, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, officiating, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The bride was gowned in white charmeuse and wore a tulle veil. She carred a shower bouquet. She was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Swain, as maid of honor, who wore a gown of pink charmeuse and carried a bouquet of Killarney roses. Walter P. Swain, brother of the bride, was the best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridal party entered the parlor while the wedding march was being played by Miss Helen George. The ceremony was performed before a large bank of palms and ferns.

MRS. ROUNDEY ASKS FOR MORE ALIMONY

Expenses of Pending Suits Given as the Reason for Demand.

An increase of allmony for Mrs. Florence E. Roundey pending the trial of suits between her and John K. Roundey, president of the Endress Company, has been asked Vice-Chancellor Emery. The case will be tried May 7.

The application was made on the ground that a sum formerly allowed by Vice-Chancellor Stevens, on agreement between counsel, was insufficient. To this was added the statement that the husband had instituted a proceeding for absolute divorce against his wife, charging her with misconduct, and that she would be put to some expense to meet this charge.

The vice-chancellor reserved decision, but said that he was not inclined to increase the alimony, but that in view that a new situation had arisen and that Mrs. Roundey would have to defend new charges, he believed that he should give additional counsel fees to Richard Stockton, her solicitor.

REGRET EXPRESSED OVER RESIGNATION

Rev. C. L. Goodrich's Letter Passed on at Church's Annual Meeting.

Every indication of healthy activity and progress was evidenced in the annual reports submitted by the various branches of work in the Congregational church at the yearly metings of the church and societies last night, a large majority of the membership being present at the gathering. The most important matter brought to the attention of the respective meetings was the resignation of Rev. Charles Lymon Goodrich, who for thirty-one years has guided the work of the church. In view of the fact that his letter read to the congregation Sunday morning was self-explanatory and stated emphatically that the action was final, there was no other course left open to the members than to accept the resignation with regret. A committee composed of Alexander Millar, John M. Whiton and Alonzo Weseman was appointed to engross suitable resolutions expressive of the feeling of regret on the part of the members of the church.

Edward L. Suffern presided at the church meeting and Sydney Dunning and Henry Nomer were re-elected deacons. Alexander Millar, John A Powlison and James McClymont were elected members o the official board. Andrew N. Nielson was re-elected clerk of the church. Charles Steiner ,treasurer, reported receipts for the year of $9,500, with a balance and all bills paid.

Following the church meeting the societies of the church met with John M. Whiton acting as chairman. The reading of the minutes of the last quarterly meeting, inclusive of the treasurer's report, indicated that a balance remained in the treasury and that all bills had been paid. The society also acepted the pastor's resignation after which the annual election of officers took place. This resulted as follows: Trustees, Everett L. Morgan, Charles E. Steiner and Frank A. Weeks; clerk, Andrew N. Nielson; auditor, Edward L. Suffern.

TURTLE BAY IS NOW NAVAL BASE

Washington Hears That 4,000 Japanese Marines Have Landed There.

REPORT IS UNOFFICIAL

F. J. Goodenow, of John Hopkins University, in Conference With the President Regarding China-Japanese Situation.

Washington, April 15—Reports that Turtle Bay, Lower California, had been seized by the Japanese and transformed into a naval base reached the State and Navy Departments unofficially today. Orders immediately were sent for full particular. Rear-Admiral Howard, in command of the U. S. squadron off the west coast of Mexico, was instructed to investigate.

F. J. Goodenow, president of the Johns Hopkins University, and up to a year ago adviser to Yuan Shi Kai, called at the White House today and had a conference with President Wilson. Because of Professor Goodenow's intimate knowledge of China's affairs, it is believed the China-Japanese situation was considered at length. Professor Goodenow declined to discuss the nature of his visit.

According to reports, Japanese marines and sailors, 4,000 strong, backed by five Japanese warships and six colliers and supply ships, are occupying Turtle Bay. A base in which half the Japanese navy could anchor, Turtle bay today would be a hard place for any warships to enter if the Japanese wished to keep them out. The only excuse advanced by the Japanese for their occupation of the bay so far is that Asama, one of their first-class cruisers, is aground near the entrance to the harbor.

Although no efforts were made by the Japanese to work their grounded ship out, sixty tons of ammunition were landed at the camp, together with many boxes covered with canvas. Most of the supplies, which were taken ashore in cutters, were carried inland by sailors.

Turtle Bay is on the west coast of California, almost directly opposite Guaymas, on the Sonora line of railroad leading from Nogales, on the American frontier. From Guaymas it would be necessary for Japanese attempting to reach the Japanese camp to cross the Gulf of Lower California to San Juan, and thence to travel overland, via Han Maria, to Turtle Bay.

PARTS OF DISEASED COW FOUND IN SHOP

Health Board May Take Action Against West Third Street Butcher.

Dr. I. T. Shaw, veterinarian of the State Board of Health, and Health Officer Chandler inspected Julius Valinski's butcher shop at 515 West Third street and found portions of a diseased cow, yesterday afternoon.

The dealer claimed that the meat was all right, and part of the lungs had already been given to customers. An examination of the remainder of the lungs and of other organs disclosed an abundance of active tubercles. The slaughterhouse was visited at once where the remainder of the carcass was found, condemned and destroyed and the dealer threatened with prosecution.

The health officer has for some time suspected that diseased meat was being sold in Plainfield and has made continued efforts to secure proof. The inspection made yesterday confirmed his suspicions.

If evidences of any other violations of the pure food law are found the health officer will use vigorous means for the prosecution of offenders. The penalty for a first offense is $50; $100 for the second and $200 for the third and subsequent offenses.

TERRIFIC BATTLE IN CARPATHIANS

4,000,000 Men Engaged in Struggle to Command Gate way to Hungary.

REPORT HEAVY LOSSES

Intervention by Roumania in the War is Imminent and She is Expected to Join the Allies as Soon as it Becomes to Her Advantage.

Petrograd, April 15—The battle in the Carpathians is the most tremendous struggle that the war has yet produced. The two opponents number something like 4,000,000 men. The process of concentration on this portion of the frontier is still proceeding.

The Russians are still either advancing steadily or repulsing all attacks with enormous losses to the Austro-Germans. The daily toll of prisoners has mounted to thousands.

The battle now involves practically the entire ridge between the Sanok-Homonna Railway on the right and the Stryj-Munkacs line on the left.

A few miles west of the former line the Russians, who were pushing forward south of Stropko, penetrated about twenty miles of Hungarian soil.

Eastward from the point where the railway crosses the range to the immediate vicinity of the Samber-Ozgorod Railway they hold the southern slopes just beneath the ridge.

The summits of the Uzsok pass are apparently still in the hands of the Austrians, but are being most stubbornly contested.

A desperate attack by the Austrians on the main ridge south of Volosatje, which was captured by the Russians a day or two earlier, is evidently intended to prevent the Czar's troops from securing the Uzsok pass from the rear.

Six miles east of the pass, however, the Russians have occupied the village of Vaisokonizi, and are evidently threatening the right of the Austrian local position.

Paris, April 14—The French war office gave out the following today:

"Further gains for the French troops were officially announced. Despite the obstinate resistance of the Germans the French troops advanced 400 yards.

"Avillers, 4 miles south of Marcheville and 12 miles northeast of St. Mihiel, has been the scene of sharp fighting. It is officially stated that the German trenches have been completely wrecked.

"In the Ailly forest southeast of St. Mihiel the French also are gaining the advantage."

CARPENTERS' UNION TO OPPOSE BAN ON SHINGLES

More than one hundred and fifty members of the local Carpenters Union attended the quarterly meeting in Trades Council Hall last night, for the purpose of hearing reports for the past three months and discussing various matters concerning the trade. The proposed anti-shingle ordinance came up for a lengthy discussion and the carpenters added their disapproval to that of the Trades Council, which was announced two weeks ago. A committee of three was appointed by President Harold Dahl, to watch all proceedings in the shingle proposition, reporting any move to the union. In the event of a public hearing taking place, the carpenters will have an opposing delegation present.

The employment by the Board of Education of men of various trades and listed as janitors in the city schools was talked over at some length. Several infractions of union rules were reported and these were referred to the Trades Council for action, as more than one trade is concerned. No action regarding the proposed increase in carpenters wages was taken as the boss carpenters have until May 1 to give their answer.

DECISION IS RESERVED IN AUTO ACCIDENT CASE

The case in which A. L. Barton, of New York, a former resident of this borough, sued William Sandy, a retired merchant, of Newark, for damage amounting to $76 done to his auto last Columbus Day, when he ran into it at the junction of Broad street and Springfield road, within the limits of the town of Westfield, was heard before Judge McCann, seated in the First District Court, at Newark, Tuesday. The defendant based his defense on the plea that the accident was one of those which could not be avoided, while Mr. Barton's case was based on the contention that his wife was driving his car on the right side of the road when his car was struck by Sandy's which was on the wrong side of the road. In other words, Mr. Barton's contention was that if Sandy had kept his car on the right side of the road the accident would never had occurred. After hearing both sides of the case Judge McCann reserved decisionuntil the latter part of this week.

RECORD CROWDS ATTEND BARNUM & BAILEY CIRCUS

The Barnum and Bailey Circus, now playing at Madison Square Garden, New York, has made the hit of its career. The universal comment is that it is by far the greatest circus ever seen in New York, and that the program this year contains more real foreign novelties than ever before. In the long list of excellent acts that are shown it would be hard to decide which of them pleases the most. There are so many new features and surprises that one just has to say that it is a wonderful show and let it go at that.

Never before have the newspapers of New York commented at such length on the excellence of the Greatest Show on Earth.

The three herds of war elephants is the act of the hour, and a distinct novelty is their presentation by lady trainers.

Pallenberg's Teddy Bears is a wonderful act for the children and an eye-opener for the grown-ups. These animals skate about on roller skates and ride upon bicycles just like human beings. Madam Bradna's Angel Horses and educated dogs is another beautiful number that appeals especially to the ladies and children. Four hundred and eighty circus artists take part in the great program that includes representatives from every part of the world. It is truly a "circus of all nations." The engagement at Madison Square Garden will continue, with performances twice daily until April 26, and residents of nearby cities must go there to see it, as no performances will be given in Brooklyn, New Jersey nor in Connecticut.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

Elizabeth, April 15.—Arthur J. Hanley, complainant, was the purchaser yesterday at a sheriff's sale of a plot of land owned by the Central Holding Company and located southeast of East Seventh street, Plainfield, and 400 feet southwest of Leland avenue. The purchase price was $1,000.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I desire to deny the charge against the boys, John Cottrell and Clinton S. Berrien, which was made in police court, as recorded in the Daily Press on April 13, for using cats or any animals for vivisection. It is absolutely false. Clinton S. Berrien has never at any time used a knife on any live animal.

About the laboratory in his home: a small experimental laboratory was fitted up by a few students to carry out experiments in connection with study of science at the High School. During the winter of 1912 and 1913 a few dead animals were dissected. These animals were furnished by students. They did not belong to the neighborhood.

The cat that was killed at 6:30 the afternoon of the 12th inst., was shot while running out of the ice-box closet down the back steps. It had been a nuisance about the house for the past three weeks, and did not appear to have had enough to eat to keep it from seeking food on my premises. For that reason and no other was the cat put out of the way.

I regret the S. P. C. A. was not called upon to take care of it. The boys impulsively used the quickest means and a very humane way to get rid of it.

The statement made in police court about his laboratory is untrue and without foundation, which can be proven by witnesses, and again I desire to contradict the charge that the boys ever captured any animals for vivisection. The laboratory was not constructed for that purpose. There has been no violation of the law in my house, and the so-called laboratory is nothing but a valuable collection of dyes and chemicals.

PRUDENTIAL SELLS ONLY PARTICIPATING INSURANCE

Agents of the Prudential Insurance Company of America began on Monday, April 12, to sell participating policies of life insurance in accordance with recent action taken by the board of directors under the provision of a new law signed by Governor Fielder of New Jersey. In future all Prudential policies will be participating in form as well as in fact.

The act in question was introduced and passed for the purpose of permitting stock insurance companies to change from non-participating to participating companies, and is in line with the mutualization plans of the Prudential.

Outstanding Prudential policies have now automatically become participating without the necessity of legislation, and policyholders will benefit accordingly.

As soon as the bill had been signed by the Governor application was made to George M. LaMonte, State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance, and his approval was also secured.

TEMPLE SHOLEM BARN B DANCE A GREAT SUCCESS

The barn dance given by the Young Folks' Leage of Temple Sholem, last night, in Debele's Hall, was enjoyed by 500 young people. The hall was appropriately decorated with plows, hoes, wheelbarrows and hay, creating an atmosphere of the barn. Squiers' orchestra furnished music for the occasion. Guests were present from New York, Perth Amboy, Newark, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Somerville and this city. A feature of the evening was the presentation of a chicken, which was won by J. E. Myers. At a late hour refreshments were served.

The committee in charge of the affair was commended on the manner in which the program was carried out. The committee was composed of Morton Hochberger, chairman; Miss Saidie Canter, Miss Lillian Shrager, Miss Rae Preger, Miss Lillian Rothstein, Miss Ruth Martin, Dave Rothstein, Leo Hirsh and Sam Hochberger.

WILL PROBABLY NAME THREE PATROLMEN INSTEAD OF ONE

Members of the Police Board met last night and prepared the new police ordinance to be presented to the Common Council at the adjourned meeting next Tuesday night. Although nothing definite was decided upon the advisability of naming three new patrolmen instead of one was discussed, and in all probability the Board will increase the force to this extent. The subject of purchasing a motor police patrol was talked of informally but no one model has been selected.

At the conclusion of the recent examinations, in which twelve men engaged in competitive tests for the vacancy caused by the retirement of Nicholas Meyers, four names were selected and presented to the Board. These were John Wirth, Samuel Kriney, Raymond Strayer and Joseph Dunlap. The three new men will be picked from this list.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure, and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wipsy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—Adv.

Dear Sirs:-

We have now been using your Electric Power for our Trenton-Factory for the past five years.

During this time we have had exceptionally good service, due to the fact that a sufficient amount of power is always available for increased needs at all times.

We have found this more economical than to operate our own Power Plant and consider it gives us a more satisfactory condition, as we can devote our entire attention to manufacturing watches.

Yours truly

cording to a despatch from Salonika, published in the Tribuna today, which quotes two military personages from Bucharest. The two men, whose connnection with the Roumanian war department is hinted, declare that diplomatic conferences with the allies and negotiations with Bulgaria and Greece have brought Roumania to a diplomatic position which insures her ability to enter the war on the side of the allies at the moment it becomes to her advantage.

Berlin, April 14—The following report from the German general staff covering Carpathian operations until April 12 was issued here today:

"The Russian attempts to force an invasion of Hungary by using the Przemysl siege army has failed. Since the Russian attacks, as Czertoez and Mezolaborez were definitely checked the enemy has been attacked more to eastward. The Russians were also repulsed near Koziowa with heavy losses."

The following was given out at German headquarters between the Meuse and Moselle, yesterday:

"There were only isolated engagements. French attacks near Marcheville, near and in Priest Wald, Le-Petre forest, northeast of Manonviller and south of Hartsmannsweiler Kopf all failed. On our east front the situation is unchanged."

Amsterdam, April 15—Spotted fever is reported to have broken out among the members of the garrison and civil population at Semlin, on the Austrian side of the River Save opposite Belgrade.

Airmen from the allied front dropped bombs on the railway between Aix La Chapelle and Liege yesterday. According to reports from Liege the German line of railway communication was damaged.

London, April 14—An emergency call summoning a detachment of special constables to Scotland Yard was issued at headquarters today. A previous call was issued when German citizens were rounded up here. This fact caused reports that a raid on alleged spies' residences was to be conducted.

LITERARY.

General Goethals proved himself a great administrator as well as a great engineer. His task, "Organization of the Force," in building the Panama Canal, is the subject of his article in the May Scribner. Evidently it was not all smooth sailing, and his frank admission of some of the causes that handicapped his work will be read with special interest. There was more or less friction among responsible leaders, and General Goethals makes quite plain his own feeling about certain matters. He pays a compliment to Joseph B. Bishop, the efficient Secretary of the Isthmian Commission, who also published the Canal Record, the medium for supplying official orders to all members of the force.

"FATHER AND SONS" BANQUET AT THE Y. M. C. A. TONIGHT

Casting Their Shadows Before

[The mother of a famous dancer says she knew her daughter was destined for terpsichorean celebrity because, when a little baby, she used to kick her feet.]

When Bryan first beheld the light—a bald and red and wrinkled mite—
He closed his eyes and uttered cries,
Denoting high ambition.
And as his father heard him yell, his manly breast began to swell
With pride and joy—he knew his boy
Would be a politician.

When Goethals was a babykin he'd dig his thumb into his chin
With wabbly jabs and wavering stabs
And queer and curious motions.
And thus his doting mother knew that,
when to man's estate he grew,
He'd dig the ditch at Colon which
Would join the rolling oceans.

When Jesse James was six months old he loved the sight of shining gold,
And every time he'd see a dime
He'd instantly demand it.
Which made his stricken mother sigh, for well she knew that by and by
Her darling one would buy a gun
And go and be a bandit.

PERFECT NEW DEVICE FOR TRANSPORTING WOUNDED.

Loading of War Ambulance Done From Side Instead of Rear.

"It is not only the faithful devotion to duty of our surgeons which deserves praise," writes a contributor to the Figaro of Paris, "but recognition should also be made of the intelligence and ingenuity displayed by the officials working, so to speak, on the outskirts of the medical profession—that is, those who are doing all in their power to relieve the sufferings of wounded or ill soldiers.

"One of the questions which have preoccupied the attention of the medical authorities ever since the outbreak of the war has been the removal of the wounded from the fields of battle. It was realized that such removal must be promptly and easily effected and at the same time done in a way to cause the least pain. This problem appears now to have been solved. The superintendent of the military hospital at Versailles has invented a device by which the loading of an ambulance is done from the side instead of from the rear. No more bad shocks or dangerous hitches. The stretcher on which the wounded is lying is put right down on boards projecting horizontally from the side of the vehicle, and with little effort it can be pushed into the car.

"The wounded man is then easily accessible to the surgeon, who only needs to raise the shades on either side of the cot to get at him and examine his injuries without disturbing the other three patients, for whom there is room in the car. After the stretchers have been removed a double folding bench is let down in the middle of the car between the cots. This bench extends through the length of the ambulance, and on it can be seated six to eight slightly wounded soldiers, back to back. The whole arrangement is very practical.

"Vehicles of this kind can be driven at a speed of fifteen to eighteen miles an hour without causing the least inconvenience to the occupants."

"TWO EYES LUXURY," HE SAYS

General Maunoury Philosophical Over the Loss of One of Them.

The Paris Matin gives an eyewitness account of the wounding of General Maunoury and General de Villaret, who were shot while at the front. It follows:

"They were inspecting a trench which had not been fired on for several days, at a moment when perfect calm reigned along both lines. Arriving at a loophole De Villaret regarded the enemy's trench and then, leaning toward his companion, said, 'See how extraordinary it is.'

"Maunoury had just lowered his eye to the level of the peephole when a bullet removed his eye, broke his jaw and struck De Villaret in the middle of the forehead. Maunoury fell to the bottom of the trench immediately, but Villaret, believing he himself had received only a mere clod of earth, remained upright, assisted Maunoury and walked 1,500 yards before he himself fell.

"A scientist who was visiting his friend Maunoury supported him, saying, 'The loss of an eye means the loss of only one twenty-fourth of the sight.' When Maunoury heard this he murmured, 'If that is so two eyes seem almost a luxury.'"

FIGHT MILITARY FASHIONS.

Women Will Not Use Anything That Has War Glamour.

A fight against the military note in spring fashions for women is planned by the Cleveland Circle of the Woman's Peace Party. Members of the party decline to lend their approval of the European conflict by wearing gear military trappings.

"We shall ignore this fashion flurry by wearing our old clothes or waiting until the manufacturers give us what we want," said Mrs. Milton R. Schatz, official mouthpiece of the Cleveland circle.

Mrs. Frank M. Kimball, a member of the advisory council, believes that the acceptance of military modes is due to the glamour of war as reflected in the striking applications of buttons and braid.

THE GARNISHEE LAW.

One of the acts of the Legislature which has been signed by the Governor and immediately went into effect is the garnishee law. A similar measure has been defeated annually for many years, but the various business men's organizations, including that from Plainfield, made such a strong plea for its passage that it went through this year with little opposition. The law permits a compulsory claim against wages over $18 a week being levied on an employe through the employer by creditors. The amount that can be taken in one week is ten per cent.

The legislation will undoubtedly tend to decrease the number of "dead beats," and while it will be unpleasant for the employers to hold out on their workers, they will be compelled to do so by law, and see that the money reaches the proper channels.

The proposition, while it will help reputable storekeepers to do business and collect what is honestly due them, will also encourage a certain type of credit house to extend additional credit on the strength of the job a man holds.

The Newark News calls attention to one unpleasant feature when it says that "the law is likely to cause a good deal of hard feeling and trouble for all concerned, especially as it permits proceedings to be begun without notice to the debtor. While it runs the risk of making the man who has been more tempting than he should be in offering credit to a preferred debtor, it tends to put the employe in a rather helpless position and imposes a distasteful and irritating task on the employer."

ARMS FROM NEUTRALS.

During their war with Japan the Russians purchased the bulk of their military supplies in Germany, the Krupp factory alone keeping 25,000 men at work night and day in order that Russian orders might be promptly filled. German officers as well as German guns assisted the Turks in their recent war with Greece, and other instances of the same sort could be cited. Nobody complained because the Germans—as long as their government officially took no part—were entirely within their rights.

We can readily imagine the amusement and mockery at Berlin if the Mikado had sent a "note" to the Kaiser complaining that, though all this was within the letter of international law, it was violative of the "true spirit of neutrality." Yet precisely such a ridiculous complaint as this is brought against the United States in the latest "note" from Germany.

Apparently, the only sure method of exhibiting the spirit of "true neutrality" is to take the side of Germany openly, ruling in her favor and against the Allies in all cases. Indeed, this appears to have been the subconscious German attitude from the very outset.

The German government and people seem to be obsessed by the notion that they are exceptional and that in some mysterious way their privileges have been made superior to those of the rest of the world. Thomas Jefferson would have despaired of inducing them to accept his famous equal rights doctrine. They would have gravely contended that, while in a sense all other men are born free and equal, the Germans are also born free and superior, and that therefore they have the right to claim privileges and immunities properly denied to ordinary mortals.

Through the persistent efforts of Captain Charles A. Petersen and others in Company K, the bill has at last passed the Legislature authorizing an armory for Plainfield. In the strict economy program which has been worked out by the Appropriations Committee there is no chance of the money for the building being available this year. The members of the company will undoubtedly start in at the opening of the session next year, and they should then receive the necessary appropriation, so that Plainfield can have a home for the best separate military company in the State.

There's another fine editorial in store for Press readers on Saturday. The writer is one of the newcomers to the city who has made many friends, and he will tell about a great work which is being done to make better Americans in New York City.

These are the days when the amateur gardeners have their innings. There are some rash promises made as to what is going to raised, but they usually materialize in a few weeds and upset tempers.

Incidentally "swat the fly" became a popular slogan with some ninety millions more or less of Americans yesterday when the two big leagues opened their baseball season.

They say that the Golden Calf shocked Moses. Wonder what would happened if he should wander into some of the New York musical comedies?

"YOU QUIT KIDDIN'," SAYS GIRL TO PRESIDENT.

Miss Mary Tumulty, eldest daughter of the president's secretary, was thirteen years old March 25. That night the Tumulty telephone rang, and Miss Mary was called. When she said "Hello!" a voice on the other end of the wire replied:

"This is President Wilson. I want to congratulate you on your birthday."

"You quit kiddin'," said Miss Mary. "You can't fool me."

"Why, this is the president," the voice replied. "I trust you do not object to me calling you on the phone. I merely wanted to congratulate you."

Mr. Tumulty appeared and immediately assured his daughter she was not being "kidded," but was really talking with the president of the United States, and then Miss Mary dropped the receiver, trembling.

MINE SWEEPERS SHOW CONTEMPT FOR PERIL.

Linked Trawlers Dare Winter Gales to Clear the North Sea.

A young American who recently signed for service as a member of the crew of a mine sweeper sends the following account of one of his trips out into the North sea:

"'Order—You proceed at once to —— and will sweep the area marked on the accompanying chart.' This was the order which sent us hammering into the head seas of a lively wind on a bitterly cold Sunday morning at 4 o'clock. It takes a tight vessel to survive the welter and smother which rise so quickly in these waters. In the winter months, especially, the work goes on amid conditions of great severity, and our ships frequently keep the sea as mine sweepers when as trawlers they would flee to the shelter of their harbors.

"Our ship is one of the best of her stanch type, and she reeled along wonderfully on that Sunday morning. Somewhere in the darkness to starboard there showed through the whirling snow the lights of another vessel running on the same course as ourselves, and at the same speed. The dawn came up and showed her to be kin to us and the signals at once made clear that in her we beheld our sweeping partner. There arises a curious respect for her. She must know quite well that at any moment her plunging bows may meet a mine and then there would be a vacancy at her end of the drag tackle and vacancies in little cottages in the isles.

"Fifteen hours of drenching and buffeting were our portion that day. The vessel, with the pull of the tackle and the drive of her engines keeping her down like a half tide rock, was never clear of the sweeping seas. Thud, slap, crash, swish, they came over her bows and swirled along the deck, never ceasing their constant assault.

"When the snow passed there was a glimpse of sun. Then the wind backed against the sun and came down on us in wild gusts, icy cold. As the afternoon wore on the cold increased, and just before nightfall came a strange lull which let in biting frost. The hardy fellows on board were stiff and numb before the day was done, and when the gear was slipped and shipped nobody was sorry.

"The disposal of the mines recovered depends upon their character and the circumstances of their recovery. Frequently our gunners explode them by firing into them from the deck."

VETERAN TIRED OF WAR.

It's No Profession, For Gentlemen, Declares Major Johnson.

Major C. Page Johnson, a retired officer of the United States army and a veteran of Indian and the Spanish-American war, who returned from Europe on the Holland-American liner Nieuw Amsterdam, said that the war was such awful slaughter on both sides that the government at Washington ought to take steps to stop it for the cause of humanity.

"Once war was a profession for gentlemen," the major said, "but now it is not a profession, but a business for slaughterers. Along the battle front 3,000,000 men have been drawn up facing each other since the fall and will remain under the severe tension until May. Murderous machines are dealing death to thousands daily of both armies in the field. Germany is formidable in the faith of her people that her cause is just. Her women are brave and show wonderful spirit. It is difficult to foretell what the end of the conflict will be."

POPULATION OF BERLIN.

Said to Have Dropped Below the 2,000,000 Mark.

In consequence of the war the population of Berlin (exclusive of the suburban towns) has again dropped below the 2,000,000 mark, which it had crossed several years ago. The population at the beginning of January was returned at 1,982,154, which signifies a loss of 97,000 for the year.

This loss, however, does not take account of the men who have gone into the war, who are still counted as if present; it seems to be due mostly to the removal of working people to the suburbs and to more distant districts.

Snuff Spoons.

All the world is familiar with snuff boxes, but snuff spoons are pretty little refinements of which this generation has hardly heard. Very probably they came into use about two years after Sir George Rooke's expedition to Vigo bay in 1702, when he captured half a ton of tobacco and snuff from the Spanish galleons, and snuff thus became a common article in England. One of the characters in a comedy published at Oxford in 1704, entitled "An Act at Oxford," by Thomas Baker, says, "But I carry sweet snuff for the ladies," to which Arabella replies: "A spoon too. That's very gallant, for to see some people run their fat fingers into a box is as nauseous as eating without a fork." In the forties and fifties of the last century snuff spoons were still in use on the Scottish border. They were of bone and of a size to go into the snuffbox. People fed their noses, it was said, as naturally as they carried soup to their mouths.—London Mail.

What Could He Do?

"I hate to be contradicted," she said.

"Then I won't contradict you," he returned.

"You don't love me," she asserted.

"I don't," he admitted.

"You are a hateful thing!" she cried.

"I am," he replied.

"I believe you are trying to tease me," she said.

"I am," he conceded.

"And you do not love me."

"I don't."

For a moment she was silent.

"Well," she said at last, "I do hate a man who's weak enough to be led by a woman."—Houston Post.

Optimist and Pessimist.

In a contest in the Woman's Home Companion the first prize for the definition of pessimist went to Miss D. McKelvey of Colorado, who wrote: "A pessimist is a man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing." The first prize for the definition of optimist went to Mrs. L. K. Carter of Pennsylvania. Her definition follows: "An optimist is one who thinks the high cost of living is worth the price."

WHEN THE BOSS PLAYS HOOKEY

TWO DAYS MORE TO WIN PRESS TOURS TO PANAMA-PACIFIC FAIR

Race Ends Saturday Night and Winners Will Be Announced as Soon as Votes Are Counted—Final Instructions for Contestants.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The names of candidates who have not been active since the close of the Special Prize Contest, will be dropped from the list of Candidates Vote Standing. Candidates who are active report that oftentimes they are unable to get subscriptions where the party has promised support to one of these non-active candidates, for this reason. Unless these candidates satisfy the Contest Department prior to Friday evening, April 16, it will be necessary to drop their names from the list. This is done in order that active candidates may not be hampered in any way in securing subscriptions.

The contest story for today is brim full of valuable information for candidates and their friends, and as these instructions may not appear again, it is suggested that candidates preserve this article for future reference. The last counting of votes by the Contest Department will be made on Friday evening, April 16, and will include all ballots cast up to 8 p. m. of that evening. The next and final count will be made by the judges on Saturday evening, April 17, as soon after the closing hour of the contest as possible. If candidates heed the advice of the Contest Department and report their subscriptions early, the work of issuing receipts will be disposed of quickly, the ballots deposited and the ballot box turned over to the judges, and the winners determined and announced shortly after 10 p. m. Saturday evening. It rests entirely with the candidates as to the length of time they will be required to wait before the winners are announced.

The Press' Panama-Pacific Tour Contest will close at 10 p. m. on Saturday, April 17, and all candidates inside the Press office at that time will be permitted to turn in their subscriptions and have votes issued. The door of the Press office will be locked at 10 p. m., and any who are late and not inside the office will not be able to get their subscriptions in.

There is bound to be a big rush during the closing hours of the contest, and to help reduce this rush, candidates would do well to turn their subscriptions in during the remaining days of the contest and take away the ballots, which they can deposit any time up to the closing hour. By doing this the big task of handling the bulk of subscriptions during the last few hours will be eliminated and the winners determined just so much sooner.

It is most important that candidates have their subscriptions filled out in full and correctly. See that the candidate's name is on the Special Ballot and not the name of the subscriber, as has happened in some cases.

As soon as all candidates have turned in their subscriptions on the closing night of the contest, and the ballots have been deposited in the ballot box, the ballot box will be opened by the judges, the votes counted and the winners announced as soon as this final count is completed. The winners, as announced by the judges, will be subject to verification of their subscriptions as to old and new readers, and should it be found tht the vote of one of the winners, as announced by the judges, should undergo a sufficient reduction in votes after verifying to throw her out of the winning class, this fact will be published, together with the corect vote, and the rightful winner announced. It will be well for all candidates to exercise the greatest care in marking their subscriptions as to old and new in order that the winners, as announced by the judges, will not have to be changed.

Today you should turn in your subscriptions, as it is the day of all days. When tomorrow and the next day come they will be the same, only much more so, as you will then be much nearer the close of the contest. Every moment counts for something new. If the enthusiasm of the contest manager can be transmitted to each of the contestants as this paper witnesses the closing days of its big contest, there is certain to be a wave of genuine joy and ambition which will deluge the contest districts. Everybody that isn't in the race to win isn't in it at all. There is not a woman entered that hasn't hopes of finishing first.

Just a word to those in the districts where the vote is not as large as others—you will, if you finish first, win a trip. Because one district has a greater number of votes cast for its candidates than are cast for candidates in our district does not imply anything. You are working against no one but the women in your particular district.

EFFORT TO FEED PRZEMYSL VAIN

Sought to Provision Besieged City by Aeroplanes.

SIEGE ESTABLISHES RECORD

Longest In Modern Warfare—Was Most Picturesque and Doubtful Event of War In Eastern Area and Stronghold Was Defended by Austrians With Vigor and Resourcefulness.

PRZEMYSL NOW PERMYSL.

One of the first acts of the Russians after taking possession of the fortress of Przemysl was to change its name to the Russian form—Permysl.

The siege of Przemysl was the longest in modern warfare. It began on Sept. 2, 1914, on the very day that the Russians defeated the Austrians before Lemberg, and, with few intervals of rest, shots had been exchanged with the enemy for 201 days, or for 100 days longer than the siege of Port Arthur in 1904, seventy-one days longer than the siege of Paris in 1870-1 and fifty-one days longer than the siege of Adrianople in 1912-13.

If by siege, however, is meant the investment of the place, that began soon after Sept. 25, when the Austrians evacuated Jaroslau. From that time on, although the Russian line in Galicia was several times pressed northward and eastward of Przemysl, the Russian circle around the fortress was not broken.

From Dec. 15 until Dec. 22 the Russian left wing rested upon the place. From Dec. 25 on the Russian line moved steadily on—westward toward Cracow, 135 miles away, and southward through the Carpathian passes. It was driven back again and again, but never released its hold on Przemysl, even though several attempts were made to raise the siege. When on Dec. 25 the advancing line severed its connection with the besiegers for the last time a large covering force estimated at 250,000 men was left strongly intrenched around the city.

Fall Reported Many Times.

The siege was the most picturesque and doubtful event of the war in the eastern area, and the fortress from first to last was defended by the Austrians with vigor and resourcefulness. At the most heated periods of the assault rumors from Petrograd of its fall have succeeded rumors from Vienna of the siege being raised. With the falling back of the Russian army came the rumor that the siege had been abandoned, while sorties, which invariably cost the Russians dearly, were taken to mean that the city had been relieved.

It was believed, however, that the state of the besieged was desperate, for, in the middle of January, the noncombatant paupers were sent out of the city to the Russian lines, and these reported that there was not enough food to last another fortnight, yet the city held out for over two months more.

The only communication with the outside world was by means of a wireless station erected on an elevation known as Casimir hill, above the city, and by an occasional aeroplane flight to and fro between the city and beyond the gradually retreating Austrian armies.

News obtained in this way, in spite of the revelations of the expatriated noncombatants, described the conditions as nearly normal except for the regulations imposed by the military authorities.

All supplies of food had been taken over by the army officials early in January. They issued rations to soldiers and civilians alike. The last direct word from Przemysl before the announcement of its surrender was that the Russian attacks were growing infrequent and that the defenders had little to do. This was on March 12, just before the Russians began their final series of assaults.

Food by Aeroplanes.

At one period of the siege an attempt was made to provision the city by means of aeroplanes making daily trips from Cracow to Przemysl. Then the Russians brought down an aeroplane said to have been laden with canned beef.

The fall of Przemysl was forecast in a Petrograd dispatch on March 17, which said that the capitulation of the fortress was a matter of a few days. Just previous to this Austrians captured in sorties said that the garrison was living on starvation rations and that the hospitals were crowded. Plague and typhus were also reported to have gained a foothold in the city.

By military experts Przemysl has been described as the key to Budapest and Vienna, but this opinion has in recent years been discounted by the growing strength of Cracow.

Przemysl, which, had the siege been raised, could have supplied the Austrians with the badly needed petrol, of which it has a great store and a refining plant, is on the River San, sixty miles from Lemberg. It had a population of 50,000, mostly Poles, and is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop and a Greek bishop.

A Short Memory.

Uncle Jed was a trifle slack about quitting the bottom when the levee broke and had to take to a tree. Morning came and there was sixty feet of Mississippi flood water between him and shore. The preacher happened along on the high ground and saw Jed, but there wasn't any boat. Moreover, Jed's suspicion that there were alligators about was well founded.

The preacher besought Jed to swim, but in vain. Finally he called out:

"Jed, have faith. Remember how Jonah was cared for in the whale and saved after three days."

Jed spoke earnestly.

"Yas, suh, I remember. I ain' denyin' nuthin' 'bout Jonah, 'cause I wa'n't nigh um. But dis year alligator, he ain' no whale, suh. Alligator, he eat a nigger an' go off an' sleep a week, suh, an' disremember all 'bout dat nigger inside um."—New York Post.

Celebrated Dwarfs.

Early in the eighteenth century a brother and sister attracted great attention for smallness of stature. They were of Polish birth and were people of great accomplishments and elegant manners. When the brother, Count Berowiaski, was one year old he measured fourteen inches in height. Five years after he had gained but three inches, but at the age of twenty the measurement was six inches more, and then the growth ceased. The sister, Anastasia, seven years younger, could stand under her brother's arm. The count lived over ninety years.

Art Criticism.

"This artist," remarked the teacher at the conclusion of the drawing lesson, "painted many other beautiful pictures, which were hung in the galleries of Paris. Now I want you little boys and girls to write me a composition about this great painter."

One of said little boys wrote, "The artist painted many beautiful pictures, for which he was hung on the gallows in Paris."—Chicago Herald.

STANDING TIMBER.

Rule by Which to Figure Out Its Contents in Board Feet.

The contents of trees in board feet is usually figured by Doyle's rule. This rule is to deduct four inches from the small diameter of the log for slab, squaring one quarter of the remainder and multiplying the results by the length of the log in feet. For example, to find the contents of a twelve foot log twenty-four inches in diameter (inside the bark) at the small end—24 inches minus 4 inches equal 20 inches; 20 inches by 20 equal 5 inches; 5 by 5 by 12 equal 300 board feet.

Perhaps an easier way to get at the same result is to state the rule as follows: From a sixteen foot log deduct four inches for slab and square the remainder. For longer or shorter logs the contents would be proportioned to the length. In the above case it would be worked out thus: 24 minus 4 equals 20, 20 by 20 equals 400, for a sixteen foot log. But a twelve foot log is twelve-sixteenths or three-quarters as long as a sixteen foot log; therefore this log contains three-quarters of 400 board feet, or 300 board feet. If the log were twenty feet long it would contain one and one quarter times 400 feet, or 500 feet.

A common way of estimating standing timber is to estimate the length and the top and bottom diameters and apply Doyle's rule, using the average of both diameters and the whole length of the tree.—Rural New Yorker.

BED OF THE THAMES.

It Often Yields to Dredgers Relics of the Ancient Romans.

"Yes, sir," said the skipper of a Thames dredger as he wiped his grimy hands on the legs of his trousers, "there are many worse jobs than dredging. It is interesting and exciting work, too, for one never knows what the bucket scoops are going to pick up.

"Do we make any rich 'captures?' Occasionally we do, but of course we bring up more mud than anything else. But, personally, I believe that the bottom of the Thames is a small gold mine in disguise; but one that it is impossible to 'work.' A 'nugget' is brought up now and again, and a 'nugget' may mean a gold watch or coins.

"Some time back a bucket scoop brought to the surface a small sack, and this sack contained a number of watches, mostly minus the cases. Evidently they had been thrown into the river by thieves, who had no use for them.

"Human bones are brought to light at infrequent intervals, and so are old metal implements. Roman coins are fairly plentiful close by Billingsgate and London bridge, and some of the copper ones which have been recovered are as clean as new coins from the mint. Julius Caesar coins and weapons have been found in the upper river and some stone age implements down by Hampton court."—London Answers.

Room For Improvement.

A certain estimable old gentleman is at all times worth listening to, though occasionally his grammar is scarcely perfect. He was dining on one occasion with the local squire, when, much to the disgust of his worthy host, a trifling error on the old gentleman's part was pounced upon and loudly repeated by the son and heir of the house. There was a painful silence, broken at length by the host.

"My son," he remarked quietly to the young fellow, "there are times, I admit, when our old friend's speech is a little peculiar. At such times you might be of mutual assistance to each other."

"In what way, sir?" asked the son.

"Well," was the severe rejoinder, "you might give Mr. X. a lesson or two in grammar, in return for which I have no doubt he would assist you to patch up the holes in your manners."—London Tit-Bits.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Tommy Mullin has demonstrated the fact that schoolboys can really be made to play the national pastime at a pace pleasing to the fans. Too general has been the practise of loafing on the part of local and borough high school players in the past and the need of a little "pep" has always been evident. This year's North Plainfield team, in the couple of games in which it has participated, has exhibited the fact that a baseball game is made much more pleasing to the spectator when the players do not loaf on their way out on the field and going to the bat. Sluggishness on the part of athletes is an almost intolerable offense and the quicker all high schools adopt the Mullin policy the quicker will come the rise of schoolboy pastiming.

It is well within the jurisdiction of an umpire to keep the game moving apace and those officials who dominate over struggles in this vicinity this year should early be given to understand that speed is a requisite. In hocky there is such a thing as penalizing players for "loafing." Of course, this is stretching the simile a bit, but why could not umpires be empowered to penalize ball players who persist in "stalling." There are some players right in our midst who, with the completion of each inning seem determined to make a snail look like the essence of speed.

Giving our two high school teams the double "O" we are led to believe that some more good scholastic baseball is in store for local and borough fandom this year. Both are far from being exact duplicates of last year's color bearers, but the "makings" of a couple of strong clubs is apparent and with the proper coaching there is little reason to believe that this season will be anything else but successful. The opening sets tos have been staged in good style and the class exhibited fortells some interesting interscholastic league combats.

If the Federal League's rough estimate that 70,000 persons saw the league fling down the gauntlet simultaneously in four different cities is within a few thousand of being correct, it proves that the Feds are starting their third season with their cleets fastened firmly in the turf of public support. All the florid conversation extant has no bearing upon ultimate success. That alone is told by the clicking of the turnstiles at the various park entrances. It appears that the Feds are in a fair way to reap something more substantial than chaff.

Agitation on the part of a couple of the county high schools to make the Union county athletic fest a wide-open affair is not only a generous measure, but one to be encouraged. There is apparently no reason why some of our Somerset and Middlesex county friends should be barred from the competition and their appearance would beyond a doubt add zest to the affair.

VARDON LEADER OF LOCAL TEAM IN PRINTERS SERIES

The averages of all the Plainfield pinners that took part in the Plainfield-Westfield printers' bowling series have been announced, with Vardon leading, his average being 161. Keppler, of the Westfield five, led the list with an average of 161. Thomas, of the local team, held high score mark of the series, 248. The records of the local players follow:

PARK CLUB BOWLING.

The handicap five competition will be held at the Park Club tonight. Ten pins will be rolled tomorrow night.

NORTH PLAINFIELD MAY HAVE INDEPENDENT TEAM

North Plainfield will probably be represented by a baseball team this summer, which will play Saturday games, mostly at home. A number of borough ball players, who have had their day with High School teams, and are still aching to toss the ball around, are considering organizing a team, to be composed strictly of borough fellows, to start the season immediately after the High School schedule ends. Several of the present High School players, also some who are away at college, would be in line for the team, and as all borough sporting interest is now centered in the High School team, an outside tem would probably not be successful.

A team was started late last season, but only a few games were played. Hyde Oval will probably be used for home games, if permission can be secured. Among those who will be in line for the team are Bill Taylor, Rus Conroy, Harry oulton, Ronald Conroy, Newt Spencer, Ralph malley, George Townley, Hub Stine, Wren Townley, Ash Burner and other borough players.

EASY VICTORY FOR BORO BALL TOSSERS

North Plainfielders Wallop Clintonians in Second Match of Season.

The North Plainfield High School baseball team's second game of the season resulted in a victory over the Clinton High School aggregation yesterday afternoon on Hyde Oval. The final score was 17 to 5, and the nine long innings were swatfests for the boroughites. The visitors were never dangerous, and it was not until the fifth round that they crossed the plate.

North Plainfield's half of the initial inning took just twenty-five minutes, and in that time they crossed the plate eleven times. Hebert, VanDeventer and Dilts were all at bat twice during the first inning. The first man to face Stahl hit the ball to the left field fence for a two-bagger, but was called out by the umpire for failing to touch first base. John Dawe, the midget athlete of the borough school, occupied second, Conroy being on the sick list, and he perfrmed with credit, accepting seven out of eight chances and pounding out two hits. Stahl was slightly off color, but did not have to exert himself at any time. He passed up four batters and allowed eleven hits, while his team mates collected a total of 16 off the Clinton twirler's delivery. Dilts and Townley were tied for batting honors, each getting a trio of bingles.

After the game had been "placed on ice," Captain Smalley sent in three "subs," Day behind the bat, Kirch in right field and McDonough in left. In the one time he faced the pitcher Day singled. Clinton scored three runs in the seventh and one in the eighth. The scores follow:

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED.

The following officers were elected by the Plainfield High School Commercial Club at a meeting held this morning: President, William Soden; vice-president, Miss Jennie Bramble, secretary, Miss Maude Morris; corresponding secretary, Miss Anna Murphy; newspaper reporter, Miss Gertrude Head; treasurer, Kenneth Guttridge; Oracle reporter, William Traynor.

LACK OF "PEP" IN P. H. S. TEAM'S WIN

Westfield High School Mowed Down by a 2 to 1 Score.

In a slow game of baseball yesterday afternoon on Parker Field the Plainfield High School team defeated Westfield High School by a score of of 2-1. The game was uninteresting, being marred by ten errors scored in critical places.

Both pitchers, Brick and Maringei, twirled in great style, the former allowing Westfield four hits aand the latter allowing but three. Had the pitchers received the support that was due them, the game might have been of better grade. A two-base hit by Victorson was the hitting feature of the contest, although his team mates failed to profit by it.

In the first O'Leary scored first blood after being walked. Kyle struck out and O'Leary stole second, taking third on an error. Mills went out on the first ball pitched, helping O'Leary draw the first counter for P. H. S..

Victorson was the only man on either side who played anywhere near his best form. He featured in all three of Plainfield's double-plays, and knocked the ball for a twin-sacker. Brick ended the game in great style, striking the last two men out.

The line-up is as follows:

GERARD BEATEN BY ARMY.

With Gerard, the former High Bridge High School twirler, pitching, the Lafayette College baseball team lost a 6 to 5 game to the Army nine at West Point yesterday. Up to the eighth inning the visitors were leading, but the soldiers fell on Gerard's delivery in that round and made two hits, which, with a pass, meted a brace of runs. Gerard allowed a dozen safeties and passed two men.

JENNINGS DRIVEN FROM BOX.

Harry Jennings, star slabsman of the Rutgers College team, who played with the Plainfield Pets last season, was given a trouncing yesterday afternoon, the score being 10 to 2. The Orange and Black sluggers batted Jennings all over the field, and he was relieved by Ruby, who fared little better. The New Brunswick batters could only get one hit off the delivery of Chaplin, who was in fine form. Rutgers made eight errors, and Princeton was guilty of one.

MATERIAL ON HAND FOR COUNTY MEET

Coach Fritts Has Big Squad Working out at Plainfield High School.

Jack Fritts, coach of the Plainfield High School track team, is rounding into shape a large squad of athletes for the Union county meet to be held here Decoration Day. He has issued a call for practice every clear day out at Parker Field.

With the material that has been showing up at practice, Fritts says he can make Plainfield High School a shining light in the big meet. Runyon, as usual, is the man for the pole vault and high jump, while Blanchard is developing wonderfully in the latter event. For the sprints a large squad has been practising faithfully. It includes O'Leary, Peacock, Schenck, O'Donnell, McNamee, Crone and Causbrook. Chamberlain, Noonan and Daniels are working on the weights. Although not very many have tried out for the long runs, Fritts is trying to get a few marathoners out of the remaining material. Daniels, however, is a fine man for distance, having won places in a good many meets.

The track team will have dual meets with Montclair and Cranford before it competes in the county championships.

NAME SENIOR OFFICERS.

Milton Randolph and John Cary have been elected captain and manager respectively of the Plainfield High School senior class baseball team.

FIRE PATROLMAN IN MOUNTAIN DISTRICT

Watchung Residents' Troubles May Be Alleviated by Commission's Appointee.

The State Forest Commission has detailed a forest fire patrolman to the Watchung Mountain section from Chimney Rock to Summit. This patrolman is one of the men provided by the Federal Government under the Weeks law, and will be on duty continually whenever the woods are dry enough to burn.

His duty is to apprehend aand hold all persons setting fire to the woodlands, whether intentionally or by accidents, and all those lighting fires within or near the forest without the firewarden's permit required by law for such fires. He will also secure prompt attendance by the proper local warden to every fire that starts. The State Firewarden points out that by co-operating with this watchman, citizens and forest owners can increase the security of their property.

Many fires have been in progress in the Watchung Mountain district, near here, during the past few weeks, and in a number of instances property damage has been entailed. The residents of that vicinity have spent considerable time in fighting the blazes, and lay the blame for a majority of the fires on picnic parties and careless individuals who have visited that section.

ELEPHANT PATROL LATEST DISCOVERY IN METUCHEN

Any one possessing intimate information on how to keep an elephant contented in a policeman's home will please forward the information to Sergeant John Clinton, at Metuchen, who is threatened with the gift of one.

The elephant represents the expression of the high gratitude which Max Brazil, once a homeless wanderer in Metuchen and now a circus proprietor in England, can feel. Twenty years ago Sergeant Clinton got him a position with a circus, and Max now owns the entire show.

Metuchen's police force thinks the elephant could be provided with a paladdin, all barred in and used as a patrol wagon and jail combined.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

In the exquisitely fanciful fairy tale, Cinderella, arranged from the beautiful symbolic and century-old story, which is to be shown at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow and Saturday, Mary Pickford portrays the pathetic but bewitching litle cinder girl, the heroine of the world-renowned and universally-loved tale of the abused stepdaughter, who was at last rewarded for her virtue and patience by a splendid triumph over the haughty sisters and unkind stepmother, and crowned princess and sovereign of her true love's heart. This new and modern version of "Cinderella" is a delightful blend of comedy and pathos, and provides a consummately artistic treat for people of all ages. In the imposing and elaborate production which has been given this wonderful story, illusion and reality are skilfully mingled, and the famous little heroine of the children of all times lives and breathes upon the screen, immortal there as in their hearts, with a tender charm that is all Mary Pickford's own. The varying vicissitudes of Cinderella's life, with her many sorrows and her great triumph, are depicted with a fascinating degree of realism, and the inspiring episodes of the beloved tale are dramatically and picturesquely developed in this most charming and unique of fairy photoplays, just as they are chronicled in the beautiful story that is its origin.

DRAPED SKIRTS THE NEWEST FEATURE.

Tunics have been too popular to be given up and many of the new summer dresses are showing them. They are seldom plain however, as they were last season and the newest of them are gracefully draped, like the one in the illustration. Here a tunic in two sections is slipped under the yoke of a two-piece circular skirt. One side of the tunic is draped in burnous style and the other side has a circular flare. With this is worn an overblouse waist having a kimono foundation waist with Medici collar, and sleeveless overblouse opening in back with a removable peplum. This is just the sort of dress

Vision.

It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining daffodils;
In every dimpled drop I see
Wild flowers on the distant hills.

The clouds of gray engulf the day
And overwhelm the town;
It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining roses down.

It isn't raining rain to me,
But fields of clover bloom,
Where any buccaneering bee
May find a bed and room.

A health unto the happy!
A fig for him who frets!
It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining violets.

—Sydney Lanier.

Mrs. A. H. Reeve, of Moorestown, vice-president of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers, recently called a meeting at her home of women representing thirty-two P. T. A.'s from three counties, Burlington, Camden and Gloucester, for the purpose of forming County Councils or Federations of Child Welfare organizations similar to the ones formed this winter for Plainfield and for Union county. Mr. W. M. Sandford assisted Mrs. Reeve and the results of the meeting were gratifying. Such councils have been formed in Cape May county, Irvington, Trenton, New Brunswick and Orange, and plans are under way for the same thing in Bergen and Essex counties. The very rapid growth in numbers of these school organizations makes it advisable to group them for the purpose of unifying their work and increasing their efficiency. The New Jersey Congress of Mothers holds a full two-day session in the autumn and an all day session in the spring—but it is impossible to any longer do justice even with so much time to the many clubs in membership. The county organization plan, it is hoped, will effectively supplement the work of the congress for its clubs as well as stimulate them to greater vigor.

Jane Addams on Peace.

At a dinner given in honor of the delegates to the International Conference of Women in Holland, Miss Jane Addams said: "Of course we do not for one moment expect to stay the war, but our conference may be the entering wedge in a movement to bring the war to an end. With several hundred women all talking together there is a chance that something foolish will be said and some harm may be done, but we shall try to make the conference as effective as possible. If there is some slight danger in going to Europe now we feel happy to place ourselves in jeopardy for the cause of universal peace. We may be interned in some harbor and never have a chance to express our minds at all about warfare, but whatever comes we shall take with good grace. * * * We delegates have no right to feel that we are representing our government.

"It is significant to me that in these times of storm and stress, women have continued to hold an international relationship."

Every mother whose heart has bled for the little sufferers of Europe will follow the course of the Noordam toward Holland.

Woman's Peace Party of America.

The purpose of this organization is to enlist all American women in arousing the nations to respect the sacredness of human life and to abolish war. The following is adopted as our platform:

1. The immediate calling of a convention of neutral nations in the interest of early peace.
2. Limitations of armaments and the nationalization of their manufacture.
3. Organized opposition to militarism in our own country.
4. Education of youth in the deals of peace.
5. Democratic control of foreign policies.
6. The further humanizing of governments by the extension of the franchise to women.
7. "Concert of nations" to supersede "balance of power."
8. Action toward the gradual organization of the world to substitute law for war.
9. The substitution of an international police for rival armies and navies.
10. Removal of the economic causes of war.
11. The appointment by our government of a commission of men and women, with an adequate appropriation, to promote international peace.

Mental Growth.

"The five attitudes which American parents and teachers should have to stimulate mental growth in the young are:

The right hygienic attitude;
The right economic attitude;
The right civic attitude;
The right religious attitude;
The right educational attitude.

We, as American parents, can do more than we are yet doing to stimulate the personal aspirations of our boys and girls and High School teachers should find the "way of approach," for you can teach anything between the ages of fourteen and eighteen, but there is more than one road.—Dr. F. B. Brandt, School of Pedagogy, Phila.

Patent Medicine Evil.

A large wholesale and retail house in Chicago has the notice in its latest catalog:

"Many of our customers will be surprised and possibly some will be disappointed to find that this catalog no longer lists the various patent medicines we have carried in the past. Our decision to discontinue the sale of patent medicine was made after careful study of the question from all sides and is based on our policy of handling only dependable merchandise—merchandise that we believe will give the service our customers have a right to expect. Considered in all its phases, the patent medicine business is a public evil."

AN ORDINANCE

To License and Regulate Omnibuses, Stages and Other Vehicles Used for the Transportation of Passengers In or Through the City of Plainfield in Connection With Any Omnibus Line or Stage Line.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. No person, persons or corporation shall either as principal or as agent or employe of another, drive, run or operate in or through the City of Plainfield any omnibus line or stage line for the transportation of passengers without first obtaining a license for each vehicle so used for that purpose, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. Any person, persons or corporation may make application, written or printed, or partly written and partly printed, to the Mayor of said City for license to drive, run or operate in or through said City, an omnibus or stage line, but every such application shall be signed by the applicant or a duly authorized agent of the applicant, and shall designate the particular description of vehicle or vehicles intended to be so used. Whenever any such application is granted as hereinafter provided, the City Clerk shall cause the same to be endorsed with the date of the grant and the numbr of the license granted, and filed in his office.

Sec. 3. The Mayor shall have the power to grant, and to refuse in his discretion, any such application, but every such license granted by the Mayor shall state the object for which it is given, the number and description of vehicles licensed thereunder, the name or names of the person, persons or corporation to whom the license is granted, the number of the license, the date of its expiration, and it shall be signed by the Mayor, attested by the City Clerk and countersigned by the Chief of Police before it shall become operative.

Sec. 4. Every such license shall expire on the first day of March following the date on which it is granted, and no such license shall be granted except upon the payment by the applicant therefor to the City Clerk for the use of the City, of a license fee of Five Dollars ($5.00) for each vehicle to be used thereunder, and no vehicle shall be used thereunder other than a vehicle specified therein.

Sec. 5. The Common Council may, from time to time, by resolution, forbid the use of any particular street or streets, avenue or avenues, highway or highways, or portion or portions thereof, in said City by any vehicle or vehicles licensed under this ordinance and, after the adoption of any such resolution and before the same is rescinded, no vehicle licensed under this ordinance shall use or pass through or along any street, avenue or highway or portion thereof, the use whereof by such vehicle is forbidden by any such resolution.

Sec. 6. Every omnibus, stage or other similar vehicle, the use whereof may be authorized by any license granted under this orinance, shall at all times have displayed on each side of the outside thereof, in a conspicuous place, the number of the then current license under which it is being used in said city, also another numeral sufficient to distinguish it from every other vehicle used under such license.

Sec. 7. Every vehicle used by virtue of any license granted under this ordinance shall be subject to every ordinance of the City of Plainfield, and every regulation of the Board of Police of the City of Plainfield, touching upon or regulating street traffic or the standing or movement of vehicles in public streets or highways.

Sec. 8. Any license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor or City Judge upon proof to his satisfaction that such licensed person, persons or corporation, or any person acting in his, their or its behalf, has violated this ordinance or any other ordinance of the City of Plainfield, or regulation of the Board of Police aforesaid; provided, that no license shall be so suspended or revoked without reasonable opportunity first afforded to the licensed person or corporation to be heard in his or its own behalf; and no person or corporation shall, during the suspension or after the revocation of his or its license use any vehicle so licensed, in the operation of any such omnibus line or stage line.

Sec. 9. Each and every person or corporation who or which shall violate any such and every person or corporation who shall direct, assist in or connive at the violation of this ordinance shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding Twenty Dollars for each offense.

CHAPTER XXI.

I Have a Tilt With Colingraft.

LATER in the forenoon the countess, with a queer little smile on her lips, told me that her mother considered me the most wonderful the most forceful character she had ever encountered. I brightened up at that.

But Colingraft was not yet through with me. He sought me out just before luncheon. I was in the courtyard listening patiently to Jasper junior's theories and suggestions concerning the restoration of the entire facade of the castle and what he'd do if he were in my place. Strange to say, I was considerably entertained; he was not at all offensive. On the contrary, he offered his ideas in a pleasantly ingenuous way, always supplementing them with some such salve as "Don't you think so, Mr. Smart?" or "I'm sure you have thought of it yourself," or "Isn't that your idea too?" or "You've done wonders with the joint, old man."

Colingraft came directly up to where we were standing.

"See here, Mr. Smart," he began austerely, "I've got something to say to you, and I'm not the sort to put it off. I appreciate what you've done for Aline and all that sort of thing, but your manner today has been intolerable, and we've got to come to an understanding."

I eyed him closely. "I suppose you're about to suggest that one or the other of us must evacuate—get out, so to speak," I said.

"Don't talk rubbish. You've got my mother bawling her eyes out upstairs and wishing she were dead. You've got to come off this high horse of yours. You've got to apologize to her, and quick at that. Understand!"

"Nothing will give me greater joy than to offer her my most abject apology, Mr. Titus, unless it would be her unqualified forgiveness."

"You'll have to withdraw everything you said."

"I'll withdraw everything except my ultimatum in respect to her putting a foot outside these walls. That still stands."

"I beg to differ with you."

"You may beg till you're black in the face," said I coolly.

He swallowed hard. His face twitched, and his hands were clinched.

"You are pretty much of a mucker, Mr. Smart," he said between his teeth. "I'm sorry my sister has fallen into your hands. The worst of it is she seems satisfied with everything you do. Good Lord, what she can see in you is beyond comprehension! Protection! Why, you couldn't protect her from the assault of a chicken!"

"Are you trying to insult me, Mr. Titus?"

"You couldn't resent it if I were. There never was an author with enough moral backbone to"—

"Wait! You are her brother. I don't want to have trouble with you. But if you keep on in this strain, Mr. Titus, I shall be compelled to thrash you soundly."

He fairly gasped. "Th—thrash me!" he choked out. Then he advanced.

Much to his surprise—and, strangely enough, not to my own—I failed to retreat. Instead I extended my left fist with considerable abruptness and precision, and he landed on his back.

I experienced a sensation of unholy joy. Up to that moment I had wondered whether I could do it with my left hand.

I looked at Jasper junior. He was staring at me in utter bewilderment.

"Good Lord, you—you've knocked him down!"

"I didn't think I could do it," said I hazily.

He sprang to his brother's side and assisted him to a sitting posture.

"Right to the jaw," shouted Jasper, with a strange enthusiasm.

"Left," I corrected him.

Colingraft gazed about him in a stupid, vacant fashion for a moment, and then allowed his glazed eyes to rest upon me. He sat rather limply, I thought.

"Are you hurt, Colly?" cried Jasper junior.

A sickly grin, more of surprise than shame, stole over Colingraft's face. He put his hand to his jaw, then to the back of his head.

"By Jove!" he murmured. "I—I didn't think he had it in him. Let me get up!"

Jasper junior was discreet. "Better let well enough alone, old"—

"I intend to," said Colingraft as he struggled to his feet.

For a moment he faced me uncertainly.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Titus," said I calmly.

"You—you are a wonder!" fell from his lips. "I'm not a coward, Mr. Smart. I've boxed a good deal in my time, but, by Jove, I never had a jolt like that!"

He turned abruptly and left us. We followed him slowly toward the steps. At the bottom he stopped and faced me again.

"You're a better man than I thought," he said. "If you'll bury the hatchet, so will I. I take back what I said to you not because I'm afraid of you, but because I respect you. What say? Will you shake hands?"

The surly, arrogant expression was gone from his face. In its place was a puzzled, somewhat inquiring look.

"No hard feeling on my part," I cried gladly. We shook hands. Jasper junior slapped me on the back. "It's a most distressing, atavistic habit I'm getting into, knocking people down without rime or reason."

"I daresay you had reason," muttered Colingraft. "I got what was coming to me." An eager light crept into his handsome eyes. "By Jove, we can get in some corking work with the gloves while I'm here. I box quite a bit at home, and I miss it traveling about like this. What say to a half hour or so every day? I have the gloves in one of my trunks. I'm getting horribly seedy. I need stirring up."

"Charmed, I'm sure," I said, assuming an enthusiasm I did not feel. Put on the gloves with this strapping, skillful boxer? Not I! I was firmly resolved to stop while my record was good. In a scientific clash with the gloves he would soon find out what a miserable duffer I was.

"And Jappy, here, is no slouch. He's as shifty as the dickens."

"The shiftier the better," said I with great aplomb. Jasper junior stuck out his chest modestly and said, "Oh, piffle, Colly." But just the same I hadn't the least doubt in my mind that Jasper could "put it all over me." It was a rather sickening admission, though strictly private.

We made our way to my study, where I mildly suggested that we refrain from mentioning our little encounter to Mrs. Titus or the countess. I thought Colingraft was especially pleased with the idea. We swore secrecy.

"I've always been regarded as a peaceful, harmless grub," I explained, still somewhat bewildered by the feat I had performed and considerably shaken by the fear that I was degenerating into a positive ruffian. "You will believe me, I hope, when I declare that I was merely acting in self defense when I"—

He actually laughed. "Don't apologize." He could not resist the impulse to blurt out once more, "By Jove, I didn't think you could do it."

"With my left hand, too," I said wonderingly. Catching myself up, I hastily changed the subject.

A little later on as Colingraft left the room, slyly feeling of his jaw, Jasper junior whispered to me excitedly, "You've got him eating out of your hand, old top."

Things were coming to a pretty pass, said I to myself when I was all alone. It certainly is a pretty pass when one knocks down the ex-husband and the brother of the woman he loves and quite without the least suspicion of an inherited pugnacity.

I had a little note from the countess that afternoon, ceremoniously delivered by Helene Marie Louise Antoinette. It read as follows:

You did Colingraft a very good turn when you laid him low this morning. He is tiresomely interested in his prowess as a boxmaker or a boxster, or whatever it is in athletic parlance. He has been like a lamb all afternoon, and he really can't get over the way you whacked him. (Is whack the word?) At first he was as mum as could be about it, but I think he really felt relieved when I told him I had seen the whole affair from a window in my hall. You see, it gave him a chance to explain how you got in the whack, and I have been obliged to listen to intermittent lectures on the manly art of self defense all afternoon, first from him, then from Jappy. I have a headache and no means of defense. He admits that he deserved it, but I am not surprised. Colly is a sporting chap. He hasn't a mean drop of blood in his body. You have made a friend of him. So please don't feel that I hold a grudge against you for what you did. The funny part of it all is that mamma quite agrees with him. She says he deserved it! Mamma is wonderful, really, when it comes to a pinch. She has given up all thought of "putting a foot outside the castle." Can you have luncheon with us tomorrow? Would it be too much trouble if we were to have it in the loggia? I am just mad to get out of doors if only for an hour or two in that walled in spot. Mr. Poopendyke has been perfectly lovely. He came up this morning to tell me that you have not sneezed at all and there isn't the remotest chance now that you will have a cold. It seems he was afraid you might. You must have a very rugged constitution. Britton told Blake that most men would have died from exposure if they had been put in your place. How good you are to me. ALINE T.

P. S.—I may come down to see you this evening.

* * * * * * *

I shall skip over the rather uninteresting events of the next two or three days. Nothing of consequence happened unless you are willing to consider important two perfectly blissful nights of sleep on my part; also I had the pleasure of taking the countess "out walking" in my courtyard, to use a colloquialism, once in the warm, sweet sunshine, again 'neath the glow of a radiant moon. She had not been outside the castle walls literally in more than five weeks, and the color leaped back into her cheeks with a rush that delighted me. I may mention in passing that I paid particular attention to her suggestion concerning my dilapidated, gone to seed garden, although I had been bored to extinction by Jasper junior when he undertook to enlighten me horticulturally. She agreed to come forth every day and assist me in building the poor thing up, propping it, so to speak.

As for Mrs. Titus, that really engaging lady made life so easy for me that I wondered why I had ever been apprehensive. She was quite wonderful when "it came to a pinch." I began to understand a good many things about her, chief among them being her unvoiced theories on matrimony. While she did not actually commit herself, I had no difficulty in ascertaining that, from her point of view, marriages are not made in heaven and that a properly arranged divorce is a great deal less terrestrial than it is commonly supposed to be. She believed in matrimony as a trial and divorce as a reward, or something to that effect.

My opinion seemed to carry considerable weight with her. For a day or two after our somewhat sanguinary encounter she was prone to start, even to jump slightly, when I addressed myself to her with unintentional directness. She soon got over that, however.

We were discussing Aline's unfortunate venture into the state of matrimony, and I, feeling temporarily august and superior, managed to say the wrong thing and in doing so put myself in a position from which I could not recede without loss of dignity. If my memory serves me correctly I remarked with some asperity that marriages of that kind never turned out well for any one except the bridegroom.

She looked at me coldly. "I am afraid, Mr. Smart, that you have been putting some very bad notions into my daughter's head," she said.

"Bad notions?" I murmured.

"She has developed certain pronounced and rather extraordinary views concerning the nobility as the result of your—ah—argument, I may say."

"I'm very sorry. I know one or two exceedingly nice noblemen, and I've no doubt there are a great many more. She must have misunderstood me. I wasn't running down the nobility, Mrs. Titus. I was merely questioning the advisability of elevating it in the way we Americans sometimes do."

"You did not put it so adroitly in discussing the practice with Aline," she said quickly. "Granted that her own marriage was a mistake, a dreadful mistake, it does not follow that all international matches are failures. I would just as soon be unhappily married to a duke as to a dry goods merchant, Mr. Smart."

"But not at the same price, Mrs. Titus," I remarked.

She smiled. "A husband is dear at any price."

"I shouldn't put it just that way," I protested. "A good American husband is a necessity, not a luxury."

"Well, to go back to what I started to say, Aline is very bitter about matrimony as viewed from my point of view. I am sorry to say I attribute her attitude to your excellent counseling."

"You flatter me. I was under the impression she took her lesson of Tarnowsky."

"Granted. But Tarnowsky was unfit. Why tar all of them with the same stick? There are good noblemen, you'll admit."

"But they don't need rehabilitation."

"Aline, I fear, will never risk another experiment. It's rather calamitous, isn't it? When one stops to consider her youth, beauty and all the happiness there may be"—

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Titus, but I think your fears are groundless."

"What do you mean?"

"The countess will marry again. I am not betraying a secret, because she has intimated as much to my secretary as well as to me. I take it that as soon as this unhappy affair is settled she will be free to reveal the true state of her feelings toward"— I stopped, somewhat dismayed by my garrulous turn.

"Toward whom?" she fairly snapped.

"I don't know," I replied truthfully and, I fear, lugubriously.

"Good heavens!" she cried, starting up from the bench on which we were sitting in the loggia. There was a queer expression in her eyes. "Hasn't—hasn't she ever hinted at—hasn't she mentioned any one at all?"

"Not to me."

Mrs. Titus was agitated. I could see that very plainly. A thoughtful frown appeared on her smooth brow, and a gleam of anxiety sprang into her eyes.

"I am sure that she has had no opportunity to"— She did not complete the sentence, in which there was a primary note of perplexity and wonder.

It grilled me to discover that she did not even so much as take me into consideration.

"You mean since the—er—divorce?" I inquired.

"She has been in seclusion all of the time. She has seen no man—that is to say, no man for whom she could possibly entertain a— But, of course, you are mistaken in your impression, Mr. Smart. There is absolutely nothing in what you say."

"A former sweetheart, antedating her marriage," I suggested hopelessly.

"She has no sweetheart. Of that I am positive," said she with conviction.

"She must have had an army of admirers. They were legion after her marriage. I may be pardoned for reminding you."

She started. "Has she never mentioned Lord Amberdale to you?" she asked.

"Amberdale?" I repeated, with a queer sinking of the heart. "No, Mrs. Titus. An Englishman?"

She was mistress of herself once more. In a very degage manner she informed me that his lordship, a most attractive and honorable young Englishman, had been one of Aline's warmest friends at the time of the divorce proceedings. But of course there was nothing in that! They had been good friends for years, nothing more, and he was a perfect dear.

But she couldn't fool me. I could see that there was something working at the back of her mind, but whether she was distressed or gratified I was not by way of knowing.

"I've never heard her mention Lord Amberdale," said I.

Her eyes narrowed slightly. Had I but known, the mere fact that the countess had not spoken of his lordship provided her experienced mother with an excellent reason for believing that there was something between them. She abruptly brought the conversation to a close and left me, saying that she was off for her beauty nap.

Runaway June

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

"Mary, you're discharged," she said. Sawyer had drawn the boy to him very thoughtfully, but now he thrust his hand in his pocket and produced some money. He counted out some of it and gave it to the nurse.

"You needn't blame me!" flared the nurse. "I didn't teach him to say those things. The boy has a nasty temper. The doctor said so."

"That will do, Mary," said Mrs. Sawyer quietly. "You may go." She stood motionless until the nurse walked out. "Will you hold the baby, Harry?"

"I'll bet you. Come here, Buster." And he gazed down fondly not at the baby, but into the eyes of his wife, as he took the tiny burden.

She smiled up at him. There were tears trembling on her lashes. She caught up the curly headed little girl, took her over to the washbasin in the corner and vigorously scrubbed that chocolate begrimed countenance and kissed it; then she stooped down by the boy and put her arms around him.

"Mother doesn't want you to say naughty words like that." And there was heartbreak in her tones. A tear dropped on the boy's upturned face. He snuggled his head on her shoulder, and a chubby arm stole about her neck.

Elizabeth Sawyer was half laughing and half crying as she sat at the desk with the curly haired little girl on her lap and the boy leaning against her. She took up the telephone.

"Edward Jones, please."

"Betty!" There was such a ring in the voice as neither the man nor the woman had heard for years.

She held up her hand to him. Her lips were twitching, and her eyes were swimming, but she could not speak. She spoke clearly, however, when a tap of the telephone bell announced her call.

"This is Elizabeth Sawyer, Mr. Jones. I've been looking over your proposition of purchase." A moment of silence. She turned her eyes upon her husband. There was a new softness in them. "I might be tempted if you made the price high enough." Another silence. "Now, Mr. Jones, you'll have to come higher than that. Make me your very best offer." Her face suddenly glowed. "I'll take it. I'll fill in the contract, sign it, and you may give the check to my secretary. I'll send it over immediately."

Her husband's arm was about her as she filled in the amount which had been agreed upon and signed it. In Harry Sawyer's other arm was the baby. The four members of the Sawyer family were clustered in an unusually small space for them. The husband witnessed the agreement with great joy. Mrs. Sawyer's secretary signed it with her notarial seal and went away.

"Betty!" The man's face was against her cheek. "Sweetheart."

She kissed him and rose briskly. She took the toddlers each by a hand.

"Harry, dear, let's go to the house and start a home!"

The office was empty except for the forgotten little figure near the window, and from that corner there came a low moan. June Warner rose unsteadily. Something dreadful had happened. The rock to which she had clung had crumbled under her grasp. Was independence, too, a failure? Nothing could have been more perfect than the mutual esteem in which the Sawyers had held each other, and in their love had existed no taint of obligation or of bounty. Yet through all these years they had missed something which now, for the first time, they were to find.

June was dazed as she hurried to the bare little room. She had left Ned to achieve her independence, as Elizabeth Sawyer had done, but June had not taken motherhood into her calculations.

CHAPTER III.

SCATTI in the deserted bank vault stood with his eyes lowered for a moment, while the pursuers of the little runaway bride crowded about him. Presently he lifted his eyes to the ceiling, but they did not look into Mrs. Moore's on their way up, and he began to edge slowly along the wall again. There was a growl of anger from Ned Warner.

"I'll beat it out of him!" declared Ned and started for the extremely silent chauffeur, who jumped into the corner and lowered his head and covered his face with his arms. He was afraid of fists, though not of knives or revolvers.

Bobbie Blethering jumped in front of Ned, but was thrust aside. June's gentle faced mother could not be disposed of so easily.

"Ned," she said, and her light touch upon his arm as she looked pleadingly up into his eyes was stronger than any muscular force could have been.

Shivering with the revulsion of his passion, Ned put his arm around Mrs. Moore and walked away with her to the other end of the tiny room, while Iris Blethering threw her arms around Bobbie's neck and enjoyed a few good sobs. Scatti, left alone in the corner, straightened up slowly and, raising his shoulders, cocked his head and then gazed at the cobwebs. Presently he puckered one corner of his mouth line, and there stole upon the pentup air, soft and low and sweet, the melting strains of "Santa Lucia."

Down a cross street hurried the maid, Marie, her high cheek bones burning with excitement and her eyes red. On her way she had collected Officer Dowd, and he was a great comfort to her. She was a person who was particularly pleasing to policemen. A large and extremely black colored woman with a market basket caught sight of Marie from afar off and came bobbing as fast as she could waddle.

In a swift taxi came a vivacious brunette.

All these were centered around the destinies of the beautiful little runaway bride.

Tired and still dazed from her disillusionment, June Warner turned into the dim hallway of Mrs. Waters' lodging house, and wearily she climbed the stairs. Halfway up she stopped to stifle a cough which had been growing upon her since she had entered upon this struggle for an elusive independence. She turned into her bare little room and sank into the chair. With numbed indifference she noted that the washstand had been moved from its place in front of the door at the head of the bed, but she was too much preoccupied to wonder at it. She stopped to rest for a moment, her hand upon her chest; then mechanically she picked up a pair of pants from the table and started to sew.

The light seemed to grow dim. She was faint and dizzy. She took her sewing to the bed with her and lay down for a moment.

The hall door slowly opened, and a young woman, her eyes sparkling, her cheeks ruddy with the flush of health, walked in, clad in gorgeous raiment. It was the vivacious brunette, Tommy Thomas.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. M. A. LEONARD

"Now Nell," said Mrs. Morton, "if you run your table as you've been doing you'll find it hard in the poorhouse. No careful housewife buys baker's bread."

"We are not big bread eaters, mother, and I figured it out that the fuel and work would make it fully as expensive to bake."

"Work! A housekeeper is not paid by the hour. It's a woman's business to run her home as saving as she can and not count the work. Don't be afraid of work, Nell; it never killed anybody."

Mrs. Morton was charging around the big farm kitchen like a devastating cyclone, carrying all before it.

"Another thing," she continued, "you should use your dry bread, toasted in the oven, instead of crackers. You pay for one-fourth pound of pasteboard and paper, at 10c a pound, when you buy those expensive wafers. I counted half a dozen boxes when I was cleaning your pantry."

"But we like crackers better than bread," objected Nell.

"Like them!" The old lady stopped, and with her arms akimbo, looked sternly at Nell, propped up in a big rocker on the back porch. "Are you one of the people who must have what is liked regardless of the cost? I'm sorry if you are; it means you'll never get anything ahead. The people who must have what they like at [illegible] people every time. Blessed is the man who can draw the line here." She drew her hand in an uncompromising manner just below her mouth. "Don't let Richard make a god of his appetite; he wasn't raised to do it."

Nell made no reply and the old lady resumed the offensive and charged into the work as if it were the ranks of an invading army against which she was called to do battle daily.

Nell gazed over the cornfields which alone remained green in the drought of summer. She heard the cheerful cackling and singing of the poultry around the barn, and the bleating of some young calves that stood with heads protruding through the bars of the calf yard, expectantly awaiting the pails of warm milk that the hired man was bringing. Everything seemed so peaceful, so broad and free.

"Another thing"—the voice of her mother-in-law brought her back with a jolt—"you use those new-fangled breakfast foods, flaked and puffed and what not. Good graham and cornmeal mush has some nourishment in it, and is not wasteful."

"But I don't like mush," said Nell, an impatient tone in her voice.

"You could learn to like it. A person can cultivate a sensible appetite, and be the stronger for it. If your mother had brought you up to eat as you should you could stand more."

"I can stand as much as most women," flared Nell. "Life should be something sweet and free, not a constant repression." Nell's voice broke.

"Life's a battle!" the sturdy old fighter of life's campaigns proclaimed as she paused by the open door. Seeing the handkerchief wiping away the tears she added in a softer tone, "You are in the hospital now, Nell, and not ready to join the ranks at present."

Household Hints

WORTH KNOWING

To Use Silk Rags—Make portieres. Cut silk rage (or scraps of silk gathered in sewing room) in strips like for making rag rugs. Sew together and wind in balls. Mix the colors so it will have a hit and miss appearance after it is woven. Anyone that weaves rugs will weave them. Make body of portieres with the mixed colors; about half a yard from the bottom make a stripe of some plain color. Sew the plain colors in separate balls. Finish one edge and across bottom with a short fringe or ball trimming (can buy it at any art or trimming store). Very pretty when finished.

To Use Silk Pieces—You can use them for making covers for couch pillows. Those not suitable to piece cut into narrow strips like carpet rags; sew them together hit and miss; knit on large wooden needles, casting on fifty-six stitches. Knit two sides and sew together; bright and durable.

Bunion Cure—Soak foot ten or fifteen minutes in water hot as can be borne. Keep putting in more hot water as it cools, then apply absorbent cotton well wet with equal parts of spirits of camphor and turpentine mixed. Do this on retiring at night, next morning pour some of the mixture on foot after you have your stocking on. Wear a narrow soled shoe, but with a full upper. This will cure one of not too long standing, and relieve you if it is.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Ham—Take a whole ham; leave skin on and steam four hours (always put it in the wash boiler. Invert a colander to raise it out of the water.) Take the thick skin off while hot and score the fat in squares. Place a whole clove in each square. But a cup of light brown sugar all over it, then pour a cup of mild vinegar over that. Bake one hour in moderate oven, basting frequently. This is the most delicious ham, either hot or cold.

Baby Chanticleer Salad—Make nest on a flat platter, from finely cut cabbage; sprinkle pepper, salt and nut meats over cabbage. Take hard-boiled egg for body of each chick. From a soft cream cheese shape heads onto the bodies; with a silver knife smooth down the joined edge. Join heads to small end of egg. Use apple seeds for eyes, cabbage leaf for wings, end of toothpick for bill. Place little chicks in cabbage nest and set away to chill. When ready to serve, pour salad dressing over. If wanted for a centerpiece decoration, garnish with lettuce leaves from an under dish.

Asparagus Omelet—Boil about twelve heads asparagus and cut green ends, when tender, into short pieces. Mix with two well-beaten eggs, adding pinch of salt, and butter. Melt tablespoon butter in omelet pan, pour in mixture, stir till it thickens over fire, then fold it nicely over and serve.

Bran Coffee—Delicious and inexpensive pure food drink. Take two quarts bran, one heaping tablespoon salt, one cup baking molasses. Mix thoroughly, put in large pan, place in moderately hot oven. Stir occasionally and remove when it is nicely browned. Then stir in two well-beaten eggs, again mixing thoroughly. Leave until dry. Put into cans; ready for use. Prepare same as ordinary coffee.

Cabbage Salad—Chop cabbage fine, then salt and let stand while you mix dressing as follows: One-half cup vinegar, one tablespoon flour, one-half teaspoon mustard, butter size of an egg. Cook till it forms a nice gravy and pour over cabbage.

Hash Without Meat—A very good hash of potatoes and lentils is made from 1½ cups of cold boiled potatoes, two cups of boiled lentils, one teaspoon of salt, pepper to taste, one-half cup of milk and one teaspoon of onion juice. Cook the hash in a frying pan until brown, and serve with tomato sauce.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CROW GALL

Animal School.

One summer day Miss Julia Jay remarked, "It is a sin
When it's so lovely out of doors that we have to stay in.
I'll tell you what I'll dare you all to do right now," said she,
"Let's lock the school-house door, and then let's hide the school-house key."

The children said, "That will be fun; let's do it right away!
But which of us will hide the key?" "I will," said Julia Jay.
"I'll put it in the branches of the very tallest tree;
Professor Crab will never think of looking there," said she.

They ran right quick and locked the door and gave Miss Julia Jay
The key, which she took in her bill, and gaily flew away.
And as the children all stood there a-laughing fit to kill,
They saw that old Professor Crab was coming up the hill.

Said he, "Good morning, children; what is this fuss about?"
"We can't have any school today," said they, "because we are locked out."
"Oh, no," said good Professor Crab, as calmly as could be,
"We'll go to school as usual; I have an extra key."

And sure enough that sly old Crab unlocked the door with ease.
"It's well, in case of accident," said he, "to have another key.
But how the other key was lost, I do not know," said he,
"Unless perhaps" (and here he smiled) "it flew up in a tree."

Miss Julia Jay heard every word the old Professor said,
For she was sitting in a tree directly overhead.
Her bill flew open with surprise; the key fell to the ground.
"Ah, ha!" said good Professor Crab, "the missing key is found.

"And now," remarked Professor Crab, "you may all go inside.
And you, Miss Julia Jay, come down, you need not try to hide.
I have a bit of extra work for you to do," said he.
"You must stay one hour after school and practive writing KEY."

Thought Julia Jay, "I don't believe I care much for this joke;
It didn't go as I had planned; I'm sorry that I spoke;
But I won't try another trick," declared Miss Julia Jay;
And furthermore she's kept her word. I'm very glad to say.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

"The Typhoon," which will be the special photoplay feature at Proctor's today, depicts the unusual story of the love and tragedy of a young Japanese and Helene, a Parisian actress, interwoven with the intrigues of the Japanese Government, its spies and its methods of procedure. The crowning climax is a heroic sacrifice of Hironari, showing the loyalty of the Japanese race to their country, even to the giving of life itself.

Tokoramo has been sent to Paris by his country to secure the plans of the French military forces. His work is interfered with by the visits to his office of Helene, a chorus girl, with whom he has fallen in love. Helene has heartlessly thrown over her fiance, Bernisky, for the new and interesting Jap, and meanwhile Toko's countrymen in Paris have been informed by their spy of Helene's visits. Tokoramo endeavors to keep Helene from coming because he is working day and night, but to no avail. She continues to visit his apartments against his wishes, and one day, while there, her dejected sweetheart forces his way past the servant into Toko's room. Toko quickly hides Helene behind a curtain, where she listens to her own denunciations and exposure from the lips of the man she has so lightly deserted. When Bernisky departs, Toko brings Helene from her hiding-place and bids her go forever, but she pleads passionately to remain. Toko will not listen, and demands that she leave at once. Helene starts, and Toko, realizing how much he cares for her, calls her back. Then she refuses to stay, and in vehement denunciation tells him she will go back to Bernisky, and laughs at him—calls him a "yellow rat," and bids him return to his yellow country from whence he came. This enrages Toko, and he strangles Helene to death and leave her lying lifeless on his bed. The remainder of the story shows graphically how Toko's countrymen rally for their country. Toko must do his work—one of them must plead guilty. This lot is chosen by Hironari, a mere boy, who is finally guillotined. In the end, and as Toko as completed his work, he, too, dies, and the valuable papers are burned to escape detection just as the police are breaking into the apartment shows the vain sacrifice that has been made by the Japanese for the "sake of Nippon."

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

WHEREAS it has pleased our Heavenly Father to take from the scenes of his earthly labors to His Heavenly Home our beloved Elder and Fellow Laborer, George Lyman VanEmburgh, on Sunday morning, March 21, 1915, now therefore be it

RESOLVED that we, the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church, do hereby express our deep sense of loss and keen appreciation of his Godly life and service. Elder VanEmburgh was actively identified with the work of Trinity Reformed church from its beginning, being a charter member of the church and one of its first Elders. He, with others, first suggested the organization of a Reformed church in Plainfield and he served her faithfully in the office of Elder, his very presence and attitude being a tower of strength. He reminded one of the priests who bore the Ark of the Covenant across the Jordan. He was a steadfast Christian; one invariably knew where he stood on any religious question. He was a man of deep spirituality and power, an ardent student of the Bible and a lover and warm supporter of the prayer meetings. He was a man of genial and loving disposition and many will rise up and call his memory blessed. And be it further

RESOLVED that we express to his wife and the family our sincerest sympathy in their sorrow and point them to the victory of faith which this sainted Father has obtained; and be it further

RESOLVED that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, published in the local papers and in the Christian Intelligencer and spread in full upon the minutes of this Consistory.

Done in the Consistory on this eighth day of April, A. D., Nineteen Hundred and Fifteen.

JOHN Y. BROEK, President.
E. F. SHEPPARD, Clerk.

A MARGIN OF SAFETY

An engineer never thinks of building a bridge without allowing a sufficient margin of safety. No more can you build a successful career without a margin of "capital" safety in your business.

The average business man knows that it is not too little BUSINESS, but rather too little CAPITAL with which to handle his growing business, that gives him the most concern.

Why not, therefore, remedy this weakness by laying aside monthly, through the medium of our Installment Bond plan, say $25. In 38 months you will have acquired $1,000 additional capital to be drawn upon as your needs require.

Allow us to explain the details.

FRENCH WILLING TO MAKE PEACE

So Declares Miss Richards in Final Lecture, But Germans Deny Any Such Move.

THE RIGGS BANK CASE

Speaker Says That The Controversy Between Federal Reserve Board Members and Bank Officials is Almost a Persecution.

In concluding her course of lectures on "Current Events," yesterday afternoon in the Hartridge auditorium, Miss Janet E. Richards, devoted her time to a consideration of some affairs and the animosities that have arisen across the sea.

The controversy between two members of the Federal Reserve Board and the Riggs National Bank, of Washington, was the main subject of Miss Richard's talk. "The friction between the two has grown so that it is almost a persecution against the latter," said Miss Richards. "The bank officials allege that it is a conspiracy to ruin their business, while the bank has not been managed correctly and that its officers were guilty of acts of doubtful legality. Out of this we have a national aspect of the case, the fact that we have no centralized system of currency control.

"In the conspiracy alleged, the bank officials claim that the members of the Federal Board were guilty of using undue influence and that many heavy depositors had withdrawn their money from the bank. Many believe there is a personal side to the case and that the bitter feeling existing between the vice-president of the Riggs bank and John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, has much to do with the case." Miss Richards is personally acquainted with the former and gave her per-

NOVEL CONCERT BY SINK-PHONY BAND

Classical Program Enjoyed by Many at Congregational Parish House.

A delightful audience greeted Frau Wilhelmina Johanna Schmoker and her Sink-Phony Orchestra yesterday afternoon at the Congregational Church parish house. An exceptional program was offered and one certain to captivate lovers of good music. The "Pilgrim's Chorus," "Just Because It's You, Dear," and "Barcarolle" were well rendered, and a violin solo, "Humoresque," by Fraulein Mushee Yelman was especially effective. "John Brown's Baby" brought down the house.

The work of the entire orchestra reflects great credit upon its conductor, who displays with pardonable pride an array of handsome medals, each of which spells achievement to its owner. Plainfield is most fortunate in securing Frau Schmoker's presence at this time in view of her many engagements. This unusual orchestra will make its second appearance at the Parish House this evening at eight o'clock. There being no reserved seats the "standing room only" sign will undoubtedly be displayed early. The program:

"Cheer for Old Amherst," "Garland of Old Fashioned Roses," "Solomon Levi and Spanish Cavalier," orchestra; "Cavelleria Rusticanna," Signorina Phillipi; "Pilgrim's Chorus," orchestra; violin solo, "Humoresque," Fraulein Mushee Yelman; "John Brown's Baby," chorus; (a) "Swanee River," (b) "Dixie," orchestra; "Anchored," Fraulein Brunhilde von Bonde and orchestra.

"Just Because It's You, Dear," Fraulein Latewski and Frohmann and orchestra; "Sing Me to Sleep," "Uncle Joe's Rag Time," "Sweet and Low," "Priest's March," orchestra, "Barcarolle," Fraulein Latewski, Wincklewski, Hagnana and von Bonde; "Johnnie Schmoker," Frau Wilhelmina Johanna Schmoker; "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "Tipperary," orchestra.

The following comprise the orchestra: The Misses Lillian Whitall, flute, Hazel Zeek, trombone; Hazel Lockwood, violin; Lillian Engstrand, bugle; Addie Eastman, clarinet; Ethel Van Zandt, bag-pipes; Jessie Phelps, oboe; Nellie Winckler, teakettle; Laura Baker, ocarina; Marion Forbes, horn; Mary Decker, bass horn; Julia Post, harp; Theresa Fisher, cymbals and triangle, Abbie Hague, bassoon; Nellie Gonyea, cornet; Lilla Bateman, trombone; Sarah Watrons, trumpet; Evelyn Fisher, horn; Beatrice Clark, egg-beater; Kathleen Phillips, hand-organ; Mrs. D. Foster Updike, conductor, Miss Alice Morgan, pianist.

MARTINE REISSUES CANDIDACY NOTICE

Jersey Senator Will Begin Campaign for Nomination in July.

Washington, April 16—On the eve of his departure for Hawaii, Senator Martine yesterday reiterated the announcement of his candidacy for reelection, originally carried in the papers November 20, 1913. He states he will open his campaign activities in July, although the primaries do not come until September, 1916, and promises to conduct his canvass with the same exuberance of spirit that has made his name a household word where'er our tongue is spoke.

The Senator and Mrs. Martine will leave here tomorrow for the West. At San Francisco they will join other members of Congress who are going to Hawaii. The government of our insular territory has become possessed of the notion that if it brought some members of Congress to that fair land, and made them acquainted with its charms, there would be a livelier appreciation of its needs in Congress. Hence the trip.

But to get back to the question closest to Mr. Martine's heart. Meeting a newspaper correspondent as he was surveying the juxtaposition of the Riggs National Bank and the Treasury Department, yesterday morning, he said:

"I shall run simply on my record in the Senate, for which I have no apologies to offer. I have voted for every measure advocated in the Democratic platform, and I believe that a review of the records will show me to have been present at more roll calls of the Senate than any other member of that body.

"Of course, sometimes I may have made mistakes, but I always have voted as my conscience and judgment dictated, and never will be found against my name, 'Present, but not voting.' Sometimes, too, I have not voted in accord with President Wilson's views, but, as I say, I have voted on my judgment and my conscience.

"I believe we are entering on an era of unprecedented prosperity, and I am confident that our two chief enactments, the tariff law and the Federal reserve law, will stand the test of time and the most critical scrutiny, and will help advance this prosperity.

"President Wilson's policy of 'watchful waiting' cannot be too highly commended, and it is going to be a great help to Democrats who seek renomination and re-election. Future generations will bless him for it, and will bless the Democratic party for having given Wilson to the country. In the great war of Europe we should keep hands off, and I and sure the President will do so.

"Of course, I expect rivalry in my candidacy for the Senatorial nomination, and I not only expect it but shall welcome it. The desire to be a Senator of the United States is a most laudable ambition and one of which any man may be proud. But in any contest I shall fight a clean fight—there will be no mudslinging on my part and no personalities. Any and all rivals will be welcome, and we can fight it out in an open field, with no favors and no ill feeling."

WAS ONCE A SOLDIER; IS NOW COOKING FISH

Charles Shurig, of South Plainfield, received a letter a few days ago from her husband who was called to colors by the German government while his ship was in a German port. Mr. Shurig was the chef on the steamship Berlin of the North German Lloyd Line. At the outbreak of the war he was sent on a hospital ship doing the duties of a cook.

Later he was sent to the front and after spending a few months fighting in some of the bloodiest battles of the war he was recalled. He is now giving public cooking lessons demonstrating to the German people how to cook a certain fish which was formerly used for fertilizer. This fish was so plentiful that the people never used it and are ignorant of the way of cooking it. Mr. Shurig states that he is in good health and is ocnfident that the German nation will be victorious.

CASE POSTPONED.

SOCIETY ENJOYS AMATEUR PLAYS

Fine Performances of "The Twelve Pound Look" and "The Man of Destiny."

FOR BELGIAN RELIEF

Local Talent Score a Triumph in the Presentation of Two Well Known One-act Plays—Performers Showered With Floral Gifts.

A fashionable and appreciative audience gathered at The Plainfield Theatre last night to enjoy the presentation of two well-known plays, "The Twelve Pound Look," by J. M. Barrie, and "The Man of Destiny," by Bernard Shaw, which were given by local amateur talent under the auspices of the Plainfield Belgian Relief Society. Both productions were given in a faultless manner and the work of the performers left nothing to be desired in the finished performances.

The productions are short one-act plays, requiring small casts. "The Twelve Pound Look," which was given first afforded ample opoprtunity for those taking the character parts to display their talent. Mrs. L. W. Serrell, as "Kate," the first wife of "Sir Harry," which part was taken by Charles H. Lyman, was unusually good, her acting eliciting hearty applause, while Miss Helen Joy as "Lady Sims," gave a fine portrayal of that part. Mr. Lyman as well as Hugh Jarvis as "Toombes," the other remaining character in the play impersonated their roles perfectly.

Turning from the comedy lines in the first play, "The Man of Destiny," presented the more serious side of life. The scene was an inn at Tavazzno on the road from Lodi to Milan, May, 1796. The situation in this play arises from the character of the future Empress Josephine. While the young Napoleon was carrying on his famous Italian campaign, Josephine, his wife, was carrying on a serious flirtation in Paris. The plot of "The Man of Destiny" depends upon the efforts of a girl friend of Josephine to prevent a letter revealing this flirtation and compromising Josephine, from reaching her husband.

In this production, Mrs. Maxwell E. Perkins, as "Lady" scored a triumph and carried off the honors. It was conceded that a professional could not have impersonated the part any better. There was an entire absence of anything that resembled the amateur, so perfectly natural did she act her part. She was ably supported by Brown Rolston, as "Napoleon;" Walter L. Righter as "Lieutenant," and Mr. Jarvis as "Guiseppi." Mr. Rolston and Mr. Jarvis have already won their spurs in amateur dramatics, which they fully sustained, while Mr. Righter last night proved his right to a place in the ranks of amateurs. As a result of the productions between $600 and $700 will be realized as profit to be used in relief work for the Belgiums. Friends of the performers showered the latter with floral gifts after the performance. During the evening young women sold candy through the audience.

The following letter from the Queen of Belgium's Secretary, addressed to Mrs. F. W. Wallace, was thrown on the screen between the plays but could not be read easily.

MUCH INTEREST IN Y. M. C. A. INNOVATION

"Father and Son" Banquet Attended by Many Members Last Night.

Fathers and sons, between the ages of 12 and 65 years, gathered at the Y. M. C. A. last night to the number of one hundred and fifty and enjoyed the banquet served by the mothers and daughters under the auspices of the social committee of the association. The meeting was a most enthusiastic one and was the first of its kind ever held in this city. It took place in the auditorium of the association building and after the excellent repast served by the Women's Auxiliary the gathering heard several interesting and inspiring speeches on the relationship that should exist between a father and his son.

James McClymont, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee of the association, was toastmaster and before introducing the speakers outlined the work that is being done along various lines in the boys' department. He spoke especially of the new plans of teaching boys to swim and along these lines presented Harold Zeek, a member of the boys' department, with a solid gold medal as a reward for successfully passing the Junior Life Saving examination given by Physical Director Meermans.

The principal speaker of the evening was Dr. George J. Fisher, M. D., head of the International Physical department of the Y. M. C. A. and he gave his view of such a meeting as being indicative of a new spirit in the relationship of father and son. He told of the origin of "Father and Son" banquets. The movement was started in Cleveland, O., by the general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and was so successful that he asked the mayor of the city to issue a proclamation in favor of the idea.

Alexander Millar took the opposite side of the subject and spoke briefly on "What a Son Should Be to His Father." He gave some fine examples of failures and successes in life and ended by saying that there was no relationship in the world as valuable and pleasant as that of the father and son.

During the evening Miss Marian Blanchard entertained with piano selections. The members of the social committee which had charge of the affair are: F. O. Dunning, chairman; Edgar Sheppard, G. C. M. Smith, Rae Boice, John Carson and Henry Kinney. The following committee of the Women's Auxiliary was responsible for the dinner: Mrs. T. F. Hylan, Mrs. J. A. Blanchard, Mrs. James E. Kimball, Mrs. Philip Suffern, Mrs. F. M. Genung, Mrs. A. K. Willett, Mrs. John Manley, Mrs. H. R. Moyer and Miss Elizabeth Little. Those who acted as waitresses were the Misses Marian Blanchard, Elizabeth Martin, Marjorie Henwood, Hildegrad Hamilton, Jennie Peacock, Elizabeth Chickering and Evelyn Manley.

One of the features of the meeting was a gymnastic demonstration by the Plainfield Boys' Club. Thirty-four small boys, under the direction of Gus Engler, gave exhibitions of hand drills and calisthenics.

BORO HIGH SCHOOL DANCING CLASS GIVES A RECEPTION

A reception and dance was given last night to the members and friends of the North Plainfield High School dancing class in the kindergarten room. The final class lesson was held a week ago and the reception last night brought the course to a fiting close.

The lessons have been carried on regularly for the past twelve weeks under the instruction of Ronald Conroy and the work accomplished by the pupils has been very creditable.

The affair last night was in charge of a committee comprising Mrs. F Rowley, chairman; Mrs. F. Avery, Mrs. A. Olmstead, Mrs. L. Dunham, Mrs. W. Kirch, Mrs. G. Englehardt and Mrs. J. Hull.

The money received from the class lessons will go towards the building of the new gymnasium.

WOMEN'S GUILD TEA.

The Woman's Guild of the Heavenly Rest Church held a very enjoyable tea yesterday afternoon in the Parish House which was unusually well attended. The rooms were attractively decorated in spring flowers and potted plants. A feature of the afternoon was the playing of guessing games. Mrs. J. Riley, of Roselle, won the prize, a beautiful vase. Mrs. James Chamberlain and Mrs. William Corbin poured tea and the young girls of the congregation served.

Tentative Estimate Over $13,000 Less Than Last Year's Department Expense.

FOR PUBLIC HEARING

Publication of Figures Made for the Benefit of Taxpayers—Several Big "Slices" Have Been Taken From Important Items.

Tentative figures compiled for the city budget of 1915 indicate that a cut of $13,065 has been affected over the appropriations made in 1914 for municipal expenses, decreases having been made in several departments and a number of minor increases granted. Notable among the latter are $500 to the Playground Commission; $1,000 to police pensions, and $500 to the city poor department. In view of the fact that the amount of county and school taxes cannot be ascertained at the present time they are not given in the tentative budget.

A cut of $5,000 has been made in the fire department item; $500 in the police department; $3,500 in permanent pavement work for the city's share, and the assessment and map figures have been reduced from $3,500 to $125. The tentative budget to be presented at the public hearing on the appropriations made in 1914 for the ensuing year is published on page 12 by the Common Council.

Many minor "cuts" have been made in other items of expense, the dog catching fee being cut down from $400 to $100; miscellaneous expenses, from $1,000 to $500, and printing and stationery from $44,000 to $3,600. The $3,500 appropriation for the support of indigent patients in Muhlenberg Hospital is not a "flat" expenditure but one that is governed by the number of patients and length of treatment each received. The city pays so much per person to the institution, and the appropriation is made as a means of covering this debt. Last the $3,500 fell over $1,000 short of covering the actual cost, but it was not thought advisable to increase the appropriation despite the application made by the hospital's board of governors.

Salaries during the coming year will be increased $1,200. An additional $25 has been put aside for swamp drainage. This is the city's share in addition to the $27,000 appropriated by the county for this work. Last year Plainfield paid $125 for the work done in this section, and an appropriation of $150 has been asked for 1915.

AWARDED MILITARY CROSS FOR BRAVERY

C. H. Humphrey Describes Thrilling Experience Fighting With Allies.

H. C. Smith has received a letter from C. H. Humphrey, formerly associated with him in his business, who was wounded on the battlefield in France, and is now in London convalescing from his wounds. As stated in a recent issue of this paper Mr. Humphrey was awarded a military cross for his bravery, and he enclosed a clipping from a London daily in the letter, stating just why he was awarded this cross. The clipping reads, in part, as follows:

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the military cross on the following two officers in recognition of their gallantry while serving with the expeditionary force:

Second Lieutenant C. H. Humphrey, East Anglian Field Company, Royal Engineers (Territorial Force), for conspicuous gallantry at Gevenchy on February 20, 1915, when, in leading the Royal Engineers, which accompanied a storming party, he was wounded by shrapnel in the first few yards of the advance, but continued with his men into the German trench, and assisted in driving them out with bombs."

Mr. Humphrey received a a wound in his back, and, speaking of his condition in his letter to Mr. Smith, which was posted on March 27, he said that he had just left the hospital after spending a month on his back He said that it would be another month before the wound was properly healed, and in another two months he will be fit for duty. He said it took five days to transfer him from the battlefield in France to the hospital in London. Owing to the rigid censorship Mr. Humphry dared incorporate no facts relating to the war in his letter.

MATTLACK BIBLE CLASS ENTERTAINS

Mothers Are Guests at Annual Banquet at First Baptist Church.

Mrs. L. H. Mattlacks Bible Class of young women enjoyed its annual banquet at the First Baptist church last night, the class having as its guests the mothers of the members. After an excellent dinner was served by Mrs. Henry Johnson, the class enjoyed several interesting addresses. Mrs. Mattlack, teacher of the class, was the toastmaster, and she extended a welcome to the mothers, as well as the speakers of the evening, who were Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the Church; Arthur M. Harris, the Bible school superintendent, and Mrs. Edward S. Ralston, of the Netherwood Reformed church.

All of the speeches were in a lighter vein, although some excellent advice was given to the members of the class intended to increase the efficiency of the organization. Emphasis ws laid on the importance of improving on's time and not wasting it. Both Dr. Strong and Mrs. Harris touched upon this point, while Mrs. Ralston urged all to be optimistic, and in addressing the mothers urged them to do all in their power to disapprove some of the generally accepted ideas about mothers-in-law. All of the speeches were encouraging, and the social features were much enjoyed.

The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Miss Dollie Boisterle, chairman; Mrs. John Schenck and the Misses Viola Higgins, Lou Stites, Bertha Hoagland and Ida Wheler.

WILLIAM SHOTWELL GIVEN A SURPRISE

Veteran Church Treasurer is Honored for His Long Service.

In addition to the appreciation shown William H. Shotwell at the annal meeting of the First Presbyterian church Wednesday night, when he was given a testimonial and flowers as an expression of the appreciation by the congregation of his faithful services as treasurer of the church for fifty years, the officers and their wives gave him a surprise last night. Nearly a hundred were present, and the utmost cordiality and good-fellowship prevailed.

Reminiscent and congratulatory addresses were made by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, and Rev. Lewis Bond, and were replied to by Mr. Shotwell. Mr. Bond, Mr. Shotwell and Mrs. A. L. Cadmus are the three surviving members who joined the church fifty-eight years ago. Mrs. Cadmus was not present, being on a visit to her grandson, Stanley Karner, in the West.

John Burroughs, of East Fifth street, sent a delightful little memento in the shape of a cherry pit, carved to represent a basket, and with the legend cut on the stone, "April 1, 1915, Bro. Wm." The workmanship was very skillfully executed by Mr. Burroughs himself.

During the evening an original poem was read by the author Mrs. William J. Hamilton, a member of the church, in which there was expressed the love, devotion and long service of Mr. Shotwell as treasurer of the church.

After gaining admittance by smashing in the barn door they discovered that they were unable to start the machine, and they were obliged to go away without it.

ASKS ORPHANS' COURT FOR AN ORDER OF DISCOVERY

Through her counsel, William Newcorn, Mrs. Vandalia Runyon, of this city, widow of Frank W. Runyon, has made application in the Orphan's Court at Elizabeth for an order of discovery, which will bring about an inquiry into the estate of her mother-in-law, the late Mrs. Elizabeth Runyon. Under the terms of the will, the Plainfield Trust Company was made executor, and in an accounting made a month ago, it was stated that there were no assets. The property was originally divided between two sons, the late Frank W. and Elmer E. Runyon, both of whom have died since the execution of the will.

In her exceptions to the accounting Mrs. Vandalia Runyon states that there are assets of which no mention is made. Among these she mentioned $3,000 worth of personal effects. Judge Connolly received the petition and fixed May 14 as the date for the hearing in the Orphan's Court.

ADJOURNED HEARING IN GAHAGAN WILL CASE

In the Orphan's Court at Elizabeth this morning Judge James J. Connolly adjourned the hearing in the Gahagan will case for one week. Four daughters of the testator have twenty-five exceptions through their counsel, William H. Wilson. These were made known last November, following the disposal of an argument relating to a codicil, which was in the court for a long time. One of the exceptions deals with the amount of counsel fee allowed in the previous matter.

Mr. Gahagan lived in this city at the time of his demise, and left an estate valued at more than $100,000. The daughters who take exception to the will are Mrs. Blanche Scheelen, Mrs. Daisy Hetfield, Mrs. Jennie Wright and Mrs. Mellissa Homan. The principal beneficiary under the will was Mr. Gahagan's widow, who is stepmother to the daughters.

INTERESTING LECTURE ON EXTENSION WORK

Vineland Training School Instructor Outlines His Department Endeavor.

An instructive talk regarding the work being done at the Vineland Training School was delivered by Alexander Johnson, director of department extension, to an audience in the Plainfield High School auditorium last night, the speaker's thorough knowledge of his subject coupled with his finished oratory, keeping his listeners' interest from start to finish. He dwelt in a general way with the problem of caring for abnormal people and gave graphic examples of the work being carried on at the New Jersey institution.

Dr. Johnson described the lives of some individuals with whom he has been associated from their early 'teens to their twenties and outlined their peculiarities and the methods used in attempting to benefit them. He described the work being conducted on the farms in South Jersey where the patients are put to work tilling the soil, doing housework and various other tasks with a view to bringing out their usefulness and ascertaining the line of endeavor for which they are best fitted.

FRENCH IN FAVOR OF PEACE

sonal views on the matter.

Miss Richards read the proclamation of the President ordering the National flag to be displayed at half mast yesterday on all Federal Buildings and vessels of the United States and in the foreign embassies, legations and consulates, in commemoration of the death, fifty years ago, of the martyred Lincoln. The speaker briefly narrated the events leading up to Lincoln's death.

The war question was touched on, Miss Richards, saying that although the French are willing to make peace, the German embassy denies any move in that direction and her terms are just as hard as ever. "The wastage of life up to the present time approximates 6,000,000 men, dead or incapacitated," said Miss Richards. The cost of financing the war thus far is said to be $9,000,000 and the only return the various countries get is a gradual wearing out of men with no decided victory." The Russian campaign in the Carpathians was spoken of, and its wonderful progress in trying to weaken the Austrian forces and thus get closer to Germany. Newer complications with Great Britain, Germany and Mexico were all touched upon in passing.

Miss Richards is expected to continue her course next winter again, doubtless beginning the first week in November. Her series will consist of ten lectures and the cost of the season ticket will be reduced. Miss Richards thanked those present for their faithful attendance during the past season, also saying that the Plainfield audience was one of the most select that she addressed.

THE 1915 BUDGET.

Comparison of items in the city's tentative budget for 1915 with the appropriations of 1914 indicates that strict economy has resulted from the consultations held by the Mayor and Councilmanic finance committee during the past two months. Careful consideration of each estimate has been the policy, and as a result $13,065 less than last year is estimated to be needed in running the city during the present year. Of this amount $5,000 has been deducted from the fire department and $500 from the police department. An additional $500 has been set aside for street lighting and it is thought that the city poor department will require an added expenditure of $2,000 during the year. The city's share for the benefit of permanent pavements has been decreased $1,500. This was only to be expected inasmuch as the amount of work done in the past few years has gone a long way toward bettering local paving conditions and the amount of work to be done in the future has been minimized permanently.

Police pension requirements have been increased by $1,000 and the playground commission will receive $600 more for its work this year. One of the biggest cuts comes in the practical abolition of expenditures for assessments and maps, the figure being cut down from $3,500 to $125. This is one of the results of the assessment work and mapping that was done on an extensive scale during 1914 and which will render the expenditure unnecessary for a good many years to come. Taken as a whole the proposed budget is an unusually satisfactory document from every point of view and indicates that some careful and economical figuring has been done by city officials. While the county and school taxes are yet a matter of conjecture it is safe to predict that this year's figure will be lower than last year's.

It is anticipated that considerable public interest on the part of taxpayers will be evidenced in the public hearing next Friday night. This is the first real opportunity local property owners have had to gain direct information on the compiling of the budget items and they should avail themselves of the chance to question and criticize at the hearing. Heretofore the kicking has been done on the "outside," but this year those who think they have grievances to lodge can do so directly if they desire.

BAD MEAT.

Court action and not mere threatening would have been the proper course for the State and local health officer to pursue when they found a supply of diseased meat in a West Third street butcher shop. Nothing is too bad for the wholesaler or retailer who will knowingly dispose of tubercular flesh to human beings. The merchant might possibility have been ignorant of any wrong doing but someone must have been aware of the fact that the meat was not fit for human consumption and it was the Board of Health's place to single out that "someone" and prosecute to the full extent of the law. The customers to whom the dealer caters would in all probability not have been able to distinguish between tubercular meat and the wholesome kind and there is no telling how long this practice has been going on.

In his report the health officer said that "part of the lungs of the cow examined had already been given to customers and an examination of the remainder of the lungs and other organs disclosed an abundance of active tubercles." He further stated "that for sometime past the health officer has suspected that diseased meat was being sold in Plainfield and made efforts to secure proof." Therein he practically admits that the health of certain residents has been endangered by the distribution of unwholesome foodstuff and yet when it is claimed there is real proof the opportunity to "go after" the offender is passed up. The matter should be sifted down to the very bottom and if the petty dealer was ignorant of the fact that he was buying bad meat the "man higher up" should be prosecuted.

One cannot imagine a whole nation, outwardly so tranquil, living with so many superficial indications of its old prosperity, yet really held so fast in the vise of death—a vise from which only America can release by continuing to pour the wheat into Rotterdam. Belgium is like a man running from a mad bull the mad bull of hunger; thanks to the people with souls all over the world, Belgium has a lead on that mad bull, but she is still running for dear life.

She looks neither to the right nor to the left, she is silent, she does not call, but we Americans who as from a hill see and know the plight that Belgium is in, call to the world for help, implore the world not to relax its efforts in saving a whole nation from veritable death. The supreme hour for Belgium is not come, the Commission for Relief has not issued its supreme call, but conditions are such that we must not rest a moment.

"Backbone," a well printed and snappy little publication devoted to the interests of the Plainfield Young Men's Hebrew Association, has made its appearance, and is announced as a permanent monthly. It shows that much time and energy has been devoted to its preparation, and contains a number of interesting articles by well known Jewish residents. While primarily for the Jewish people, the little magazine contains much of interest to the general public, and we welcome it to the local publishing field.

Rabbi H. L. Martin, who has recently come to Plainfield to take charge of Temple Sholem, has written the contributed editorial for tomorrow. In it he will tell of some of the things that are being done to Americanize Jewish people who come to New York city.

The sweet girl graduate season will be upon us before we realize it. The space writers will be digging up stories of the young women who secured their graduation gowns at an expense of thirteen cents for the material, and with the aid of three old buttons.

Pretty near time to prepare for a clean-up week campaign.

BOYS REPRIMANDED.

Following a number of complaints made by theatre patrons, Patrolman Jack Fritts nabbed a quintet of small boys in front of the Plainfield Theatre last night. They were annoying automobilists and creating a disturbance. Arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning they were reprimanded by Judge DeMeza and let go.

A LITTLE DESSERT?

BREWED VS. DISTILLED LIQUOR WILL BE ISSUE AFTER THE WAR

A BIT of CHEER in the TRENCHES

The presentation by a German brewery of 3,000 bottles of beer to the wounded in the Austro-Hungarian hospital at Sarajevo, has reopened the discussion of the effects of alcoholic beverages on the fighting man. The German government forwarded the consignment duty free.

In the rush following the outbreak of hostilities, Russia attempted to solve the question by abolishing the manufacture of vodka; France forbade absinthe; Germany closed railway bars, and Kitchner announced that Tommy Atkins would not be permitted to indulge in liquor.

But upon deliberation by German physicians and scientists, the ban against beer has been lifted. The German diet adopted a resolution relieving from taxes articles intended for troops or the Red Cross societies, and arrangements were made to refund to brewers the tax paid by them on beer donated to the soldiers. The Bavarian government announced that it would refund to brewers taxes paid on malt used in the production of beer donated to the armies. The general staff of the First Bavarian Army Corps is operating three breweries, the roster of employes, from brew-master down, being recruited from the ranks.

Prince von Hatzveldt Trachenberg, counselor of the German embassy in Washington, in commenting on the exemption from malt and beer taxes clause, says: "Why charge the brewer this tax, when no taxes are collected on anything else sent to the soldiers? Red Cross and hospital supplies are duty free. Why not beer? Beer is not used by the German soldier as an intoxicant."

In France, proprietors of cafes who agree not to sell spirituous liquors have been exempted from license dues, but beer and wine are classed as hygienic drinks and come under the exempted clause. The minister of war, as compensation for the destruction of the absinthe traffic, issued orders for the increasing of the daily wine ration of the soldiers from one-third to one-half of a liter.

In the House of Commons, the under secretary of state was bombarded with questions concerning the alleged shipment of rum to the English troops in France. He replied that considerable rum had been sent to the troops, but that the men could take it or leave it as they wished. The army physician considered it necessary that soldiers exposed to the cold in the trenches should have some stimulant available.

Since Germany and England have not embraced total abstinence and the troops of neither nation have shown any noticeable decline in military efficiency, the liquor question will emerge from the war not in the form of total abstinence versus free indulgence, but as a question of brewed versus distilled liquors.

BRIBED NAPOLEON

The Prize Barras Offered to Have Him Wed Josephine.

A STEPPING STONE TO FAME.

Command of the Army In Italy Was the Lure That Won the Ambitious Young General to Court the Widow. A Surprise For Notary Raguideau.

Paul Jean Barras, the fiery French revolutionist, who took a leading part in the overthrow of Robespierre in 1794, then became a member of the committee of public safety and commander in chief on the thirteenth Vendemiaire, entering the Directory in 1795 and becoming dictator in 1797, was the man who while head of the government induced Josephine Beauharnais to become Bonaparte's wife. Both of them were unwilling. Mme. Tallien had apparently taken the affection of Barris away from Josephine. Bonaparte started like a war horse at the sound of a trumpet when Barras abruptly proposed that he should offer the widow his hand.

"I want no wife save this," he exclaimed, striking his sword hilt.

"Listen to me," said Barras. "You are brave, but poor. This widow of the Marquis de Beauharnais is in a position to advance your future. You are a foreigner and an exile. Her influential friends will serve you. Marry her and I procure you the command of the army in Italy."

A flush passed over the face of Bonaparte.

"Decide!" said Barras.

We all know the result. The bribe was too tempting, and Josephine yielded also. If her heart remained awhile untouched her vanity was less passive. As she listened to the glowing prophecies of the ardent young soldier she began to indulge the same visions and glory in the same hopes.

She requested him to accompany her to M. Raguideau, a lawyer in whom she had long been accustomed to confide. They went, and Bonaparte waited in an anteroom while she talked with Raguideau in his office. She neglected to close the door, and it happened that Bonaparte was able to overhear the conversation.

"If you are really going to marry this adventurer," said Raguideau, "it will be the worse for you."

"Oh, why?" asked Josephine.

"Why? A paltry general, without either name or prospects. Will he ever become a Dumouriez or a Pichegru? Better marry a good rich army contractor. The profession of arms is worthless now. You will repent your folly all your ife. Whoever heard of a sensible woman throwing herself away on a man whose fortune consists in his sword and his great coat?"

Bonaparte was half suffocated with rage and impatience in listening to this. He was on the point of dashing into the room, but refrained. Josephine came out ruffled and annoyed, but it is remarkable that neither of them said a word about the conversation right up to the time when Napoleon was crowned emperor by the pope, in Paris.

On the morning of that day he sent for Raguideau. The honest lawyer was lost in amazement. He was ushered into an apartment of the Tuileries and found himself in the presence of Napoleon and Josephine.

"Aha!" said the emperor. "Do you remember a day when I accompanied to your house Mme. de Beauharnais, now empress of the French? Do you remember your panegyric of which I was the object?"

A deluge of such questions stupefied Raguideau, and Josephine was bewildered.

The poor fellow could hardly gasp out a word. When he found speech it was "How could I tell? How could I guess? I thought only of her and her fatherless children. I wanted to see them restored to prosperity and honor." With that he burst into tears.

"I believe you," said the emperor. Then he paused and added, "The future is beyond the grasp of any living man. Well, look here. I have a punishment for you. I condemn you to go this day to Notre Dame and witness the coronation. Not in a corner, not behind a pillar, which will prevent my knowing your obedience, but in the best seat that I can command for you."

From "French Episodes," by Julia Pardoe.

We asked a man the other day, "Canute Tell Wat Tyler Will Rufus?" but he didn't seem to be aware that we were asking for a hat shop. So there you are! Don't we coruscate? Don't we scintillate?—London Scraps.

Then He Went.

"Miss Ethel," said Chollie Staylate, "if I should tell you I was going away tomorrow would you feel sorry?"

"Tomorrow," she answered, glancing at the clock, "Yes, I should feel sorry. I thought you might go away tonight."—Boston Transcript.

LEAL WILL START OFF SEASON WITH STATEN IS.

The Leal baseball team will open its season tomorrow afternoon on Crescent Oval when it will lineup against the Staten Island Academy nine. The local players have had a week of hard practice and are ready for their opponents. "Southpaw" Voorhees will do the mound work for the Leal nine and he will be received by Schneider. Fred Dickerson will be absent from the lineup and his place will be taken by Wilson or Miller.

Others in the Leal lineup will be Dale, first base; Lyon, second base; Stewart, shortstop; Wilson, third base; Garrigues, Harrington and Parmly in the outfield. The last named is a new player and according to Coach Wardlaw, is a "find." He will play left field.

STAHL A "S. O." WONDER.

The New Brunswick High School nine is booked to appear on Hyde Oval tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. This will be the third contest of the season for North Plainfield High School and a good game is looked for. Ernest Stahl will probably be used in this game as no other twirler is at present available. He has already pitched two good games, fanning a total of eighteen batters and allowing only sixteen hits. Dawe will again be at second as Conroy is on the sick list.

"RUBE" SETS A RECORD.

Rube Marquard covered himself with glory at the Polo Grounds in Manhattan yesterday afternoon, when he pitched a no-hit game against the Robins, the Giants winning, 2 to 0. Only three Brooklyn players reached first base, two on passes and the other on a fumble by Fletcher.

GUN CLUB SHOOT.

The Climax Gun Club will conduct its weekly shoot on its range tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

AUSPICIOUS TESTIMONIAL TO LOCAL TEAM OF FEMININE BASKETBALL INVINCIBLES

The fact that basketball players are unusually clever orators was demonstrated at the cabaret dinner, given last night in Columbus Club Auditorium. The event was in the form of a testimonial to the "Plainfield Five," a girls' basketball team, which has played its weekly games on the West Front street court. Beside the former, the Columbus Club Five, the Clover Five and a number of invited friends participated in the program. During the evening solos were rendered by Patrick Powers and the Clover Club Quartet. Each number referred in some way to the players of the past season.

A. A. Cannon was toastmaster, and he introduced the following members of the various teams who made addresses: Captain, Columbus Five, George Linke; captain, Clover Five, William Sullivan; Jack Caulfield, J. Sullivan, P. Powers, J. Kyle, J. Casey, J. McCarthy, J. Wilson, J. Coffey, W. Coyle, D. McAfee, T. Beabout, B. Brady, T. Harding, J. Traynor, Al Squires, J. Duffy, J. Greene, H. Pasch, F. Burke, "Doc" Greenwood, R. McCormick, B. Murray, E. Tayor, D. Doyle, O. Linke, J. McCarthy, T. Meeney, L. Harding, J. Lynch, F. Hart, F. Frazer, C. Regan, J. Kyle; captain, Plainfield Five, Miss Helen Bryniarski; Miss Helen Hummel, Miss Ida Hummel, Miss Clara Smith, Miss Mildred McAuliffe, and Miss Ellen Doughty.

The feature of the evening was the presentation of silver cups to the members of the Plainfield Five basketball team in appreciation for their work during the past season. Joseph E. O'Keefe presented the trophies with an appropriate speech. Miss Bryniarski, on behalf of the Plainfield Five, thanked the members of the Knights of Columbus for the privilege of using the hall, and expressed the sentiments of each member of the team in their wish to come back again in the fall with weekly exhibitions of the indoor sport. Miss Theresa McCullough, captain, manager and owner of the T. A. M.'s, also received a cup for her help during the year in furnishing quintets when the Plainfield Five manager was notified at the last minute of the inability of out-of-town teams to appear. Miss McCullough gave an instructive talk on "First Aid to the Injured."

Mr. Tobin conveyed the feeling of good fellowship that is a dominant factor in the life of the Knights of Columbus, and urged the furthering of the fine sportsmanship that existed between the various teams. John Kyle, manager of the Columbus Five and the Plainfield Five, gave a short resume of the year, telling of the trials and successes of the boys' team, and particularly thanked the feminine supporters for their weekly games.

The "Vanderbilt Cup Race," which took place after the dinner, provoked screams of laughter, the Ford car winning the race, far ahead of the other makes. The course measured 200 miles, and the race was four times around the course. The cars entered were Ford, 12-cylinder racing car, driven by L. Harding; Saxon, 250-horsepower, driven by George Linke; Buick, five-wheel special, driven by Dan MacAfee, and Cadillac, 8-cylinder, 180-horsepower, driven by J. McCarthy. All bets were laid before the cars started, and the Red Cross aides were in attendance for the injured. The dance for the $10,000 purse and gold tango cups was unusually well executed by each competitor. Valdez and Miss Binnar, represented by George Linke and Joe Greene, won the silver cup. Others taking part in the dancing contest were: Kernon Vassel and Eva Gangway, represented by Joe Sullivan and John Duffy, and Clifford Jaccord and Dora Jarr, represented by William Sullivan and J. McCarthy.

Dancing was enjoyed until an early hour this morning. "Al" Squiers furnished music for the occasion.

WILL BE OPPONENTS IN TWO KINDS OF SHOOTING

With money stakes as incentives to keen competition, Thomas Brantingham and Thomas Howard, two local sportsmen, will indulge in a quoit and trapshooting tournament in this city tomorrow. One hundred targets will be the issue in the shooting engagement, with $50 a side at stake.

In the quoit tourney the players will compete for the first fifty points and a $10 award. Considerable interest has been awakened over the matches, and a number of local admirers will witness the matches.

WRITER FORETOLD TITANIC DISASTER

Morgan Robertson Vividly Described Wreck of the Titan.

MADE A DEEP IMPRESSION.

Many Anecdotes of Famous Author of Sea Stories—Began and Finished In One Night His First Effort, "The Destruction of the Unfit," Writing on a Washtub Until Dawn.

Morgan Robertson, one of the foremost writers of sea stories, who died suddenly in his hotel room in Atlantic City, proved that he was a prophet as well as a teller of tales. In 1898 he wrote "Futility," in which he vividly described the wreck of the Titan, the largest and finest steamer ever constructed, the wreck being caused by an iceberg in the vicinity of the Titanic catastrophe. When the Titanic went down, just fifteen years after the book had been written, the similarity of names in the imaginary book and the locality where the ship hit the iceberg made a profound impression. Mr. Robertson followed the sea for many years before he took up literature.

Illustrating the impossibility of one man knowing all there is to know, Robertson told this story:

"I used to sail with a skipper who was a good seaman, but he was what you might call all at sea when he was on land. He was driving one day along a country road in England when he came to a signpost. An index finger pointed in the direction from which the skipper had come, and the inscription on it read, 'Selkirk, 12 miles.'

"Now, Selkirk was the town for which the skipper was bound. He did not want to turn around, so he climbed the post, tore the sign loose and nailed it to a post on the other side of the road, so the hand pointed in the direction he was going. Then he climbed back into the buggy and drove on."

"I admire a liar," Robertson used to say, "even when his prevarications strain my credulity. A friend of mine, who objects to efforts to pry into his personal affairs, recently limped into my workshop.

"'What's the matter with your foot?' I asked, more to be polite than because I cared what was the trouble.

"Then he gained my everlasting admiration by a display of nerve and mendacity I never saw equaled. 'An eel stepped on it,' he said."

Gets Clippings on "Ghosts."

Robertson used to delight in telling this story:

"Sometime ago I gave an order to a concern which furnished newspaper clippings, telling the manager that I wanted ghost stories. I undertook to explain that what I wanted was fiction that dealt with spirits and spooks, and the clipping man said he understood and would fix me all right.

"In a few days I began receiving clippings about ghosts. One of the slips was taken from a country paper in Pennsylvania and it said that a rival sheet had 'given up the ghost.' Another clipping, taken from a Louisville paper, was a pert paragraph from some other paper regarding Bryan and the Democracy, over which was the caption, 'Hamlet Without the Ghost.'

"Another clipping referred to the production of Ibsen's 'Ghost' in London, while the fourth was an editorial paragraph from a North Carolina paper in which a political convention was referred to as a 'ghost dance.' I never realized before that there were so many kinds of ghosts."

In 1896 while he was in New York a friend handed Robertson one of Rudyard Kipling's sea stories and told him to read it. He did and that night he began and finished his first short story, writing on a washtub until dawn. He called it "The Destruction of the Unfit." After a long delay it was accepted by a magazine which paid $25 for it. During the year that followed Mr. Robertson wrote and sold about twenty short stories of the sea. Since then not a year and perhaps not a month passed in which one or more of his sea pieces did not appear.

SAW WAR MAIMED TRADED.

Mrs. Maugan Says Limbs of Prisoners Were Matched.

Mrs. May E. Maugan, fashion buyer, arrived on the Arabic after having spent six weeks in Paris and paid a high tribute to the women of the French capital. She saw the first exchange of prisoners that took place at Boulogne.

"The women of Paris are wonderful," she said. "They have taken hold of the city and seem to be running it. You find them everywhere, on the tram cars, managing the shops, delivering the mail and filling thousands of positions hitherto occupied by the men who are now at the front. They are sad, though, and I have seen many of them crying. Yet they are brave and steadfast and make no protest against the war.

"I saw the first exchange of prisoners at Boulogne. The English and French were all crippled. Some had lost arms, others legs and one or two both legs. The exchange was based on the loss of limbs. For example, a German with an arm gone would be exchanged for an Englishman or Frenchman in the same condition."

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

FIRST MOTORCYCLE RUN NEXT SUNDAY

Act on Annual Bike Races at the Semi-monthly Meeting.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Plainfield Motorcycle Club was held last night, and Herman Alberts, president of the club, presided. The subject of holding bicycle and motorcycle races this year, was mentioned, but nothing was decided upon. If held on Decoration Day they will only be local events, as the twenty-five-mile handicap road race had been dropped, as was announced recently in these columns.

Routine business was transacted, and after the business meeting a "feed" was enjoyed by all present. The first motorcycle run of the season will be held next Sunday to Flemington. It was to have been held last week, but weather caused a postponement.

ANOTHER JOHNSON K. O.

Havana, April 16.—Jack Johnson, former champion, will not receive a penny benefit from his moving picture rights for the island of Cuba. A rival motion picture concern that had an operator hidden in the grand stand obtained excellent pictures of the fight and also exclusive rights to exhibit them in Cuba. Johnson attempted to get out a restraining order, preventing them from exhibiting the pictures in Cuba, but failed.

MORAN AND FREDERICKSON TO PLAY WITH ST. JOSEPH'S

Otto Frederickson and Earl Moran will appear in the St. Joseph line-up tomorrow, when they play the St. Mary's T. A. B. team on the Avon Park grounds, opposite the Golf Club, on Woodland avenue. Moran formerly held down first base for Manager Dorflinger's "Pets," while Frederickson has pitched for some of the fastest semipro teams in this section.

Dan Denny will start the game for the St. Joseph's nine, while John Deny will hurl for St. Mary's.

Library Notes.

Furnished by the Directors of Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room.

After business—what? Life is not all business. Whether we succeed in business and become wealthy, with money to buy books and time to read them, or whether we have always a hard struggle to make ends meet and little leisure for the pleasures of life, we will want to read after business hours. Did you ever meet anyone who talked and lived and ate and slept "business?" Wasn't he rather tiresome? Didn't you wonder why he did not get tired of himself? Perhaps he did, but had never been taught to read. In that case he had to keep on thinking his own thoughts over and over again without any change or new ideas or suggestions from other wiser and better minds. Everyone who works and becomes tired out must have thought at times how grateful he is to authors who have taken his mind away from business and bread and butter and rent, and dollars and cents, and given him something better to think about, even though he wakes up the next morning and has to think of the same old things over again.

After thinking and handling small things all day, it is restful to drop into a big outdoor country such as we find in Owen Wister's "Virginian," or in the poems of Bret Harte. If we are, under our business manners, rather romantic, it is romance that claims us. It may be the old romances which cluster about King Arthur, or it may be the latest romance from the newest popular writer, or it may be that detective stories are our secret delight, and that Conan Doyle has greater power to take our minds away from business than any other author.

But the tired business man about whom we read is not always rested by reading books of this character. Perhaps it rests his mind more to study a big problem such as Shakespeare's "Hamlet" or to read some of the really fascinating histories of times gone by. One thing is certain, however, after business hours we read what we like. That is the time when our actual likes and dislikes control us and we read to enjoy.

Some new books:

"A Wanderer in Venice," by E. V. Lucas. The best way to test a man's character is to travel with him, and such a guide, counsellor and friend as Mr. Lucas has proved himself in his wanderings in Florence, London and Holland, and now in Venice, is all too rare. History and art and gossip are here in proper proportions. Churches and galleries, places and shops are treated intelligently and without humbug or prejudice, and the reader is not forced unwillingly to follow the author's particular hobby and look at all sorts of things in which he is not interested.

"Moonglade," by Mrs. P. F. Owen. Here is a story of the daughter of a lord of a castle perched on the cliffs of Brittany, and there are many graphic descriptions of the rock-bound, forbidding coast. There are also scenes in Petrograd. The heroine is very attractive, but there are other characters in the book who are much less so and who may wear on the reader.

"A Lover's Tale," by Maurice Hewlett. A tale of Iceland, told somewhat in the style of the author's "Richard, Yea and Nay." It is a love story and moves swiftly and strongly like the viking ships of its own times. There is many a splendid picture of the older times and of the far land where the scene is laid, and the customs that obtained there in those days. But those who like direct, modern, easily read stories of the Chambers type will probably not care very much for it.

Copies of all bills introduced in the Legislature are kept on file in the Library, and may be consulted by those who are interested.

All of the books of F. Hopkinson Smith, who has just died, have been placed on one shelf in a corner of the reading room, where they are easily accessible, and where one may pick out at a glance such works of this pleasing author as he has not yet read.

The shelves in the reading room formerly devoted to volumes relating to the war have now been given over to books on gardening and nature study. It is very convenient to have these grouped in one place, as one does not always know exactly which book he prefers to take out on his card until he has glanced over a number of them.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Duel.

ALONE, I soon became a prey to certain disquieting thoughts. Summed up they resolved themselves into a condition of certainty which admitted of but one aspect—the charming countess was in love with Amtiedale. And the shocking part of it all was that she was in love with him prior to her separation from Tarnowsy! I felt a cold perspiration start out all over my body as this condition forced itself upon me. He was the man. He had been the man from the beginning. My heart was like lead for the rest of the day, and very curiously for a leaden thing it was subject to pain.

Just before dinner Britton, after inspecting me out of the corner of his eye for some time, advised me to try a little brandy.

"You look seedy, sir," he said, with concern in his voice. "A cold setting in perhaps, sir."

I tried the brandy, but not because I thought I was taking a cold. Somehow it warmed me up. There is virtue in good spirits.

The countess was abroad very early the next morning. I discovered her in the courtyard, giving directions to Max and Rudolph, who were doing some spading in the garden. She looked very bright and fresh and enticing in the light of an early moon, and I was not only pleased, but astonished, having been led to believe all my life that a woman, no matter how pretty she may be, appears at her worst when the day is young.

I joined her at once. She gave me a gay, accusing smile.

"What have you been saying to mother?" she demanded as she shook hands with me. "I thought you were to be trusted."

I flushed uncomfortably. "I'm sorry, countess. I—I didn't know it was a secret."

She looked at me somewhat quizzically for a moment; then she laughed softly. "It is a secret."

"I hope I haven't got you into bad odor with you?"

"Oh, dear me, no! I'm not in the least worried over what mother may think. I shall do as I please, so there's the end of it."

I swallowed something that seemed to be sticking in my throat. "Then it is true that you are going to marry?"

"Quite," she said succinctly.

I was silent for a moment. "Well, I'm—I'm glad to know it in time," I said rather morosely than was necessary.

She smiled too merrily I thought. "You must not tell any one else about it, however."

"I can promise that," I said, a sullen rage in my soul. "Devils could not drag it out of me. Rest easy."

It occurred to me afterward that she laughed rather jerkily, you might say uneasily. At any rate, she turned away and began speaking to Max.

"Have you had your breakfast?" I asked stupidly.

"No."

"Neither have I. Will you join me?"

"Isn't it getting to be a habit?"

"Breakfast or you?"

"Breakfast and me."

"I confess, my dear countess, that I like you for breakfast," I said gallantly.

"That is a real tribute," she said demurely and took her place beside me. Together we crossed the courtyard.

On the steps Colingraft Titus was standing. I uttered an audible groan and winced as if in dire pain.

"What is it?" she cried quickly.

"Rheumatism," I announced, carefully raising my right arm and affecting an expression of torture. I am not a physical coward, kind reader. The fact that young Mr. Titus carried in his hands a set of formidable looking boxing gloves did not frighten me. Heaven knows, if it would give him any pleasure to slam me about with a pair of gloves I am not without manliness and pluck enough to endure physical pain and mental humiliation. It was diplomacy, cunning, astuteness—whatever you may choose to call it—that stood between me and a friendly encounter with him. Two minutes' time would serve to convince him that he was my master, and then where would I be? Where would be the prestige I had gained? Where my record as a conqueror? "I must have caught cold in my arms and shoulders," I went on, making worse faces than before as I moved the afflicted parts experimentally.

"There," she exclaimed ruefully; "I knew you would catch cold! Men always do. I'm so sorry."

"It's nothing," I made haste to explain—"that is, nothing serious. I'll get rid of it in no time at all," I calculated for a minute. "A week or ten days at the most. Good morning, Colingraft."

"Morning. Hello, sis. Well?" He dangled the gloves before my eyes.

My disappointment was quite pathetic. "Tell him," I said to the countess.

"He's all crippled up with rheumatism, Colly," she said. "Put those ugly things away. We're going in to breakfast."

He tossed the gloves into a corner of the vestibule. I felt a little ashamed of my subterfuge in the face of his earnest expression of concern.

"Tell you what I'll do," he said warmly. "I know how to rub a fellow's muscles"—

"Oh, I have a treasure in Britton!" said I hastily. "Thanks, old man. He will work it out of me. Sorry we can't have a go this morning."

The worst of it all was that he insisted, as a matter of personal education, on coming to my room after breakfast to watch the expert maneuvers of Britton in kneading the stiffness out of my muscles. He was looking for new ideas, he explained. I first consulted Britton and then resignedly consented to the demonstration.

To my surprise, Britton was something of an expert. I confess that he almost killed me with those strong, iron-like hands of his. If I was not sore when he began with me I certainly was when he finished. Colingraft was most enthusiastic. He said he'd never seen any one manipulate the muscles so scientifically as Britton and ventured the opinion that he would not have to repeat the operation often. To myself I said that he wouldn't have to repeat it at all.

We began laying our plans for the 14th. Communications arrived from Italy addressed to me, but intended for either the countess or the rather remote Mr. Bangs, who seemed better qualified to efface himself than any human being I've ever seen. These letters informed us that a yacht, one of three now cruising in the Mediterranean, would call at an appointed port on such and such a day to take her out to sea. Everything was being arranged on the outside for her escape from the continent, and precision seemed to be the watchword.

Of course I couldn't do a stroke of work on my novel. How could I be expected to devote myself to fiction when fact was staring me in the face so engagingly? We led an idle, dolce far niente life in these days, with an underlying touch of anxiety and excitement that increased as the day for her departure drew near. I confess to a sickening sense of depression that could not be shaken off.

Half of my time was spent in playing with Rosemary. She became dearer to me with each succeeding day. I knew I should miss her tremendously. I should even miss Jinko, who didn't like me, but who no longer growled at me. The castle would be a very gloomy, dreary place after they were out of it. I found myself wondering how long I would be able to endure the loneliness. Secretly I cherished the idea of selling the place if I could find a lunatic in the market. I didn't suppose there was anybody in the whole world crazy enough to buy it.

An unexpected diversion came one day when, without warning and figuratively out of a clear sky, the Hazzards and the Billy Smiths swooped down upon me. They had come up the river in the power boat for a final September run, and planned to stop overnight with me.

They were the last people in the world whom I could turn away from my door. There might have been a chance to put them up for the night and still avoid disclosures had not circumstance ordered that the countess and I should be working in the garden at the very moment that brought them pounding at the postern gates. Old Conrad opened the gate in complete ignorance of our presence in the garden. (We happened to be in a somewhat obscure nook and seated upon a stone bench, so he must be held blameless.) The quartet brushed past the old man, and I, hearing their chatter, foolishly exposed myself.

I shall not attempt to describe the scene that followed their discovery of the Countess Tarnowsy. Be it said, however, to the credit of Elsie and Betty Billy the startled refugee was fairly smothered in kisses and tears and almost deafened by the shrill, delighted exclamations that fell from their eager lips. I doubt if there ever was such a sensation before.

We Happened to Be In an Obscure Nook Seated Upon a Stone Bench.

* * * * * * *

They brought rather interesting news concerning the count. It appears that he and the baron had quarreled, and at the time of my friends' departure from Vienna it was pretty generally understood that there would be a duel.

"I never liked the baron," I said, with a grim smile that could not have been misinterpreted, "but I hope to heavens he isn't killed."

Mrs. Titus sighed. "Tarnowsy is regarded as a wonderful marksman."

"Worse luck!" growled Colingraft, gloomily twiddling his thumbs.

"What kind of a shot is the baron?" asked Jasper junior hopefully.

No one was able to enlighten him, but Billy Smith shook his head dolefully.

"Maris Tarnowsy is a dead shot. He'll pot the baron sure."

"Hang it all," said I, and then lapsed into a horrified silence.

When the Hazzards and Smiths departed the next morning they were in full possession of all of our plans, hopes and secrets, but they were bound by promises that would have haunted them throughout all eternity if they allowed them to be violated. I do not recall having seen two more intensely excited, radiant women in my life than Elsie and Betty Billy. They were in an ecstatic state of mind. Their husbands, but little less excited, offered to help us in every way possible, and to prove their earnest, turned the prow of the motorboat down stream, abandoning the trip up the river in order to be in Vienna in case I should need them for any purpose whatsoever.

"You may rest easy so far as I am concerned, Mrs. Titus," said the young diplomat. "As a representative of the United States government I can't become publicly involved in this international muddle. I've just got to keep my lips sealed. If it were discovered that I knew of all this, my head would be under the snickersnee in no time at all. Swish! Officially suicided!"

At 10 o'clock the next morning I was called to the telephone. Smith had startling news to impart. Count Tarnowsy and Baron Umovitch had engaged in a duel with pistols at sunrise and the latter had gone down with a bullet through his lungs! He died an hour later. Tarnowsy, according to the rumors flying about official Vienna, was already on his way to Berlin, where he would probably remain in seclusion until the affair blew over or imperial forgiveness was extended to him.

There was cause for satisfaction among us, even though the baron had fallen instead of the count. The sensational affair would serve to keep Tarnowsy under cover for some weeks at least and minimize the dangers attending the countess' flight from the castle. Still, I could not help feeling disappointed over the outcome of the meeting. Why couldn't Count Tarnowsy have been the one to fall?

The countess, very pale and distrait, gave utterance to her feelings in a most remarkable speech. She said: "This is one of the few fine things that Maris has ever done. I am glad that he killed that man. He should have done so long ago, the beast! He was—ugh!—the most despicable creature I've ever known."

She said no more than this, but one could readily grasp all that she left unuttered.

Colingraft rather sententiously remarked to little Rosemary, who could not have comprehended the words of course, "Well, little Rosebud, your papa may be a spendthrift, but he never wastes bullets."

Which was entirely uncalled for, I contend. I was struck by the swift look of dread that leaped into Aline's eyes and her pallor.

On top of all this came the astonishing news by cipher dispatch from old Jasper Titus' principal adviser in London that his offer of $1,000,000 had been declined by Tarnowsy two days before, the count having replied through his lawyers that nothing short of two millions would induce him to relinquish all claims to his child.

I had been ignorant of this move in the case and expressed my surprise.

"I asked father to do it, Mr. Smart," said the countess dejectedly. "It seemed the easiest way out of our difficulties—and the cheapest. He will never give in to this new demand though. We must make the best of it."

"But why did you suggest such a thing to him?" I demanded with heat.

She looked hurt. "Because you seemed to think it was the right and honorable thing to do," she said patiently. "I do not forget what you said to me days and days ago even though it may have slipped your mind. You said that a bargain is a bargain and—well, I had Mr. Bangs write father just what you thought about it."

There was a suspicion of tears in her voice as she turned away and left me without another word. She was quite out of sight around the bend in the staircase and her little boots were clattering swiftly upward before I fully grasped the significance of her explanation—or, I might better say, her reproach. It slowly dawned upon me that I had said a great many things to her that it would pay me to remember before questioning her motives in any particular.

As the day for her departure drew nearer—it was now but forty-eight hours away—her manner seemed to undergo a complete change. She became moody, nervous, depressed. Of course all this was attributable to the dread of discovery and capture when she was once outside the great walls of Schloss Rothhoefen. I could understand her feelings and rather lamely attempted to bolster up her courage by making light of the supposed perils.

She looked at me with a certain pathetic somberness in her eyes that caused my heart to ache. All of her joyous raillery was gone, all of her gentle arrogance. Her sole interest in life in these last days seemed to be of a sacrificial nature. She was sweet and gentle with every one—with me in particular, I may say—and there was something positively humble in her attitude of self abnegation. Where she had once been wilful and ironic she was now gentle and considerate. Nor was I the only one to note these subtle changes in her. I doubt, however, if the others were less puzzled than I. In fact, Mrs. Titus was palpably perplexed, and there were times when I caught her eying me with distinct disapproval, as if she were seeking in me the cause of her daughter's weaknesses, as much as to say, "What other nonsense have you been putting into the poor child's head, you wretch?"

I went up to have a parting romp with Rosemary on the last night of her stay with me. The countess paid but little attention to us. She sat over in the window and stared out into the dusky shadows of the falling night. My heart was sore. I was miserable. The last romp!

Blake finally snatched Rosemary off to bed. It was then that the countess aroused herself and came over to me with a sad little smile on her lips.

"Good night," she said rather wistfully, holding out her hand to me.

I deliberately glanced at my watch. "It's only ten minutes past 8," I said reproachfully.

"I know," she said quietly. "Good night."

Runaway June

"You poor dear!" cried Tommy in a sympathetic voice and sat down on the edge of the narrow bed. "How sorry I am to see you here!"

"There was no place else to go," June said.

"Oh, yes, there was!" said Tommy Thomas, laughing gayly. "There is no need for you to be lying here in poverty when you could be living in luxury." Stooping down, she whispered something in June's ear.

Startled, the pale girl half rose, but Tommy Thomas had fled from the room. She returned in a moment, and with her was the white mustached Orin Cunningham.

"You poor dear!" cried Tommy Thomas.

June Warner rose to her elbow.

"Go!" she said and pointed to the door.

"You don't mean it," laughed Cunningham.

With a supreme effort June Warner rose to her feet and looked him straight in the eyes.

Bill Wolf came out of the saloon across the street wiping his lips. There was a placid expression on his round face, and he had a short, thick stub of a cigar in the corner of his mouth.

A handsome collie dashed up to the well known and justly famous private detective, barked and dashed away, barked and dashed away again.

"All right, sport," said the comfortable Bill Wolf and followed the dog across the street.

Leaping and jumping and stopping at every few steps to look back, Bouncer led the way into the abandoned bank and, springing against the heavy iron door, yelped his loudest at every leap.

"All right, sport," said Bill Wolf jovially and lifted from its place the heavy bar.

Instantly there dashed out Ned Warner, his jaws set and his fists clinched, and after him came June's father and mother and Bobbie and Iris Blethering. Ned rushed across the room and sprang for the stairs as Bill Wolf grappled savagely with the Italian chauffeur. Around the corner came the high cheek boned maid, Marie, and Officer Dowd, closely pursued by fat old black Aunt Debby, while down the street rolled an electric coupe, with the sharp featured Honoria Blye at the lever.

In the narrow bedroom upstairs June Warner stood, pale and erect, looking straight into the eyes of Orin Cunningham. For a moment he resisted her clear, steady gaze, and then he dropped his eyes, abashed. Suddenly he hauled, and, pulling from his pocket a dazzling string of pearls, he took a step nearer and flaunted them before June's eyes.

"Orin Cunningham!" A stern, cold voice.

The door behind June had clicked. She turned. Gilbert Blye!

"Go!" he ordered.

Gilbert Blye's black eyes softened as he turned, and they glowed down at June.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

BLACK AND WHITE.

Feathers, wings, quills or ribbon pleatings are the favorites for hat trimmings, though flowers are seen on some smart hats. The close-fitting hat grows smaller as the skirts grow wider—a complete reversal from the silhouette of last year. The hat above is of black Milan straw completely girdled by white ostrich feathers.

MILITARY STYLES FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

Struggle as we may, we must accept the military modes of the day. And we should not consider it merely a matter of duty, for they are most attractive. Particularly is this true in the case of young girls, for militarism and youth go hand in hand.

Very military in style is the little dress shown above, for the trimming sections which form the pockets are copied directly from the military dispatch case, the broad belt has been filched from Tommy Atkins and the cuffs have been stolen from him, too. For a simple shirtwaist dress you can omit these embellishments and wear the blouse buttoned to the throat or thrown back. Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8899 cuts in sizes 16, 17 and 18 years, size 18 requiring 5 yards 36-inch material, with ⅝ yard 36-inch contrasting goods for facing and cuffs.

Patterns can be secured at the store of A. E. Force & Co.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"I've brought you your warm milk, little daughter," said Father Morton, coming up to Nell, who was lying in the hammock under a fine old apple tree. "This will build you up and bring the roses into your cheeks the soonest of anything."

Nell sat up and took the glass from the kindly old man.

"Did you get a letter from Dick today?" he asked as he stroked her hair.

"Yes. He's coming Saturday afternoon to stay over Sunday. It seems a year since I saw him," she confided in a low voice.

"A week is a long time when one has nothing to do but think," mused the old man. "You can go all over the place by next week. There are the lambs, and the ducks on the duck pond; that is, if there is any pond left," he added ruefully. "If this drought continues the poor ducks will do well to get a drink. It hasn't been so dry for twenty years. We had just such a summer as this the year Dick was five years old. That was the year the little girl died. Mother has never been the same since. She would have been about your age. She was three years old when she went away from us—blue eyes and golden hair," mused the old man with a sad, reminiscent look in his eyes. "Now you have come to take her place in my life," and the old man smiled down into Nell's face.

"I'm so glad." Nell rose and put her arms around his neck.

"Supper's ready; there comes mother to call us," and they walked to the house over the wiry grass, scorched brown in the July heat.

"When you go to town for Richard tomorrow you had better get some of those nonsensical breakfast foods for Nell," said Mrs. Morton at the supper table.

"Oh, don't buy anything especially for me, mother. With such lovely fresh eggs and milk and fruit I don't need anything else; besides, this will be a good time to learn to like graham mush."

"It'll be time enough to do that when you are well," said the old lady leniently. "Now we must plump up your cheeks if we do have to use potent breakfast foods to do it."

The keen old eyes looked indulgently at Nell and she knew by this mark of special favor that the old lady really cared for her.

"I'm sorry the drought has taken nearly all our fruit. There are no raspberries nor blackberries this year. The green apples are all we have left."

"We are both very fond of apples. How Dick will enjoy them!" Nell's eyes shone.

Saturday she put on her daintiest white kimona and curled her hair, then sat watching eagerly for the coming of the old horse down the dusty white turnpike. When at last he was seen jogging down the road only one person was on the seat. What could it mean?

Slowly the old man drove up the lane. Dick had not come.

"Here's a letter," he said, handing it to Nell. "Probably that will explain things."

Nell took it and hurried to her room to read it.

Household Hints

WORTH KNOWING

To Clean White Window Shades—Wring cloth out warm water (not hot). Have dish of baking soda. Dip cloth in soda, wipe off shade, then take a dry cloth to dry shade. You will find the shades look like new. At first they will look dark, but will dry out as white as when new.

For cleaning white clothes of any kind, especially white wool, use the common block magnesia. Lay garment on table and rub magnesia into it thoroughly; roll up and lay away a few days. Then shake out and brush with clean brush. It will look like new and save many a dry cleaner's bill.

Now that roller skating days have come again, mothers, try this suggestion and save the children's stockings as well as bruised knees. Cut out leg part of worn-out stockings (a pair of heavy ribbed winter stockings makes excellent protectors) and pull over knees. These will cling to the stockings underneath and the extra kneecaps can hardly be noticed.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Hot Cross Buns—Sift together one quart pastry flour, two tablespoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt. Rub into flour piece of butter size of egg. Mix together one cup each of milk, water and sugar; stir in flour mixture, add two well-beaten eggs, mix soft; cut into small biscuit, make cross on top of each, bake in very hot oven. Raisins, currants or lemon peel may be added. Sift powdered sugar on top and serve.

Easter Eggs Dessert—Make a blanc mange of milk and cornstarch, sweeten to taste, add any flavor desired. Have ready one dozen egg shells which have been carefully opened at the small end and contents removed. Fill these with blanc mange which has been previously divided into six parts and each part mixed with different color paste (vegetable colorings, chocolate, etc., can be used). When filled stand each shell on ice until perfectly cold, then remove shells carefully. Send to the table in glass dishes. Serve with whipped cream. These Easter eggs are oftentimes a great joy to the little ones.

Orange Pudding—Soak 1½ cups bread crumbs in cup of cold water for twenty minutes; add cup sugar, one cup orange juice, one tablespoon lemon juice, two eggs beaten slightly, one tablespoon melted butter and pinch of salt. Bake in slow oven until firm. Serve with milk sweetened with maple sugar or molasses.

Fruit Salad—Four slices canned pineapple, two bananas, two dozen white grapes, two dozen English walnuts, six marshmallows, lettuce leaves, salad dressing. Cut each slice of pineapple into eight pieces, slice bananas, halve and seed grapes, crack nuts and cut up, cut marshmallows into quarters. Mix fruit and nuts with dressing and arrange on lettuce leaves on small plates; put cut marshmallows on top.

Prune Ambrosia—Half ten-cent box plain gelatin soaked in one-fourth pint water, half pound prunes, one-eighth pound citron cut into bits, half cup chopped raisins, one-fourth cup currants, half cup broken English walnut meats, juice and rind of one lemon, half teaspoon powdered cinnamon, pinch of salt. Cook prunes until soft, remove pits and cut prunes into pieces. Crack three or four pits, remove kernels, chop, and add to walnuts. Place fruits and nuts in soaked gelatin. Pour over this 1½ pints boiling water, using as part the water in which prunes were cooked. Sweeten with one cup sugar, stir well and put in cold place to solidify. Mold in the form of a loaf, from which pieces may be cut easily for serving. It may be served either plain or with whipped cream, topped with maraschino cherry.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Animal School.

I'm going to tell you about Georgie Goat
And the dime's worth of gum-drops he bought.
He took them to school for an excellent joke;
But it didn't turn out as he thought.

Said he to his playmates, "I'll give you all some
To take into school with you so
We can eat them all morning and have lots of fun,
And Professor Crab never will know."

Each animal popped a gum-drop in his mouth
Before he went into his seat,
But when they got in there Professor Crab said,
"I've decided to give you a treat.

"It's such lovely weather and I'm very sure
You'd like to get outdoors and play,
So I've decided to be generous
And give you a half holiday.

"But before I do that I'm going to ask
Each one to recite a short verse."
Now if he had tried he couldn't have asked
Those animals anything worse.

Said he, "Georgie Goat, you may stand and recite
The verse that I taught you last week."
But poor Georgie's jaws were stuck fast with gum drops,
And to save his life he couldn't speak.

"What's this," said the Crab, "I don't understand.
"Miranda Mouse, you may recite."
But though the Professor went clear round the class
All the animals' jaws were stuck tight.

Then quickly the reason was plain to the Crab.
Said he, "There'll be no holiday.
Instead, you will all stay an hour after school
And learn some new verses to say."

Although it was hard, they deserved it, I think,
For breaking Professor Crab's rule;
And, what's more, it cured them, for never since then
Have they eaten candy in school.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Since Charles Chaplin became associated with the Essaney Company he has been seen in a half dozen hilarious pictures, but it is probable that none of them can equal his latest release, "The Jitney Elopement," which will be presented at Proctor's Theatre this afternoon and tonight. "The Jitney Elopement" affords Mr. Chaplin scores of comical situations, and to watch him go through his antics would prevail gales of laughter in the most blaze audience ever collected. It is even funnier than "In the Park" and "His New Job," both of which produced hysterics when shown to audiences a few weeks ago. Lay aside all cares and see "The Jitney Elopement" if you want to get rid of the blues for the next six months. Another big feature at Proctor's today and tomorrow will be the presentation in pictures of eJss Willard, the newest world's heavyweight pugilistic champion, who wrested the title from Jack Johnson. The big fighter has posed in a love romance written especially for him entitled "The Heart Punch." The film has nothing to do with the fight pictures taken at Havana, but shows Willard in characteristic attitudes and displays his ability as a camera actor. "The Heart Punch" is free from any scenes that might jar on the sensibilities of the most refined, and can be equally enjoyed by young and old. What theatrical people describe as a "riot" was created at Proctor's yesterday by Al Lewis and company in their offering, "The New Leader." It was an act that was recently seen at the Winter Garden, New York, and is one of the best that has come to Plainfield in years. The audiences yesterday were kept in a continual roar of laughter, and at each performance Mr. Lewis and his supporting company had to respond to five curtain calls. Dorsch and Russell, novelty musicians, were another big hit on the new vaudeville bill yesterday. This team comes direct from Europe and offers an original musical act, with a magnificent scenic setting, showing the famous Shasta Mountain in California and numerous beautiful landscape effects. The vaudeville is completed by Boothby and Everdeen, character songs and pianologues; Burns and Ackor, comedy singing and talking, presenting the comedy skit entitled "Going to War," and Kitty Flynn, in songs and dances.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

For its special photo-production today and tomorrow the Plainfield Theater offers "Cinderella," in five parts. Mary Pickford, who is everybody's favorite, is seen as the little cinder-girl, who afterwards becomes the princess, and the story that is familiar to old and young grips the heart the same as it did when it was popular in the story books. Although "Cinderella" comes direct from New York, where it was presented at the leading theatres at Broadway prices, there was no advance in seats during its engagement here. Photoplays will be shown at the Plainfield Theatre all next week, and the offerings will be all up-to-the-minute Paramount releases. Monday and Tuesday the management will present the farce-comedy, "The Million," with Edward Abels in the leading role; Wednesday and Thursday the offering will be "The Italian," featuring the versatile comedian George Beban, who will be remembered by Plainfielders for his clever work in George Cohan's "The American Idea," and the vaudeville sketch, "The Sign of the Rose." The week will be rounded out on Friday and Saturday with the successful farce comedy, "Stop, Thief," featuring charming Mary Ryan and a brilliant cast. The Plainfield Theatre's "The Black Box" is presented every Tuesday in addition to the feature films. It is now in its fourth episode and has set the whole town to waiting, watching and guessing.

OUR TINY KINGLETS.

Aristotle It Was Who Named the Golden Crowned Bird.

If pride could add anything to the stature of a bird the golden crowned kinglet should have grown an inch or so during the last 2,000 and odd years, but it is the same diminutive creature that it was in the days of ancient Greece. The kinglet, no bigger than your thumb, has the high honor of having been named by Aristotle, and the name has clung to it through the long centuries since Alexander's tutor studied nature.

The golden crowned kinglet and his congener, the ruby crowned kinglet, are the smallest American birds, barring only the members of the humming tribe. Aristotle looked on the golden crowned kinglet and, taking out his writing material, set it down that he had that day seen a bird which was "hardly larger than a locust." The philosopher looked at the little circling crown of golden feathers which his newly found feathered friend wore and instantly he dubbed the bird "tyrannos."

In that age the word which Aristotle used had not taken on the "tyrannical" significance which afterward it held. It was significant only of kingship, and while royalty even then may have had much in common with tyranny the little bird escaped a stigma which no act of it then or since could have made deserved.

The golden crowned kinglet will never win fame as a songster, while his cousin, when its tininess is taken into consideration, is nothing short of a marvelous vocalist. The ruby crown's song is sweet, varied, continuous and of great carrying power. It is one of the marked songs of the woodland, and when one who has heard the song comes upon the singer the wonder grows that so small a body can contain such a store of music.—Chicago Post.

PLOWING THE FURROW.

A Lesson of Life From a Mother's Heart to Her Son.

In his book, "My Lady of the Chimney Corner," Alexander Irvine pays tribute to his Irish mother and relates this incident to show how she sought to gird him with resolution for the tasks of the world:

"Ye'll do somethin' for me?"

"Ay, anythin' in th' world."

"Shut yer eyes an' stan' close t' th' table."

I obeyed. She put into each hand a smooth stick with which James had smoothed the soles of shoes.

"Jist for th' now these are th' handles of a plow. Ke'p yer eyes shut tight. Ye've seen a man plowin' a field?"

"Ay."

"Think that ye see a long, long field. Ye're plowin' it. Th' other end is so far away ye can't see it. Ye see a wee bit of the furrow, jist a wee bit. Squeeze th' plow handles."

I squeezed.

She took the sticks away and gently pushed me on a stool and told me I might open my eyes.

"That's quare," I said.

"Listen, dear. Ye've put yer han' t' th' plow; ye must niver, niver take it away. All through life ye'll have them plow handles in yer han's, an' ye'll be goin' down th' furrow. Ye'll crack a stone here an' there, th' plow'll stick often, an' things'll be out of gear, but yer in th' furrow all th' time. Ye'll change horses, ye'll change clothes, ye'll change yourself, but ye'll always be in the furrow, plowin', plowin', plowin'. Ye'r God's plowman.

"A plowman who skims th' surface of th' sod strikes no stones, dear, but it's because he isn't plowin' deep."

How to Mend Kid Gloves.

The head of a glove department in an Ohio store tells as follows how to mend kid gloves: "To mend kid gloves very satisfactorily try this method: With small sharp scissors remove all ragged edges. Buttonhole firmly both edges to be mended with cotton thread (never use silk, as it cuts), using a very fine needle; then bring both these edges together and button hole. A glove mended in this way cannot pull out or rip and will stand the hardest kind of wear thereafter."—Woman's Home Companion.

What Fog Is.

Small particles of water have a tendency to fall slowly in still air, while a very light upward current will be enough to keep them from descending at all in the case of very small particles. It has been shown that the globules of water forming a fog or cloud are each composed of a film of water condensed upon a particle of dust, and the cores are solid instead of gaseous, as the old theory indicated.

Consistency of the Sex.

A bride who is thirty-one if a day will give her age to the marriage license clerk as twenty-six and then criticise the home paper with great severity for its shameless unreliability when it announces that the color scheme of the wedding was lavender instead of heliotrope.—Columbus (O.) Journal.

Her Little Slam.

"I see that a statistician estimates there are 150,000 idiots in the United States."

"Well?"

"I was just wondering who the women are who married the other 149,999."—Detroit Free Press.

I should say sincerity, a deep, great, genuine sincerity, is the first characteristic of all men in any way heroic.—Carlyle.

8,000 Pairs "Dorothy Dodd" Low Shoes For Women, at 2.65 Pair

Each Shoe Stamped With Its Regular Price, $3.75, $4.50 or $5

The manufacturers of "Dorothy Dodd" shoes have a selling agency in practically every large city in the United States. But, strangely enough, they have no one big outlet at the present time in New York City.

These 8,000 pairs of low shoes for women represent an accumulation after filling their agencies' orders throughout the country.

Duplicates of these shoes are sold in these smaller stores for $3.75 to $5, and each pair is stamped with the price.

Rather than go to the trouble of distributing this surplus stock at a lessened price among so many individual outlets (thus breaking their regular prices in those localities), the manufacturers find it more practical to dispose of the entire lot at one time through the largest single outlet available—Wanamaker's.

Pumps and Colonials in fifteen styles—patent and dull leathers, some with steel ornaments and buckles; one style has brocaded silk quarters; another has gray cloth quarter with patent leather vamp. One style in the collection is a tan buttoned high shoe. All sizes.

HOOKING A SHARK.

It's an Exciting Sport Even if One Doesn't See the Fish.

Fishing for sharks off the pier at Palm Beach is a Brobdingnagian sport. You fish with clotheslines and a hook the size of a split anchor. Half of some great fish is slipped on your hook for bait. You throw it off the pier and fasten the end of the line to the railing and then take out your detective story and read.

Sometimes you get a bite; sometimes you don't. At evening the colored gentleman in charge of the shark fishing on the pier goes around and takes in the lines. That in itself is on rare occasions an exciting sport.

Once a New York vacationist was standing on the pier enjoying the sunset after a day's fruitless angling when he heard a shout from the colored gentleman, who had discovered a shark on one of the lines that had been left out. The colored gentleman was having trouble in handling the beast, so the New Yorker went to his assistance. Together they pulled and hauled at the line in vain. Another man on the pier joined in, and then the three braced their feet against the rail and tugged for all they were worth. But in spite of all they could do the line slipped gradually through their fingers.

Finally all the slack was used up, and the rope, coming taut against the rail, snapped like a thread. The New Yorker has always wished he could have had just one look at that shark.—New York Post.

MARTEL AND POITIERS.

The Man and Battle That Saved Europe From the Saracen Yoke.

A traveler approaching the city of Poitiers, France, would hardly believe that it was around the site of that small city that the battle which saved all Europe from the Saracen yoke was fought. The man who commanded the French in that great battle was Charles, who afterward received the surname Martel, "the hammer," from his mighty prowess in that fight.

He baffled the Saracen invasion by his great victory at Poitiers. The Saracens had mastered all Asia and conquered Spain. Nothing could withstand their arms, and the Crescent bore death and desolation before it wherever it went. The Mohammedans determined to conquer all Europe in the name of the Prophet. Spain had fallen, and France was next. The two armies met at Poitiers. The strife was bloody, for the Saracens had the prestige of former victories and the advantage of numbers; France had the wisdom of Martel. That wisdom triumphed, and the Mohammedan was hurled back, a broken power. This victory saved Europe from want and desolation, for the brave people would have suffered anything sooner than embrace Mohammedanism. The great champion of Christian civilization lived nine years after his famous triumph at Poitiers and died in the year 741.—Irish World.

Force of Drops of Water.

It seems almost incredible that so small a thing as a drop of rain should injure the propeller of an aeroplane, but such is the case. At so great a speed does the propeller revolve—1,200 revolutions a minute as a matter of fact—that a rain drop hits it with such enormous force as to chip a piece of the wood away. Some idea of the hardships entailed by flying through the rain at sixty miles an hour may be gathered from the fact that an aviator who recently went through such an experience, alighted with the edge of his propeller fretted as though it had been gnawed by rats. The rain drops had chipped pieces out of the blades and also bruised the aviator's face, owing to the force with which they hit against his flesh.—London Spectator.

Antiquity of "A Regular Shindy."

The antiquity of many familiar terms is surprising when it is known. Many people are not aware that "What the dickens!" occurs in Shakespeare, but fewer still will be prepared to hear that the phrase "a regular shindy" is found in an author's note to a poem called "The Popish Kingdom," published in 1570. A writer quotes this note, which refers to the celebration of Maundy Thursday. "Midnight services are held in church, the lights are put out, and a regular shindy follows, men being beaten and wounded."—London Globe.

Fine Language.

As a rule the educated native of West Africa, like his Indian brother, loves high flown language. A clerk some time ago sent a report complaining that the carbines of the police at his station often misfired. This is how he put it: "It is ridiculous to report that the firearms of the police when pointed at the firmament refuse to give explosive sound."—London Saturday Review.

Of the Past.

Geologists say that several species of man have entirely disappeared from the earth. Doubtless these last species include the nice old gentleman who used to pull off his boots of an evening with the help of the bootjack.—Chicago News.

The Fourth Estate.

The expression "fourth estate" was first used by Thomas Carlyle and was applied to the editors during the period of the French revolution.

Impudent.

Registrar—How old are you, madam? She—I've seen nineteen summers, sir. Registrar—How long have you been blind?—Brooklyn Eagle.

JUDGES ARE NAMED TO DECIDE WINNERS IN FREE TOUR RACE

Well Known Men to Pass on Vote in Press Contest Which Will End Tomorrow Night—Rush of Subscriptions.

The following will act as judges of the final vote tomorrow night: City Judge William G. DeMeza, City Collector William R. Townsend, Armstrong Mulford.

The big race is now being run at full speed, and there is every indication of some lively work being done by each candidate whose progress had placed her prominently in the list as contending for one of the four tours to the Panama-Pacific Exposition offered by the Press.

Only one day more before the contest closes. That means a great deal to the contestants, and every person interested must realize that in a short time it will be necessary to make the best showing possible, so that when tomorrow arrives your favorite candidate will not be lagging, due to failure on her part to take advantage of the opportunity held out in votes. Votes are the all-important things, as has been said before. Get the votes and in large enough numbers, and then your candidacy becomes that of a probable winner. Fail to secure the votes and neglect the opportunity of gaining a large number of them on subscriptions and the answer is failure.

Nobody entered in this race and who has worked hard up to the present time wishes to fail. Every woman feels that she is as much entitled to win as the woman across the way. If you are a hustler, this means that the balance of today and tomorrow will count greatly to your credit and gain in the contest.

The Press' Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour Contest will close at 10 p. m. tomorrow, Saturday, April 17, in accordance with the rules published at the start of the contest. This means at 10 p. m. sharp and not one minute after the door to the Press office will be locked and all inside at that time who have not been waited upon owing to th rush will be attended to. To make the work easy for the contest department, in order that they may make as much haste as possible, it will be well to arrange all subscription orders according to the amount of money they represent; for example, take all the $1.25 subscriptions and put them together, all of the $2.50 together, etc. Have the proper amount of money to accompany the subscriptions arranged in such a way as to be easily counted, and do not pin the money to each order, as it will take time to separate the money from the blanks. Remember that each candidate can aid the contest department greatly by making their receipting for the subscriptions as easy as possible, and the quicker the judges will be able to supervise the count of the votes the quicker the result will be known. The decision will be made by the judges to morrow night, but will be subject to verifications.

All subscriptions sent in by mail by out-of-town candidates must be accompanied by cash, money order, draft or certified check. All checks must be certified.

All subscriptions and remittances mailed after tonight should bear a special delivery stamp.

All subscriptions when turned in must be filled out in the regular way and upon the regular subscription blank. Candidates should get a sufficient supply of order blanks to cover all subscriptions they intend to turn in, and not wait until the last minute and come to the office to do it.

Address all letters bearing remittances to the Contest Manager, Press, Plainfield, N. J., and not to any individual. All checks, etc., should be made payable to the Plainfield Daily Press.

All ballots in the ballot box up to 8 p. m. this evening will be counted, and the revised count will appear in tomorrow's issue of the Press. This will be the last count made by the contest department. The next and final count will be made by the judges tomorrow night, and this count, added to the vote-standing as it appears in tomorrow's Press, will be the total vote of each candidate—the vote that will decide the winners. This vote, as above stated, will be subject to verification.

LARGE SUMS APPORTIONED FOR RIVERS AND HARBORS

The various amounts fixed by Secretary of War Garrison for rivers and harbors shows that New Jersey has fared very well in the apportionment, which is largely due to the energetic efforts of United States Senator James E. Martine. The sums appropriated for this State are as follows:

Passaic River, $100,000; Shrewsbury River, $18,000; Raritan Bay, $20,000; Keyport harbor, Matawan Creek, Raritan, South and Elizabeth Rivers, Shoal harbor and Compton Creek and Cheesequake Creek, $24,000; Woodbridge Creek, $6,000; Delaware River, Pa., and N. J., and above Lalor street, Trenton, $6,612; Wilmington harbor, Del., $45,000; Absecon Inlet, $60,000; Raccoon Creek, $5,000; Appoquinimink, Murderkill and Mispillion Rivers, Del., $15,000; inland waterway between Rehoboth Bay and Delaware Bay, Del., $41,000; Broadkill River, Del., $5,000; Tuckerton Creek, $5,000.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — Scoop's Music Lacks the Charm That Soothes Savage Beasts — BY "HOP"

Odd Happenings In the War News

The German admiralty has ordered its submarines to be careful about steamers leaving Havre for England because they may have German prisoners of war on board.

The rich of Germany are leaving their country in large numbers, responding to a government appeal that there shall be fewer people to feed while the war continues.

Copenhagen reports that the crown prince of Germany has been killed by one of the members of his suit. Since then the report says the kaiser has doubled his bodyguard. This is about the twenty-fifth time the crown prince has been murdered in dispatches.

Submarine catching is now the great game of the British admiralty. Stout wire netting, the meshes in it five feet square, has been sunk in the channels frequented by German submarines far enough down not to touch ordinary vessels. Miles of it have been sunk.

Some of the German prisoners taken in France in recent weeks were wounded with a new instrument of warfare the French are employing. This is a small metal box filled with a strong explosive and about twenty shrapnel balls. The box is thrown by hand into the opposing trenches, where it is exploded by a fuse.

SUBNORMAL RACE IN EUROPE AFTER WAR.

Brain Loss Due to Shock More Serious Than Wounds.

Europe will be peopled with a race of subnormal men after the war, according to Miss Amy Rowland, aid to Dr. George W. Crile, noted surgeon, of Cleveland. Miss Rowland arrived in New York on board the Arabic of the White Star line, from Liverpool, and goes to join Dr. Crile, who also returned recently from the front, where he was connected with the American Ambulance hospital.

"Of the thousands of soldiers examined by Dr. Crile," Miss Rowland said, "every one evinced evidences of a permanent loss of brain power. The fright and shock they had suffered had impaired the brain tissue and in some cases had made idiots of them.

"The thousands of cripples who will be foisted on the suffering countries when the war ends will not by any means be the most serious consequences of the conflict. Dr. Crile found that in the cases of all the soldiers examined.

"In addition to the mental effect which will make those men subnormal for the balance of their lives Dr. Crile conducted researches into the physical effect of shock and fright on the human body. Previously the surgeon had made examinations of the effects of the same sensations on animals, a work which is widely known to the medical profession. It was found that in every case the effects of the sensations on men and animals are identical. There is an impairing of the nervous force, besides the gross physical effect."

Dr. Crile, whose works on diseases of the nerves and brain are accepted as textbooks by the medical profession, was at the head of a unit of nurses sent by the American colleges. Their ward contained 450 beds. Dr. Crile uses nitrous oxide for an anaesthetic, and he took with him special nurses to administer it. One of them, Miss Mabel Littleton, returned on board the Arabic. She said the soldiers were eager to take nitrous oxide when they found that it did not leave the nauseous after effects which accompany ether.

A MARGIN OF SAFETY

An engineer never thinks of building a bridge without allowing a sufficient margin of safety. No more can you build a successful career without a margin of "capital" safety in your business.

The average business man knows that it is not too little BUSINESS, but rather too little CAPITAL with which to handle his growing business, that gives him the most concern.

Why not, therefore, remedy this weakness by laying aside monthly, through the medium of our Installment Bond plan, say $25. In 38 months you will have acquired $1,000 additional capital to be drawn upon as your needs require.

Allow us to explain the details.

ELKS READY FOR BLACKFACE SHOW

Plainfield Lodge Minstrel Troop to Give a Record Breaking Production

ON APRIL 28 AND 29

Many Surprises in the Big First Part—Scenic Setting Supplied by George M. Cohan—The Cast and Chorus.

After several weeks of hard rehearsing the minstrel troupe of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., has now gotten its annual blackface production whipped into shape, with the result that indications point to the most successful show it has ever given. The entire program is replete with novelties and up-to-the-minute effects from the viewpoint of scenery, costumes and electric displays. The finale of the first part has a patriotic tinge especially opportune at this time, and beyond any doubt will create gales of applause. The performances are to be given on Wednesday and Thursday nights, April 28 and 29, in the Plainfield Theatre, the advance seat sale opening on Thursday next at 9:30.

The opening part depicts a scene entitled "After the Hunt," showing the troupe as gentlemen hunters gathered on the lawn in front of the Greenbrook Hunt Club. The end men are summoned, and appear in the guise of waiters, starting merriment off with a swing. The numbers in the first part are as follows: Overture, company; opening chorus, "The Hunt," company; entrance of end men; medley of popular airs, pany; end song, "Mississippi Cabaret," W. J. Firstbrook; ballad, "The Garden of the Gods," B. J. Tallamy; end song, "On the 5:15," John H. Cose; ballad, "Just a Little Bit of Heaven," Elmer D. Cutting; end

RECORDS INDICATE PROSPEROUS YEAR

Public Recreation Committee Gives Reasons for Increase During Past Season.

Following the annual presentation of reports the Public Recreation Committee elected its officers for the ensuing year at a meeting held in the Library last night, the selections being as follows: Chairman, Henry Crofut White; vice chairmen, A. M. Jones and G. Stuart Simmons; secretary, W. H. P. Veysey, and treasurer, William M. Sandford.

Reports submitted by Arthur B. Jones, president of the committee, indicated that the past year has been a fairly successful one. The atendance figures at the various activities have increased from the 16,000 in 1913 to 30,000 in 1914 and the meetings during the past year numbered 621 as against 156 the preceeding year. The activities have developed from seven to twenty.

In his rport Mr. Jones gave the following causes for the increase:

"First—There is a growing and perfectly natural demand by the public for healthy normal recreation under proper supervision. Second—the longer our work continues, the better known to the public it becomes. Third—the opening of the Plainfield High School gymnasium and swimming pool has increased the facilities we had to offer the public. Fourth—the employment of an additional, very capable supervisor has been a larger factor in increasing the number of different clubs and movements. Fifth—but not least, the very valuable and self-sacrificing support given by the members of this committee itself. Each member with hardly any exceptions has given not only valuable advice and time when needed, but has given the best that is in him in order that this large democratic movement shall mean something to the community."

"SINK-PHONY" ORCHESTRA SCORES ANOTHER HIT

Another capacity audience listened to the second appearance of the "Kitchen Sink-Phony Orchestra," which gave another concert in the Parish house of the Congregational church, last night. The program was thoroughly enjoyed by those present and was a unique entertainment in every way. Carl Evans scored a decided hit last night playing a violin and cornet behind a screen. Signorina Phillippi, representing Cavelleria Rusticana, took up a collection, filling a dish pan and a tea kettle full of coins.

Much of the success of the affair is due to the efforts of Mrs. D. Foster Updike, who was conductor, and Miss Alice Morgan, pianist, who rehearsed the members for several weeks. A substantial sum was realized as a result to add to the church fund.

WAGON AND AUTO COLLIDE; PEDDLER IN THE HOSPITAL

An automobile, owned and driven by Bayard Hawthorne, of 733 Sherman avenue, collided with a peddler's rig belonging to Samuel Rabinowitz, of 532 West Third street, at Watchung avenue and West Second street, shortly after 6:30 o'clock last night. Rabinowitz was thrown from the driver's seat and sustained injuries which necessitated his removal to Muhlenberg Hospital.

The force of the impact badly damaged the wagon, and the auto was also scratched. At the house it was said that Rabinowitz' injuries are not of a serious nature, and he will be discharged today. The police have taken a hand in the investigation to fix the liability for the collision, and the two parties will appear before Judge DeMeza, in the city police court, next Friday morning.

L. R. ROBINSON TO SPEAK.

Leland R. Robinson, a senior leader of his class at Columbia University, will be the speaker at the morning service at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow morning. GOSPEL ADDRESS.

A gospel address will be given by Samuel Ridout, Sunday evening, at 7:30, at the hall, 209 East Front street; subject, "Christ, God's King and Prophet." All are earnestly invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen B. Laing, of the borough, are parents of a boy born to them on Thursday.

TO ENFORCE THE EIGHT HOUR LAW

It is Alleged That Sewer Contractors Are Guilty of Violation.

A determined stand to enforce the State eight hour law on all new sewer work in connection with the joint sewer contracts was taken by the Building Trades' Conucil at its weekly meeting last night. It was alleged that the law is being violated by the contractors now at work in the borough, and business agent, William Lunger, was appointed to confer with Mayor Robert Clark, Jr. The conference was held this morning and the executive promised to take the matter up immediately with the Borough Council and its legal adviser, Judge Isaac P. Runyon.

The eight hour law is outlined in section 253 of the 1913 statutes of New Jersey. It declares that eight hours shall constitute a days' work on every municipal or state contract, no matter what the class of labor may be. It was declared at the Trades' Council meeting that the act has not been lived up to by the borough sewer contractors. While none of the trades connected with the council are affected, the organization merely wishes to see that the law is enforced and Mayor Clark is of the opinion that it should be done. The same contention rose in the city a short time ago when Frank Mobus was doing the work and he lived up to the eight hour compulsion.

The council took up the question of the building now being erected by the Rush Printing Company on Netherwood avenue, complaints having been made that non-union work was being done. The matter was thoroughly discussed and the building and concern were placed on the "unfair" list. It was declared that the new Harrison avenue school in the borough which was declared "unfair" last week, had been cleared, the contractors agreeing to live up to all requirements.

The violations reported in work at the city school buildings was again taken up last night, but was laid over without any action until certain other details could be investigated.

CHESTER L. BROWN ADMITS HIS GUILT

Charged With Practising Osteopathy in This City Without a License.

Arraigned in the Union County Court of Quarter Sessions in Elizabeth before Judge James C. Connolly yesterday afternoon Chester L. Brown, a negro who lived at 319 Plainfield avenue, this city, entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging him with practicing osteopathy in Plainfield without a State license. The court set next Friday as the date for sentence.

Brown was arrested by Sergeant Higgins, of the local force, following a hunt that had extended over a period of two weeks. He was charged with practicing illegally on a number of Plainfield patients and specific instances were named in affidavits secured by Police Chief Kiely. Brown displayed a medical sign on his Plainfield avenue house up to the time of his apprehension, according to the police and local health officer.

It was alleged that his license had been revoked by the State authorities in June when he was charged with "false pretense" in signing articles to secure the credentials. He maintained that his license was not revoked until October. This, however, was rendered immaterial when Chief Kiely secured allegations against him aftr that date.

PROFESSOR PRINCE TO SPEAK.

Former State Senator John D. Prince, professor of sciences and languages at Columbia University, will be the speaker at the session of the Dutch Arms Men's Club of Trinity Reformed church, Monday evening. The occasion is to be observed as "ladies' night." Mr. Prince will speak on the subject, "Development of Primitive Music."

The Junior Class of the North Plainfield High School will present two playlets, "The Mouse Trap" and "A Thief in the House" at Columbus Auditorium, Friday evening, April 30. Rehearsals are now being held by the students.

ALUMNAE MEETING.

The Alumnae Association of Muhlenberg Hospital will hold a meeting at the Nurse's Home on Tuesday, April 20, at 3 p. m.

MORE AIR RAIDS BEING PLANNED

Germans Send Zeppelins Into Belgium for Attacks on England.

VICTORY FOR RUSSIANS

Bayonet Attack on Austrians Results in Capture of Prisoners—French Cruiser Bombarded Works Along Dardanelles.

Amsterdam, April 17—Germany is sending more Zeppelins into Belgium for use in raids over England and the North Sea. Two have arrived within twenty-four hours at the German aerodrome south of Ghent.

A despatch from Hattingen in Baden states that a hostile airman yesterday dropped bombs there. Four fell harmlessly but one landed in the railway yards and set fire to railway trucks.

Petrograd, April 17.—The following statement was given out today by the Russian general staff:

"In Galicia, east of the region of Cerzkotize, our reconnoitering parties on April 14 forced their way to the enemy's wire barriers by a bayonet charge. The Austrians were dislodged from two lines of trenches. The enemy lost heavily and we captured three officers and fifty-eight men.

"In the Carpathians regiments of several divisions of cavalry have given up their horses for use in the artillery. The cavalry have been converted into infantrymen. Rains during the past few days caused the snow to melt. The total number of Austrian guns captured at Przemysl is 1,010."

Paris, April 17.—The Minister of Marine announced today that a French cruiser, supported by hydroplanes, for reconnaisance purposes

MORE DONATIONS FOR RELIEF WORK

New Jersey Branch of Prince of Wales Fund Has Now Prepared a Total of 6,138.

The New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Relief for Soldiers and Sailors held another meeting in Grace church parish house yesterday. Every member worked diligently preparing articles for shipment to the field hospitals in Europe with the result that a total of 2,618 pieces of supplies was made. This brings the grand total the branch has prepared up to the magnificent number of 6,138, a record that is hardly equalled anywhere else in this vicinity.

The hospital committee of the branch held a business session yesterday and went over the needs of the invalid soldiers and sailors. It was reported by Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers that the appeal to Plainfield men for the necessary money and articles to supply comfort bags for the wounded men had met with a generous response. Five of the bags were included in yesterday's consignment to St. George's Society but it is hoped that there will be a continuation of generosity on the part of those to whom a contribution means so little. No matter how small the amount of money given or the comfort articles donated, the gift means happiness and enjoyment for some poor fellow suffering in a meagrely furnished hospital. A check for $50 from a friend in New York is one of the best contributions received so far.

The committee announces that tobacco, cigarette papers, safety razors, playing cards and other little luxuries are not the only things that can be used. Photographic sections of Sunday papers, paper covered novels, and magazines can also be included. All donations can be sent to Grace church parish house Friday mornings or to Mrs. Rogers home on East Front street.

WANT LICENSE AGENCY.

There has been much complaint about town recently because of the change made by the Motor Vehicle Department of the State in discontinuing the local agency for the issuing of licenses, which was held for some time by Henry Vosseler. The agency was discontinued about five weeks ago, and no reason was given or any public announcement made of the fact. The nearest agencies are at Westfield and Bound Brook. As there are over 900 automobile owners in Plainfield, the necessity for the agency is apparent, and a movement has been started to have it re-established.

FINAL DAY IS HERE IN PRESS' RACE FOR TRIPS TO FAIR

Contestants Eager as Hour for Counting Votes Draws Near —Ballot Box Closes at 10 P. M.—Judge to Announce Winners.

JUDGES TO COUNT THE BALLOTS.

Prominent Plainfielders who will compose the Board of Judges and who will make the final count of the ballots in the Press' great contest, are:

City Judge Wm. G. DeMeza.
City Collector Wm. R. Townsend.
Armstrong Mulford.

These are well-known and estimable gentlemen, and the public may rely upon their decision as being strictly in accordance with the ballots cast, without fear or favor.

The coming of this—the final day in the Press' Panama-Pacific Contest, marked an increase in the mingled hope and fear which alternately have been pervading the minds of the candidates during the past weeks.

When this paper reaches the reader the working hours of the last day of the contest will be nearly over, and those remaining hours will be filled with strenuous efforts to secure every available vote.

The hottest of the fight is raging today, and the greatest efforts are being put forth so that no chances may be taken.

How annoying, how terribly disappointing it would be to discover that one lost by a thousand votes, when just one more subscription would have made you a winner.

Make your election sure.

Promptly at 10 p. m. tonight the door of the Press office will be locked, those wishing to vote and who have not had their ballots made out owing to the rush, will be waited upon, provided they are inside the Press office by 10 o'clock tonight, Saturday, April 17. Those arriving after the door is locked will not be allowed to vote.

Get to the Press office before 10 p. m. or your votes will be worthless.

The vote exhibit today shows the number of votes obtained by each candidate from the start of the contest up to and including yesterday evening at 8 o'clock, which was the last count made by the Contest Department.

Candidates Take Notice.

There is bound to be a big rush during the closing hours of the contest and to help reduce this rush candidates would do well to turn in their subscriptions at once and take away the ballots which they can deposit any time up to the closing hour. By doing this the big task of handling the bulk of subscriptions during the last few hours will be eliminated and the winners determined just so much sooner.

It is most important that candidates have their subscriptions filled out in full and correctly. See that the candidate's name is on the Special Ballot and not the name of the subscriber as has happened in some cases.

The circulation manager will be ready and willing to advise all candidates as to old and new subscribers, addresses, in fact any information a candidate may not be clear on. All this should be looked up and straightened out before presenting subscriptions to the Contest Department.

Candidates should have the total amount of their subscriptions correct and the exact amount of money to cover them, hand in your subscriptions in one package and the money in another, and do not have subscription orders and money folded up together.

Announcing the Winners.

As soon as all candidates have turned in their subscriptions on the closing night of the contest, and the ballots have been deposited in the ballot box, the ballot box will be opened by the judges, the votes counted and the winners announced as soon as this final count is completed. The winners, as announced by the judges, will be subject to verification of their subscriptions as to old and new readers, and should it be found that the vote of the winners as announced by the judges should undergo a sufficient reduction in votes after verifying to throw her out of the winning class, this fact will be published, together with the correct vote, and the rightful winner announced. It will be well for all candidates to exercise the greatest care in marking their subscriptions as to old and new in order that the winners as announced by the judges will not have to be changed.

Candidates and their friends are invited to be present at 10 o'clock this evening to witness the final count and hear the announcement of the winners by the judges.

May the best vote-getters win!

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

ENTHUSIASTIC SESSION OF DUNELLEN MOTHERS

About 135 mothers and children were present at the mother's meeting in the chapel of the Presbyterian church Thursday afternoon under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. The meeting followed the monthly session of the union. About seventy babies were enrolled as white ribbon recruits, their mothers signing pledges to give them a temperance training.

A pleasing entertainment was given during the afternoon. Rev. and Mrs. Polan sang a selection entitled, "Pray On, Christian Mother," Miss Mildred Mattis rendered a piano solo; Miss Winifred Schenck recited, "A Reformer Reformed," and fourteen children took part in a play entitled, "The Sick Baby." The play was splendidly acted and much enjoyed by all. The names of those who took part are: Edith Dayton, Betty Carpenter, Harold Leland, Helen Whitford, Howard Dayton, Helen Osmun, Mary Hartpence, Olive Houghtaling, Marion Line; Amy Williams, Grace Pierson, Nancy Johnson, Marion Houghtaling and Helen Walter. The acting of Howard Dayton as Dr. True deserves special mention.

Following the program a social hour was enjoyed.

Constable C. Wesley Blaine was a visitor in New Brunswick yesterday.

Contractor Otis M. Webber has been awarded the contracts of installing all improvements in the two double brick houses that Contractor Bird, of Plainfield, is erecting at Equator Park.

Mrs. George V. Vander Veer, of Prospect avenue, has practically fully recovered from the effects of a fall through the front porch of her home two weeks ago Wednesday.

RECOVERING FROM GRIP.

Charles DeHart, Jr., of Center street, has been suffering with a slight attack of the grip. He has stuck to his post, however, as manager of the local branch of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company. Yesterday he was not able to do much and James Dunham, of New Market, assisted about the store.

MINSTRELS MADE A HIT.

The Darktown College Minstrels, which were repeated by the Dunellen Dramatic Club last evening, were greeted by a full and enthusiastic house. The show itself had been changed so that everything was new except the name. Many jokes were cracked and verses of prose recited with some boroughites as the subjects. Very few of the business men escaped. The singing was fine and every one took their part so well that it is hard to single out any particular person for mention. Harrison E. Giddes should also receive special mention because of his filling the difficult position of end man so capably on short notice.

The cast follows: World's premier end men—Lew Dockstader Dodwell, Bert Williams Kelly, Honey Boy Evans Ryan and George Primrose Giddes. The silver-voiced warblers—John McCormack Leland, Bonci Hunt Caruso Kookegey, Andrew Mack Giddes. Some poets—Kipling Brakeley, Wadsworth Cole. Mandolin soloist—Prof. Salvator Botchacaloop Dix. Added attraction—Prof. Studioso Williams. Chorus from Metropolitan Opera House—Mush Martin, Leogan J. Logan, Beans Frederick, Malvorchsches Dealaman, Goetzel L. Logan, Scotti Wickham.

on April 16 successfully bombarded the works of El Arish and the camp of the Turkish troops concentrated around that town.

The French war statement issued today says:

"A lull has fallen upon operations in the western theatre. There is nothing new to add to the communique of last night."

Berlin, April 17.—The following announcement was given out by the German Admiralty today:

"During the night of April 15 and April 16 a German naval airship successfully bombarded several defended towns on the southeast coast of England. The airship was met with heavy fire during the attack but returned safely."

The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"French attacks near Flirey, in the Woevre region, were repulsed. The English used yesterday, east of Ypres, grenades and bombs developing asphyxiating gas. On the south slope of Lorette Heights, northwest of Arras, a small German point of support sixty yards wide and fifty yards deep was lost. In Champagne northwest of Perthes we took by storm a group of French fortifications. A French counter attack failed. German troops captured a French position northwest of Urbeis, in the Vosges. They took as prisoners French Chasseurs and then evacuated the position because it was disadvantageously situated. A French airship smashed a number of windows in Strassburg and wounded civilians. A German aviator shelled Greenwich, near London. On the east front the situation is unchanged."

Constantinople, April 17—The following official statement was issued by the Turkish War Office today:

"Hostile ships bombarded our positions near Bulair without doing any damage. A hostile ironclad bombarded the Dardanelles forts from the outer entrance on Friday without any success. When hit by the shells from our batteries the ship caught fire and retired in the direction of Tenedos.'

London, April 17.—A report from Constantinople under yesterday's date received by a news agency by way of Berlin and Amsterdam states that a cruiser of the Anglo French fleet bombarded the Dardanelles fortifications from the entrance Thursday. It also states that a Russian fleet bombarded the Turkish ports of Eregli and Sunmguldak in Asia Minor on the Black Sea.

18c Yard for This 40 to 44-inch Cotton Ratine

The fact that these goods sold last season in enormous quantities at 75c and $1 yard does not mean they are worth those prices today.

On the other hand, they are certainly worth more than 18c yard, for they are very pleasing, sightly, serviceable fabrics for summer skirts, suits and dresses.

And they are quite as attractive as many fabrics being produced for this season.

White and Many Colors

2,000 yards alone of white, which is most in demand.

And 11,476 yards of cadet and Belgian blue, gold, rose, pink, sand, cream, navy blue, lilac, nile green, brown, black and some interesting red shades.

These materials might be properly called marquisette ratine for they show the square marquisette weave so popular this season. Sale on Monday on the

WHAT IS BEING DONE FOR THE AMERICANIZATION OF THE FOREIGN BORN JEWISH PEOPLE RESIDING IN NEW YORK.

On the corner of East Broadway and Jefferson street, in the section of New York city that is known as the lower East Side, there is a five-story building called the "Educational Alliance." The name does not altogether tell the nature of the work carried on within its walls It is, however, one of the most important factors in Americanizing the foreign born people residing in that neighborhood. In a general way, the work of the Alliance is similar to those of the social settlements. Its special feature, however, is that plan and scope are so arranged as to suit the requirements of the immigrants from Eastern Europe.

The institution was called into existence in the year 1891. It is supported and managed by the Jewish people of the city of New York, and while it is non-sectarian in its tendencies, most of the frequenters of the place are Jews.

It is open daily from 9 a. m. until 10 p. m. The work is educational, social, moral and religious. The place is frequented by men, women and children. In the morning the work is for children of school age who do not attend the public schools. These are immigrant children, recent arrivals. They come from the rural districts of eastern Europe, and attendance at public school is altogether new to them. The Alliance takes them and introduces them to American life. Besides being taught the English language and the other branches of public school instruction, special effort is made to impress the children with the idea of patriotism and acquaint them with American customs and usages.

For centuries the Jewish people have for one reason or another neglected the cultivation of music and of art, especially the latter, and have also systematically neglected physical culture. In order to Americanize the coming citizens great stresss is laid on giving them these things, which were denied to them in their native countries of oppression.

The teaches take a personal interest in the pupils. Their homes are visited, mothers' meetings are held, and at these talks are given on life in America, and on what they, as mothers, may do to further the interest of their children at school. Every Friday at noon there are patriotic exercises, consisting of songs, and calisthenics. Here the most impressive feature lies in the taking of the oath of allegiance to the American flag. The formula for the oath was specially written for the exercises.

"Flag of our great Republic, inspirer in battle, guardian of our homes, whose Stars and Stripes stands for bravery, purity, truth and union, we salute thee! We, the natives of distant lands, who find rest under thy folds, do pledge our hearts, our lives, and our sacred honor to love and protect thee, our country and the liberty of the American people forever."

When the children have learned the language and have become Americanized in their dress and habits, they are transferred to the public schools. It is usually from four to six months from the time a child enters the Alliance School for immigrant children until it is transferred to the public school.

In the afternoon the work is arranged for children who attend the public schools. About half past three when the latter close, the Educational Alliance becomes a regular beehive of youngsters. They come for various purposes, for religious and industrial instruction.

For girls there is a large industrial school, consisting of both domestic art and science departments. The gymnasium which accommodates about 150 children, is visited on alternate days by both boys and girls.

Outside of these classes the children come for what might be called "accomplishments." Those of them who have talent are given instruction in music, violin and piano. There are large classes in art. The library in the building, which is a part of the city library is taxed to its utmost capacity, especially the rooms for reference and for the children.

There are several clubs of juvenile immigrants which meet in the afternoon, and quiet games for children in the social rooms. The afternoon is also the time when their Penny Provident Bank is open. And find that the number of small depositors during the year is 2,435, the amount deposited being $4,811.03. Since the opening of the station 26,913 children have deposited $28,260.47.

What is done for the children during the day is done in the evening for adults, especially immigrant adults. There are classes in English, arranged according to the knowledge which the immigrant brings with him from his native country. American history, geography and American form of government are also taught.

For young women there are classes in plain sewing, dressmaking, millinery and cooking.

For people working during the day in factories and stores who hope for advancement there are commercial classes in stenography, typewriting, bookkeeping and telegraphy. There are also classes in music, art and general culture. Friday evening and on Saturday during the day the building is closed for secular purposes but is open for religious work.

During the summer months the regular classes and clubs are suspended, but then the outdoor activities are increased. One of the most interesting features of the summer work is the roof garden, outside of which Seward Park is the only breathing space of the immediate neighborhood. The garden is open from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m. and on hot days it is often visited by as many as 10,000 people, men, women and children. In the morning come mostly the youngest children and they have their kindergarten games. In the afternoon come mothers and babies, and also the older children. Well organized games are conducted and the children are taken in squads to the gymnasium—boys for drill and girls for calisthenics—and thence to the shower baths.

There is a circulating library on the roof, a refreshment stand and a sterilized milk depot. Occasionally music enlivens the evening or stereopticon lectures on American history and geography. And in quieter evenings there is reading and the playing of chess and checkers and dominoes.

All that has been said so far is a mere outline of the routine of the work. The real interest lies in its spirit and can best be understood if the conditions under which the people have lived before they come to the United States are compared with those they find here. They come from countries where the political, social and economic conditions are diametrically opposed to those in America.

The Alliance then is an institution for the Americanization of the foreigner. It offers opportunities to all classes of people. It endeavors to give to the immigrant what has been denied to him in his native land. It is progressive in its spirit and yet conservative; conservative and yet progressive. It speaks to the older generation of immigrants to consider the future, and addresses itself to the rising generation to have regard for the past. It "reconciles the heart of the parent to the heart of the child." It is a common meeting ground of the rich as well as the poor, of the learned as well as those who have not had the advantage of an education, of native Americans and of foreigners, of people representing the interest of capital and of those representing the interest of labor, of Jew and of Gentile. In this way the institution the Educational Alliance, by its methods, brings about a better understanding, a better feeling between the different classes, and above all, makes the foreigner understand American institutions, make him realize that liberty and law go together, that the rights of citizenship imply also duties, and that Americans are a nation governed by the people for the benefit of the people.

DEPARTMENT MAKES NEW RECORD ANSWERING ALARM

Following a meeting of the Councilmanic fire committee last night, box 13, at North and Park avenues, was pulled at 11:10 by one of the members for the purpose of testing the fire departments' rapidity in responding to alarms. The statement is made by Chief Doane and verified by those in the test that exactly fourteen seconds after Councilman Graves released the hook the apparatus from both the East and West Second street houses was rounding the corner into Park avenue. E. A. Wilkinson, general manager for the Nott Engine Company at Minneapolis, was one of those who held a watch, and he asserts that the fourteen seconds record is absolutely correct.

The remarkable record of the response seemed unbelievable to many persons but Chief Doane, Mr. Wilkinson and the fire committee assert that they are positive of the time. By several watches, William Gaub, driving No. 1 hose wagon, swung into Park avenue in eleven seconds.

The Daily Press takes no responsibility for the record of last night as given out. However, Chief Doane is willing to meet all arguments and we refer the doubting Thomases to fire headquarters.

THE CHANGING FASHIONS

HIGH SCHOOL CAMP IN MAINE WOODS

One Feature Will Be August Football Practice for Local School's Eleven.

Under the direction of Clarence L. Woodman and Lester D. Beers, instructors in the Plainfield High School, a party of local schoolboys are planning a two months' vacation tour in the Maine woods. The "back to nature" routine planned for the adventurers is similar in many respects to that carried out each summer by Henry R. Hubbard, another member of the local school's faculty. The party will leave Plainfield immediately following the close of school in June and go directly to the "Pine Tree State" where they will establish a headquarters at Camp Quest, on the shores of Moosehead Lake, the gateway to the canoeing and fishing regions of northern Maine.

Mr. Beers, who is the head of the High School science department, has planned an itinerary of educational trips through the Maine woods and the campers will spend portions of their time delving into the mysteries that nature has to offer. A study will be made of the geographical features and peculiarities of the section and the trips will be interesting as well as instructive. These tours will be made along the shores of the St. John, Penobscot, Roach and Moose rivers and many smaller lakes characteristic of that region.

Mr. Woodman, who when a student in Colgate University, was a star varsity athlete, will take charge of the sport program that has been arranged. A portion of the time will be allotted to the national pastime, the local schoolboys' baseball team entering into competition with many other camp outfits in Maine. Mr. Woodman is also a member of the U. S. Volunteer Life-Saving Corps and the aquatics of the camp will also be under his direction.

One of the most promising features is the special attention to be given to the training of candidates for the Plainfield High School football eleven during the month of August. A large number of those who will try out for positions on the gridiron team will take the trip and under Mr. Woodman's direction preliminary drills in the rudiments of the game will be conducted at the camp.

Known as the "Colgate Twins," Mr. Woodman and Mr. Beers have gained the honor of being a couple of the most popular instructors in the local High School and the trip is looked forward to with considerable pleasure by those planning to take it.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Hardeen, the King of Handcuffs, and who has set two continents to talking about his marvelous feats, is coming to this city next Monday as the feature atraction at Proctor's Theatre. The engagement is one of the most notable of the season, and a host of sensations will follow his appearance. Hardeen has defied police officials in all parts of the world to keep him jailed, iron bars and bolts being useless in keeping him prisoner. He is also the only performer of his kind to place himself in an iron milk can filled with water, the lid being placed on and secured by padlocks. Failure to get out means death by drowning, but Hardeen always does it. He will appear at every performance for the first half of the week, and will give new demonstrations of his ability each time. Other numbers on next week's first half big bill be Martini and Maximilian, two comical trick sters and burlesque illusionists; Dunn sisters, two young women nicely and neatly dressed in several changes of costume, who sing and dance gracefully, artistically and beautifully. They sing solos and duets. They are naturally born actresses, talented, and put every number over with success. Carey and Dupont, comedy skit, and George Reeves, blackface comedian. "The Fairy and the Waif," a five-part photoplay, featuring Mary Minter, will be an added attraction on Monday and Tuesday. On all other days next week elaborate picture productions will be shown, making the bill at Proctor's the greatest value for the money in the city.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Twenty-five girls from the New York Y. W. C. A. Recreation Center will be the guests of the local association this afternoon. The delegation, in company with members of the local Y. W. C. Homes Hour will be observed at the local association tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

The statement made by Mrs. E. J. Berrian in a letter to the Daily Press concerning the shooting of the pet cat is not totally correct. I beg to say that the cat was owned and fed by us from the time it was two months old until it was brutally killed by the shots fired by two young men who were old enough to have known better.

It is an ordinary thing for any cat to go on neighbors' porches, no matter how well fed. That the cat was hungry is not true, as it was fed in its own home at 6 o'clock, Monday evening, on roasted beef and milk. It was in the best physical condition, and, contrary to the statement made in last night's issue, it did not need the attention of the S. P. C. A. The statement that the cat was killed because it was hungry is less than ridiculous, and forms but a weak excuse for the real motive—cruelty.

According to witnesses the cat was not killed in a humane manner, as it was thrown down the cellar while still alive.

The cat slept in its own home every night on a cushion, as it was valued far more than the ordinary cat, being the pet of my little daughter. For the last few days my little girl has been ill and in bed, and the cat, which was used to being with her, was at a loss. We are in a quandary to know what to tell our little girl, as she has been continually worrying for the whereabouts of her pet. The cat was very playful and could perform many cute tricks. The sorrow and worry the unnecessary shooting of my cat has caused cannot be expressed in words.

The balance of justice falls entirely on the side of the owners.

Thanking you for the space granted in your valuable columns,

I remain,

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Bike fans in the State are mourning the loss of this year's Decoration Day meeting, the Plainfield Motorcycle Club having decided to abandon this classic fixture after five years of marked success. During that era Plainfield has been the mecca for the classiest pelad-pushing talent in the metropolitan district on Memorial Day and it is to be regretted that the local organization did not see fit to again boom the project. The local feature proposed will, of course, to some extent alleviate the stress among Plainfield and borough followers of the cycle game, but those stars of Newark, Bayonne, Jersey City and New York who have been accustomed to making annual visits to the Mountainside course will feel the loss the keenest.

As a substitute for the bike fest, however, sportsmen in this city and the sister village the other side of Greenbrook will be given an opportunity to witness an inter-high school track meet on Parker Field, the like of which has never before been staged in this section of the State. The Union county authorities have contrived to make the field and track festival one glorious round of competition after another, and it is also proposed to extend an invitation to Somerset and Middlesex county high schools. That's what we call the proper spirit. Let 'em all in, the more the merrier.

What will become of all this aquatic talent that has been developing in the Plainfield High School tank during the past winter? That's the question a thousand and one athletic followers have put to us during the past fortnight. Rumor has it that some speedy swimmers and clever divers have been rounding into trim within the high school walls and as an interest awakener it would not be out of the way to have a spring meet. Other cities promote aquatics on a paying scale; why not Plainfield?

Probably the clearest photos of the Johnson-Willard bout that have found their way into America are owned by Paul Collier, of this city. Paul is the proud possessor of a series of picture postals that portray the amber-colored title defender and his burly Kansan challenger at critical intervals of the world's title affair. Take a squint at them. You'll probably not be able to give the "movies" of the scrap the "once over," so you'd better accept the next best thing.

M'DOWELL WINNER OF TEN PIN MATCH

Annexes Three Points at the Park Club With Gilman and Hall Also Leaders.

Warren Butler, leader of the Park Club handicap ten pin tournament, failed to place in last night's play, but is still the leader for the cup. The first three points went to McDowell, who made a mark of 506, to which was added 42 pins, making a total of 548. Charles Gilman was second, with a total of 529, and was credited with two points, while C. A. Hall won the odd tally. He was handicapped 75, and made a net of 443, giving him a gross count of 518.

SPORTING NOTES

Every knock is a boost for a hero. Whether Willard is his name or not, no matter his age, our hero is a hero.

Duffy Lewis, the old Red Sox stand-by in the left garden, reaches his twenty-seventh birthday today. The sun is not setting on his career.

Miller Huggins admits he has slowed up, and is practically out of baseball unless his second baseman goes back on him. The fans will miss him.

That Bat Nelson would put it all over Freddie Welsh in a 45-round go is the dope from those who saw Bat's recent come-back at Havana.

Carl Morris meets Jack Reed in a New York bout tonight, and on Wednesday night tackles Al Reich at the St. Nicholas Rink, New York.

Motorcycling is regaining popularity in New England. The season opens on Monday at the old Readville track. One hundred and twelve races have been scheduled for this summer there.

The Pittsburg Stove Leaguers make merry tonight at a beefsteak dinner to celebrate the Feds' opening in the smoky city. The Pittsburg and Kansas City teams will be guests of honor.

University, college and school stars are lined up at Des Moines today in the Drake relay carnival. The leading sprinters of the West are entered.

Princeton oarsmen passed up their holiday vacation to prepare for the clash today with Annapolis. The varsity and freshmen crews figure in the clash today on the Severn River.

It was fifty-five years ago today that Tom Sayers fought Heenan. Both men were in bad shape when the English police interfered at the end of the thirty-seventh round.

INTERESTING MEETING FOR LOCAL POULTRY RAISERS

The next meeting of the New Jersey Association for Poultry Improvement will be held in Exempt Fireman's Hall, Wednesday evening, April 21, at 8 o'clock. The executive committee has arranged to introduce certain novel features that will make it particularly interesting.

A number of the best breeders have contributed settings of eggs for hatching, baby chicks and breeding stock, which will be sold at auction to the highest bidder and the proceeds used for the benefit of the association. There will also be round table talks and discussions on incubation and brooding, modern methods of disinfection, and the value of beef scrap and animal food for the feeding and rearing of poultry.

One of the organizers of the New Jersey State Poultry Association will be present and explain in detail the benefit and object of this association, which has been organized and takes the place of the New Jersey branch of the American Poultry Association.

UNION COUNTY LEAGUE WILL HOLD CENTRAL JERSEY MEET IN THIS CITY

The Union county athletic meet, which was scheduled to be held on Parker Field, this city, on Decoration Day afternoon, has been raised to a higher scale, and if the present plans go through as they were proposed at a meeting held in the Plainfield High School yesterday afternoon, the meet will be one of the largest scholastic affairs ever held in this State. It will be known as the Central New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Meet, held under the auspices of the Union County Athletic League.

Elaborate plans are being made now, which will be completed at a meting of the representatives of the school who enter on April 26 in the local school. It was decided yesterday to invite the following institutions in this section to compete: Somerville, Bound Brook, Plainfield, Cranford, Roselle, Roselle Park, Battin, of Elizabeth, Rahway, Woodbridge, Summit, Montclair and Bloomfield. Pingry and Westfield Schools have also being mentioned for an invitation.

Ten events have been booked for the competing athletes. They are 100-yard dash (junior), 100-yard dash (senior), 200-yard dash, 440-yard run, 800-yard run, one-mile run, 12-pound shot putt, high jump, running broad jump and pole vault. With a number of entrants from each of the schools mentioned above the meet would undoubtedly prove a great success. A placque will be awarded to the school scoring the most points, and the first three to finish in each event will get medals. It is the plan of the local school to get an Olympic champ here on that day for exhibition as an added attraction. At the meeting yesterday Roselle had a representative present.

MAY AMALGAMATE DOUBLE SET OF BASKETBALL RULES

George T. Hepbron, chirman of the Amateur Athletic Union Basketball Committee, yesterday issued invitations to the representatives of the metropolitan district and new Jersey to attend a meeting to be held in New York city on Saturday afternoon, April 24, to discuss changes in the basketball rules. At present Amateur Athletic Union basketball and college basketball are governed by two separate and distinct sets of rules, and the advisability of adopting one set of rules for the Amateur Athletic Union and college basketball will be discussed.

The recommendations of this meeting will be submitted to the National Basketball Committe for official action.

TOSS FOR THE THIRD GAME.

Managers Roscoe VanCamp and Randolph Stelle, of the North Plainfield and Plainfield High School baseball teams, respectively, will flip a coin next Monday to decide where the third game between the two teams will be played.

ILL LUCK TRAILING BORO SCHOOL NINE

Three More Players Retire From North Plainfield High School Team.

The ill luck that has been following the North Plainfield High School baseball team so far this season has evidently not been shaken off yet, as the borough team has lost three of its most promising substitutes. Two of the players quit the team to take afternoon positions, while the other has secured a position on another nine.

Edson, who for the past two years has been substitute catcher and outfielder, will not be seen again in uniform, and Alfred Seidel and Martin McDonough are the others who have laid aside their togs. This leaves only Harry Kirch on the bench, as "Tut" Dawe is covering the keystone sack, while Conroy is out of the game.

Captain Smalley and Coach Mullin are contemplating a change in the infield, which will give them a man as a relief to Stahl, who now has to do all of the pitching. When Conroy returns a shift will probably be made as an experiment, as Stahl cannot possibly bear all the mound work himself.

QUAKER GIANTS WIN FROM LARAMIE PARK

FEDERALS' INNOVATION.

"Pat" Powers may be a suffragette sympathizer and then he may not, but one of the things that stood out in the Newark Federal League Club's opener yesterday afternoon was the fact that all the ushers were of the gentler sex. They were in white uniforms, with a sash of Scotch plaid over the shoulder. They were unlike the fresh young fellows that one ordinarily sees at a big league park, and it was the opinion of most of the onlookers that Powers had made a ten-strike with this innovation.

BOOKS NUTLEY HIGH.

Manager Elmer French, of the North Plainfield High School tennis team, has scheduled the Nutley High School team to appear on the local courts on Saturday, May 8. This will be the only Saturday home game for the borough racquet wielders. A return game at Nutley is pending.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Henry W. Savage's production of the romantic farce, "The Million," will be the opening attraction in next week's photoplay program at the Plainfield Theatre. It will be shown on Monday and Tuesday and will be followed on Wednesday and Thursday by the "The Italian," featuring George Beban, the versatile character actor. Friday and Saturday the offering will be charming Mary Ryan in Cohen and Harris' farce "Stop Thief." The serial film, "The Black Box," will be shown on Tuesday as usual. "The Million" has won the distinction of possessing more laughter and wholesome fun than any comedy of recent years. The continuous mirth proceeds equally from the action, caricatures and situations of one of the most novel and ingenius plots ever presented on the stage or screen. If the old philosophers are right, and "laughter is wealth," then "The Million" is well named. The subject also presents one of the most remarkable examples of character acting supplied in many years in the impersonation of "Le Baron," the crook, by Edward Abeles. In the course of the story he is called upon to portray no less than six entirely distinct characters. With the assumption of each impersonation, Edward Abeles not onlp resents a wholly varied physical appearance, but he lends to each of the six roles a totally distinct personality—first as the crook, with the police baying at his heels; then as Ike Damskinski, the second-hand clothing dealer of the Powery, and following these two characterizations in rapid succession as the duplicate of the singer, Danatelli, in which he convinces Danatelli that he is seeing things; as a reporter, changing from the bearded Damskinski to a dapper newspaper man; as the waiter at the roadhouse, and finally as the blonde cabaret dancer. It can be readily seen that the performance of so dicffiult and exacting a role must offer an actor an opportunity to exercise every phase f dramatic art. The absorbing swiftness of the various changes from character to character makes the role charmingly unique. Of Edward Abeles it need be said only that he fulfills every requirement of the trying role, and that his series of performances place him in the foremost rank of American character-actors. "The Million" is all fun of the merriest sort.

NEWS OF INTEREST IN THE PLAINFIELD BUILDING WORLD

A SUBSTANTIAL HOME

DESIGNED BY CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THIS "substantial home", is frame construction throughout with shingled roof stained and the exterior covered with narrow siding and painted. There is nothing specially ornate or peculiar about the house; it is a good, plain, comfortable home with every convenience and thoroughly built in every respect. The size of the house is 30 ft. in width by 40 ft. in depth and is suitable to a south or east frontage. The plan shows a wide piazza across the front and on the left side back to dining room. It is a full two-story house with low pitched hip roof and with wide projected bracketed cornice, the piazza roof being treated in the same manner as the main roof.

The vestibule entrance is at the right and opens into a reception hall with platform stairs at the rear built on the combination order with steps leading up to the second platform from the kitchen. There is a good coat closet opening from the rear of the reception hall and a toilet room opening from rear hall. Basement stairs extend down under the main stairs with grade entrance. The living room across the front and the dining room are both connected with sliding doors and are both good-sized rooms with wide open fireplace in the end of the living room. These rooms have beam ceilings. At the rear of the dining room is an extra room to be used for bedroom or den with a convenient closet. There is an ample butler's pantry connecting between the dining room and kitchen in the rear and an ample rear porch with balcony overhead, reached from the second story sleeping porch located over the den.

The second floor has four good-sized chambers all provided with ample closets, a large bathroom located over the pantry and a linen closet opening from the front hall. Stairs are provided to the attic leading up over the main stairs, the attic story is not designed to be finished, but has ample space in which to finish two or three rooms if desired. The cost of this house is estimated at $6,000 to $7,000 exclusive of heating and plumbing. The first story is finished in hardwood with oak floor and the second story in white enamel with birch floor. There is a good concrete foundation under the house with full basement, laundry drying room, fuel room and heating room, also toilet in the basement.

ANTI-SHINGLE PLAN UNPOPULAR

Carpenters and Other Artisans Will Vigorously Oppose Passage of Ordinance.

AFFECTS MANY TRADES

Mayor Calkins Believes Public Hearing Should Be Held—Citizen's Letter Started Agitation a Few Weeks Ago.

Although the proposition to prohibit the use of shingles as roofing material is still in its infancy, it has already met with vigorous opposition from several quarters while the idea is considered favorably by a number of officials, all of whom believe that the matter should be left to the people, and to that end a public hearing will soon be held. What transpires at this gathering will probably decide whether or not an anti-shingle ordinance shall be passed or not.

The local Carpenters' Union has already gone on record as being opposed to any such move and when the proper time comes will submit facts and figures to show that its stand is not a selfish one. Other trades would be effected by the ban on shingles, one of them being the painters, and if only slate, or other fireproof material was available it would be impossible to produce the proper effect in the colonial type of house. It is also asserted in opposition to this statement that while many fires have been caused in Plainfield by shingled roofs the number is so small it can hardly be used as a basis for argument.

The Carpenters' Union has appointed a committee of three men to secure all the necessary data regarding roofs of all kinds and to closely observe all proceedings of an official nature in the disposition of the plan. When the public hearing is held, the carpenters will be prepared to debate the question from any point of view. If an anti-shingle ordinance is passed, it will be done only after this branch of house trades has exhausted every effort to prevent it.

The anti-shingle proposition was first brought out by a letter to Mayor Calkins written by a prominent East Front street resident. The latter asserted that scores of cities throughout the country have tabooed shingles and believes that Plainfield should fall in line. In making the matter public, the Mayor expressed the opinion that the idea had merit and de-merit, but that the only way to arrive at any conclusion would be to let the public thrash it out.

KLINE CO. PLANS MORE BUNGALOWS

Local Concern Will Erect An Additional Ten at Watchung and Warrenville.

The Kline Realty Company, of this city, which recently erected eight bungalows at Watchung, and an additional eight at Warrenville, has plans under way for ten more buildings of the same type. They will be put up within the near future, the number being divided between the two tracts. These bungalows run from $1,500 to $2,500, according to the size of the lot, and have proven decidedly popular with home-seekers. Of the sixteen aircady put up, all but one have been sold.

One of the tracts developed by the Kline company was what was known as the Smith farm, while the one at Warrenville includes the former Wilson and Cooper farms. The development has meant a great deal to both places and has already paved the way for other investors. The addition of five more bungalows to the group of eight in the two locations will start another boom worth more than passing consideration. Watchung has grown wonderfully during the past five years, while Warrenville is getting to be a pretentious suburb. The price of ground all along the Warrenville road has almost doubled within ten years owing to the fact that so many New York and Plainfield people have realized the advantages that that section affords for summer homes. The same fact applies to the Washingtonville road running east from Watchung to Glenside Park, formerly known as Feltville.

The Kline Realty Company is busy at the present time developing a large tract of ground at Pearl road and Westfield avenue, Rahway. Ten houses are under course of construction at that place, the work being done by Cohen & Isrealsky, the Plainfield contractors. Five of the houses are of the bungalow type, while the others are of two-story houses. Several of them have already been sold.

RECEIVES $175,000 FOR STATE RIGHTS

New Jersey Central Plans to Make Extensive Improvements.

George Holmes, attorney for the New Jersey Central, yesterday, gave a certified check for $175,000 to the State Riprarian Commission for permission to extend its exterior line for piers on the Hudson River and upper bay of New York and Jersey City, the actual land involved comprising forty-two acres.

The commissioners also granted to the New Jersey Central permission to build forty jetties, 200 feet in length, along the Jersey coast from Atlantic Highlands to Seabright to protect its property from destruction by the ocean in times of storm. The company will expend about $200,000.

The commissioners met in the office of the Governor yesterday, and the latter took occasion to personally compliment Newton B. Smalley, a member of the commission for excellent work on behalf of the State. It is a fact not generally known that all money received from the granting of riprarian rights is put out at interest and in the interest is turned over to the State school fund.

It was with considerable satisfaction that Mr. Smalley displayed in the Assembly, yesterday, the check for $175,000 received from the railroad company, as evidence that the Commission which it is now proposed to abolish, is accomplishing some real good for the State and that valuable rights are not given away for nothing.

BUILDING AT ELIZABETH.

C. D. Manning, of Depot Park, this city, has awarded contracts for the erection of a dwelling at Elizabeth. The Apgar Construction Company, of Dunellen, has the carpentry contract, while Firman Gise, also of Dunellen, has the contract for the mason work.

IMPROVING PROPERTY.

Former Overseer-of-the-Poor Alexander Ayers is improving his residence on West Fourth street by the addition of an upper porch and other changes to the exterior. Mr. Ayers recently converted the house into a two-family apartment.

GENERAL REVIVAL OF EMPLOYMENT

Marked Increase in Number of Manufacturing Plant Extensions.

DEVELOPMENT PLANNED

Quick Resumption of Savings Bank Deposits and General Easing of Money for Building and Permanent Loans Reported in Trades.

New York, April 17—Building reports received this week show a marked increase in the number of manufacturing plant extensions for the netire metropolitan district. Automobile, machinery, steel and machine tool plants, refrigerating establishments, ship building, crushing plants, paint and surgical supply establishments are included among the plants having plans on architects' boards for development and extensions. This indicates a more general revival of employment, the quick resumption of savings bank deposits and a general easing of money for building and permanent use.

In the various lines of building material production the week's developments showed an increasing demand seeming emphasizing more than ever the necessity for turning in greater mill capacity to meet current and immediate prospective demand. Almost every masons' material yard from White Plains to New Brunswick is reporting extreme activity and prices close to list based upon quotations ruling in the wholesale New York market and operative on the floor of the Building Material Exchange in the Woolworth building. This shows that building construction is living up to the volume and estimated value of plan filings as indicated by reports of the first quarter of 1915 for the district. Reports for 115 cities in the country as received by report companies show that building is within 2.2 per cent. of normal, whereas, at the first of the year it was 15 per cent. behind and in October of last year, two months after the war started the falling off in prospective building construction in the country was 26.9 per cent.

The increased activity in security buying as shown by the behavior of the New York Stock Exchange reflects the general easement of investment money. Real estate and building interests argue that if there continues to be an influx of gold into this country and trade balance continues in favor of the United States as it has been recently, there will be a quick return to commercial and industrial confidence; collections will be easier and investments will return to a normal basis. The revival of activity on the New York Stock Exchange was responsible for the re-employment in the last week of about 4,300 stenographers and clerks who have been besieging the employment agencies for work and this has been reflected in a sharp curtailment in savings bank withdrawals. Labor union employment is 12 per cent. improved. Consequently banks have more confidence in the financial outlook, and it ought to increase, according to well informed financial interests, as the rate of unemployment decreases.

Western railroads are taking on more help to the number of 2,000 on May 1, and 4,000 additional on June 1. The Central Railroad of New Jersey has had to employ more help to take care of the increasing freight shipments, especially out of the cement districts. The Lackawanna has been taking on men in its western divisions. The U. S. Steel Corporation has taken on more men. Plants like the Saurer-Mack Automobile Company, the Crucible Steel Company of America, the Bethlehem Steel Company and others, are getting ready to accommodate more hands to take care of foreign and domestic business. All this indicates that better times are slowly approaching, even before the building season has had a chance to develop.

National reports of the Portland cement industry, a fair basis upon which to judge the volume of building and municipal and government construction work, show that the demand in all States from Maine to Utah, and from the Gulf to the Great Lakes, show 11 per cent. increase in shipments over the month of March last year with reserve stock ten per cent. less. Here is shown a difference of more than twenty per cent. between demand and supply with more than seventy per cent. of mill capacity actually in operation. At the present indicated rate of demand for Portland cement the country's output this year, if current demand is maintained, will for the first time reach a total production of 100,000,000 barrels. This means employment for cement manufacturing labor on a scale never before known. In 1914 the total production for the country was 87,000,000 barrels.

The price situation for building materials in New York and vicinity still holds at levels that ought to be attractive to prospective builders. There is no material that has shown a serious reaction as a market, although in one or two instances large quantities have been sold at shaded quotations, primarily on accommodation orders. This is particularly true of the common brick market where manufacturers up the Hudson are desirous of obtaining empty barges so as to have them loaded when the spring building requirements develop. Consequently there have been some sacrifice quotations made this week, but the market is still firm and demand brisk, like all other departments of the building material market.

BUILDING OPERATIONS KEEP AT EVEN PACE

Four Permits Issued During Past Week Call for Expenditure of $7,300.

Four building permits, calling for the expenditure of $7,300, and covering the erection of one garage and three alteration jobs, were issued this week by Inspector T. O. Doane. These documents brings the total expenditures for the month up to $58,050.

Small alteration and repair jobs apears to be the predominate feature of the construction movements during the course of the past week or ten days, while a number of larger contracts are in prospect, and will probably be let before the end of the present month.

The permits as issued this week are as noted below:

Second Ward.

John A. Cisco, of 120 Watchung avenue, is to erect a 15x21 hollow terra cotta block garage at the above address at a cost of $850. Marsh & Gette, of New York, are the architects; B. F. Tallamy & Brothers, the mason contractors, and Wyman & Haberle, carpenter contractors.

Third Ward.

Margaret T. Richards, of Madison avenue, has been granted a permit to extensively alter the large frame dwelling at 507 Park avenue. An addition is to be erected to the rear of the building, while the present kitchen is to be carried up to the second floor and attic. The addition, which is to measure 13x19 feet, will have concrete and brick foundation, while the upper walls will be of hollow tile. The front of the building will be changed and the floor plan re-arranged to care for several dentists' suites. The cost has been placed at $4,500. Charles H. Smith, of the borough, is the architect; William H. Dennick, the mason contractor, and George D. Wilson, the carpenter contractor.

S. S. Carvallo, of 400 West Eighth street, has been granted two permits for alterations to as many buildings at the above address. The first permit covers a 19x19 foot addition to a structure containing Mr. Carvallo's art gallery, to cost $450. The extension is to be one story high. George W. Nolte is the carpenter contractor, while Townley Brothers, of the borough, are the mason contractors. Mr. Carvallo is the architect of the improvements.

The second permit calls for the alterations of the roof of the dwelling, making it flat instead of a peak. This will cost $15,00. Mr. Nolte has the contract for this work.

REALTY TRANSFERS

The following realty transfers from this end of the county have recently been filed at the office of County Register Frank H. Smith, at Elizabeth:

IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN.

Work has been started on the foundation of a new house to be built by Contractor Herman B. Eckert on his land on Third street west of Washington avenue. The new house will be in keeping with the excellent type of structure that Mr. Eckert has been building in that section.

The joint ownership of Henry Wrage and Arthur J. Hamley in the former Doty house on North avenue has been dissolved and Mr. Wrage bought out the interests of his former partner.

The Apgar Construction Company has been awarded the contract of erecting a house for Lloyd Williams on Dunellen avenue between the homes of T. W. Day and John R. Doty. Contractor Firman H. Gise has been awarded the contract.

Contractor Charles Wrage is erecting a meeting pavilion for T. Walter Sisty at Wa side Park. The pavilion is to be 34 feet wide and 36 feet long. The price is $600.

The Apgar Construction Company is erecting a garage for C. T. Voorhees in the rear of his residence on Lincoln avenue.

Borough Engineer Churchill surveyed ten lots for the Watchung Investment Company on Penfield place last week.

LINCOLN.

Contractor Charles Wrage has been awarded the contract of erecting a bungalow for a New York party here.

COUNTY BUILDING WORK APPEARS TO BE ON INCREASE

Reports from various parts of the county in regards to building operations appear to indicate that construction operations in this vicinity are picking up at a rate which is surprising, even to the most enthusiastic contractors. During the week ending last Saturday, thirteen building contracts were filed with County Clerk James C. Calvert, calling for the expenditure of $32,571.

But one contract was filed from this end of the county as follows:

Alfonso Cioci with Guilio Donato, entire work new building, West Third street, Plainfield, $2,800.

The permit for this structure was issued by Inspector T. O. Doane last week.

—Jacob Gernert, newsdealer, Somerville, sells the Daily Press or will deliver it to your home each day.

The Week's Work In Brief

Uncover tender roses completely as the weather grows warmer and finish pruning. Spray all roses with Bordeaux mixture.

Set out new tender roses.

As rapidly as possible dig in deeply what remains of the winter mulch on perennial and shrub borders and around vines.

Plant potatoes.

Set outdoors the seedlings of cauliflower.

Sow salsify and parsley in the vegetable garden, annual larkspur in the flower garden.

TENDER roses, as the winter protection is gradually removed, should be pruned, cutting out, first, all wood that has been winter killed. Cut back always to a point one-half-inch above an outside bud. The plants that develop weakly and slowly should have no more than five inches of wood left on the root—the strongest growing sorts about ten inches. Pruning in this way insures quality rather than quantity of bloom. If more numerous flowers, smaller in size and on shorter stems are wanted, prune less severely, but, even in this case, cut away at least half of the old wood. The Bourbons, such as Malmaison, are exceptions; they bloom on old wood which, accordingly, should be only slightly shortened back. The severe pruning, it may be well to remember, is best in the long run for the plant. Hybrid teas generally demand the hardest pruning while the moss and Provence groups require the least.

Varieties of hybrid teas are numerous—more than 150, in all—but the list of the best and most reliable includes the following ten: Caroline Testout, Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Antoine Revoire (or Mrs. Taft), La France, Madame Edouard Herriot, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Gruss an Teplitz, Mme. Abel Chatenay and Etoile de France. In setting these out, prune back more severely, if the plants are dormant, than in the case of those already established. If pot-grown stock is purchased, the pruning may be very light or deferred this first season entirely. Be sure, if the roses are grafted, to set them so that the point of graft will be not less than two inches and not more than three inches below the surface of the soil. It is important—essential, in fact—to pack the soil firmly about the roots.

A class of roses too seldom planted and yet deserving of the widest cultivation, splendidly adapted for the small yard, easily raised, hardy, vigorous and almost constantly in bloom are the baby ramblers. These attain a height of no more than eighteen or twenty inches, make thick, bushy plants, are fairly immune from disease and not much affected by insect attack. Among the best in the group are Orleans (pink), Perle d'Or (yellow), Madame N. Lavavasseur (crimson) and Catherine Zeinot (white).

Finish cleaning up the shrubbery and perennial borders by digging in what remains of the winter mulch. March winds probably have scattered a good deal of it, but what still lies on the soil should be dug in deeply to add to the store of humus in the ground.

In the vegetable garden, plant potatoes, selecting the earliest varieties. Unless the space available for cultivation is considerable, however, the ground can be used more profitably by planting other vegetable crops. To prevent scab, add eight fluid ounces of formail to fifteen gallons of water, and soak the potatoes, after cutting, for two hours in this solution. The tubers require a deep, moderately rich loam. Cut them into pieces the size of hen eggs, each with at least three eyes, and plant four inches deep, eighteen inches apart in rows 24 inches apart where hand cultivation is to be employed, or three feet apart if horse cultivation is to be followed.

Cauliflower grown indoors and gradually hardened off may be set out where it is to mature. A rich soil is required, but the use of fresh manure is to be avoided. The rows should be two feet apart and the plants fifteen inches apart in the rows. Some of the larger growing varieties will require greater space. If frost threatens—or any other plants already set out—cover with newspapers or light cloth. Within a week after transplanting, give them a dressing of nitrate of soda at the rate of half a teaspoonful distributed to each plant, well scattered on the surface. Never let the nitrate of soda come into contact with the foliage of any of the plants fed with it.

The curled leaved varieties of parsley are the best. Sow in drills one-half-inch deep and 15 inches apart. Thin to six inches apart in the rows. Salsify, or oyster plant, requires the entire season for maturing. Plant in rows one-inch deep and 15 inches apart and thin to six inches apart in the rows. Radishes may be sown between the rows, or lettuce seedlings used in the same way. Both will mature and be out of the way before the oyster plant will crowd them. Oyster plant, it may be well to mention, can remain in the ground all winter and be dug up and eaten the following spring.

One of the best annuals is larkspure (delphinium). The beautiful spikes of bloom are exceedingly graceful and effective. Sow the seed one-fourth-inch deep; thin the seedlings to six inches apart.

CHAPTER XXIII.

I Speed the Parting Guest.

FOUR o'clock in the morning is a graceless hour. Graveyards may yawn at 12, but even they are content to slumber at 4. I don't believe there is anything so desolate in this world as the mental perspective one obtains at 4 o'clock. Tombstones are bright beacons of cheer as compared to the monumental regret one experiences on getting up to greet the alleged and vastly overrated glories of a budding day. The sunrise is a pall. It is a deadly, dour thing. It may be pink and red and golden and full of all the splenders of the east, but it is a resurrection, and you can't make anything else out of it. Staying up till 4 and then going to bed gives one an idea of the sunrise that is not supported by the facts. There is but one way to appreciate the real nature of the hateful thing called dawn, and that is to get up with it instead of taking it to bed with you.

Still, I suppose the sun has to come up, and perhaps it is just as well that it does so at an hour when people are least likely to suspect it of anything so shabby.

Four o'clock is more than a graceless, sodden hour when it ushers in a day that you know is to be the unhappiest in your life; when you know that you are to say farewell forever to the hopes begot and nurtured in other days; when the one you love smiles and goes away to smile again, but not for you. And that is just what 4 o'clock on the morning of the 14th of September meant to me.

Britton and I set forth in the automobile just at the break of dawn, crossing the river a few miles below the castle and running back to a point on the right hand bank where we were to await the arrival of the boat conveying the countess and her escort. Her luggage, carefully disguised as crated merchandise, had gone to Trieste by fast express a couple of days before, sent in my name and consigned to a gentleman whose name I do not now recall, but who in reality served as a sort of middleman in transferring the shipment to the custody of a certain yacht's commander.

It was required of me—and of my machine, which is more to the point—that the distance of 120 miles through the foothills of the Austrian Alps should be covered and the passengers delivered at a certain railway station fifty miles or more south of Vienna before 10 o'clock that night. There they were to catch a train for the little seaport on the upper Adriatic, the name of which I was sworn never to reveal, and, as I have not considered it worth while to be released from that oath, I am of necessity compelled to omit the mention of it here.

Mr. Bangs went on to Vienna the night before our departure, taking with him Helene Marie Louise Antoinette, a rather shocking arrangement, you would say, unless you had come to know the British lawyer as well as we knew him. They were to proceed by the early morning train to this obscure seaport. Colingraft Titus elected to accompany his sister the entire length of the journey, with the faithful Blake and Rosemary.

Billy Smith was to meet us a few miles outside the town for which we were bound, with a word of warning if there was anything sinister in the wind.

I heard afterward from Poopendyke that the departure of the countess and Rosemary from the castle in the gray, forlorn dawn of that historic 14th was attended by a demonstration of grief on the part of the four Schmicks that was far beyond his powers of description, and he possesses a wonderful ability to describe lachrymose situations, rather running to that style of incident, I may say. The elder Schmicks wailed and boohooed and proclaimed to the topmost turrets that the sun would never shine again for either of them, and to prove that she was quite in earnest about the matter Gretel fell off the dock into the river and was nearly drowned before Jasper junior could dive in and get her. Their sons, both of whom cherished amorous feelings for Blake, sighed so prodigiously all the way down the river that the boat rocked. Incidentally during the excitement Jinko, who was to remain behind and journey westward later on with Mrs. Titus and Jasper junior, succeeded after weeks of vain endeavor in smartly nipping the calf of Hawkes' left leg, a feat of which he no doubt was proud, but which sentenced my impressive butler to an everlasting dread of hydrophobia and a temporary limp.

It was nearly 5 o'clock when the boat slipped into view around the tree covered point of land and headed straight for our hiding place on the bank.

I shall not stop here to describe the first stage of our journey through the narrow, rocky byroads, that ended eventually in the broad alpine highway south and west of Vienna. Let it be sufficient to say that we jostled along for twelve or fifteen miles without special incident, although we were nervously anxious and apprehensive. Our guidebook pointed, or rather twiddled, a route from the river flats into the hills, where we came up with the main road about 8 o'clock.

We were wrapped and goggled to the verge of ludicrousness. It would have been quite impossible to penetrate our motor masks and armor even for one possessed of a keen and practiced eye. The countess was heavily veiled. Grea goggles bulged beneath the green, gauzy thing that protected her lovely face from sun, wind and man. A motor coat two or three sizes too large enveloped her slender, graceful figure, and gauntlets covered her hands. Even Rosemary's tiny face was wrapped in a silken veil of white. As for the rest of us, we could not have been mistaken for anything on earth but American automobilists ruthlessly inspired to see Europe with the sole view to comparing her roads with our own at home. You would have said on seeing us that we knew a great deal about roads and very little about home.

Colingraft and Britton, the latter at the wheel, sat in the front seat, while I shared the broad cushions of the tonneau with the countess, part of the time holding Rosemary, who was clamoring for food, and the rest of the time holding my breath in the fear that we might slip over a precipice. I am always nervous when not driving the car myself.

We stopped for breakfast at a small mountain inn fifteen miles from our starting place. The countess, a faint red spot in each cheek and a curiously bright, feverish glow in her dark eyes, revealed a tendency to monopolize the conversation, a condition properly attributed to nervous excitement. I could see that she was vastly thrilled by the experiences of the hour. Her quick, alert brain was keeping pace with the rush of blood that stimulated every fibel in her body to new activities. She talked, almost incessantly and chiefly about matters entirely foreign to the enterprise in hand. The more I see of women the less I know about them. Why she should have spent the whole half hour devoted to breakfast to a surprisingly innocuous dissertation on Schopenhauer and Nietzsche is, or was, beyond me.

How was I to know that tears lay close to the surface of those shimmering, vivacious eyes? How was I to know that sobs took refuge behind a simulated interest in philosophy?

We had luncheon picnic fashion halfway to our journey's end, diverging from the main road to find a secluded spot where we could spread our cloth and open our hampers without fear of interruption or, to use a more sinister word, detection. It was rather a jolly affair, that first and last al fresco banquet of ours under the spreading branches of mighty trees and beside the trickling waters of a gay little mountain brook that hurried like mad down to the broad channel of the Danube, now many miles away. The strain of the first few hours had slackened. Success seemed assured. We had encountered no difficulties, no dangers in town or country. No one appeared to be interested in us except through idle curiosity; villagers and peasants stared at us and grinned; policemen and soldiers stood aside to let us pass or gave directions politely when requested to do so. There were no signs of pursuit, no indications of trouble ahead. And so we could afford to be gay and confident at our midday meal in the hills bordering the broad highway.

We even went so far as to arrange for a jolly reunion in New York city at no distant day! I remember distinctly that we were to dine at Sherry's. To me the day seemed a long way off.

I suppose, being a writer of fiction, I should be able to supply at this point in the narrative a series of thrilling, perhaps hair raising, encounters with the enemy in the form of spies, cutthroats, imperial mercenaries or whatever came handiest to the imagination. It would be a very simple matter to transform this veracious history into the most lurid of melodramas by the introduction of the false and bizarre, but it is not my purpose to do so. I mean to adhere strictly to the truth and stand by the consequences. Were I inclined to sensationalism it would be no trouble at all for me to have Tarnowsy's agents shooting at our tires or gasoline tank from every crag and cranny or to have Rosemary kidnaped by aeroplanists supplied with drag hooks or to have the countess lodged in a village prison, from which I should be obliged to liberate her with battleax and six shooter, my compensation being a joyous rest in a hospital with the fair Aline nursing me back to health and strength and cooing fond words in my rapacious ear the while I reflected on the noble endowments of a nature that heretofore had been commonplace and meek. But no! None of these things happened, and I decline to perjure myself for the privilege of getting into the list of "six best sellers."

So far as I am able to judge there was absolutely no heroism displayed during our flight through the hills and valleys unless you are willing to accept as such a single dash of sixty miles an hour which Britton made in order to avoid a rain shower that threatened to flank us if we observed the speed laws.

But wait! There was an example of bravado on my part that shall not go unrecorded. I hesitated at first to put it down in writing, but my sense of honor urges me to confess everything. It happened just after that memorable picnic luncheon in the shady dell. The countess, I maintain, was somewhat to blame for the incident. She suggested that we—that is to say, the two of us—explore the upper recesses of this picturesque spot, while the others were making ready for the resumption of our journey.

Shame, contrition, humiliation or whatever you may elect to call it, forbids a lengthy or even apologetic explanation of what followed her unfortunate suggestion. I shall get over with it in as few words as possible.

In the most obscure spot in all those ancient hills I succumbed to an execrable impulse to take her forcibly in my arms and kiss her! I don't know why I did it or how, but that is just what happened. My shame, my horror over the transcendental folly was made almost unbearable by the way in which she took it. At first I thought she had swooned, she lay so limp and unresisting in my arms. My only excuse, whispered penitently in her ear, was that I couldn't help doing what I had done and that I deserved to be drawn and quartered for taking advantage of my superior strength and her gentle forbearance. Strange to say, she merely looked at me in a sort of dumb wonder and quietly released herself, still staring at me as if I were the most inexplicable puzzle in the world. Her cheeks, her throat, her brow grew warm and pink with a just indignation. Her lips parted, but she uttered no word. Then I followed her dejectedly, cravenly back to the roadside and executed an inward curse that would hang over my miserable head so long as it was on my shoulders.

Her vivacity was gone. She shrank down into the corner of the seat, and, with her back half turned toward me, gazed steadfastly at the panoramic valley which we were skirting. From time to time I glanced at her out of the corners of my eyes, and eventually was somewhat relieved to see that she had closed her own and was dozing. My soul was in despair. She loathed despised me. I could not blame her. I despised myself.

And yet my heart quickened every time I allowed myself to think of the act I had committed.

The day was a glorious one and the road more than passably good. We bowled along at a steady rate of speed and sundown found us about twenty-five miles from our destination. Not caring to run the risk of a prolonged stay in the town, we drew up at a roadside inn and had our dinner in the quaint little garden, afterward proceeding leisurely by moonlight down the sloping highway.

Billy Smith met us six or eight miles out, and we stopped to parley. He examined the countess' skillfully prepared passports, pronounced them genuine and then gave us the cheerful news that "everything was lovely and the goose hung high." The train for the coast was due to leave the Staatsbahnhof at 10:05, and we had an hour to spare. He proposed that we spend it quite comfortably at the roadside while Britton went through the pretense of repairing our tires. This seemed an agreeable arrangement for every one but Britton, who looked so glum that I, glad of the excuse, offered to help him.

"Say that you forgive me."

No sooner was I out of the car and Billy Smith in my place beside the countess than she became quite gay and vivacious once more. She laughed and chatted with him in a manner that promptly convinced me that propinquity so far as I was concerned had had a most depressing effect upon her and that she reveled in the change of companions.

I was so disturbed by the discovery that Britton had to caution me several times to handle the inner tubes less roughly or I would damage them and we might suffer a blowout after all.

Every one appeared to be gay and frivolous, even Blake, who chattered sotto voce with Britton, that excellent rascal spending most of his time leaning against the spare tires in order to catch what she was saying for his benefit. All efforts to draw me into the general conversation were unavailing. I was as morose and unresponsive as an Egyptian mummy, and for a very excellent reason, I submit. The countess deliberately refused to address a single remark to me. Indeed, when I seemed perilously near to being drawn into the conversation she relapsed into a silence that was most forbidding. My cup of misery was overflowing.

I wondered if she would feel called upon at some distant confessional to tell the fortunate Lord Amberdale that I had brutally kissed her. And Lord Amberdale would grin in his beastly supercilious English way and say, "What else could you have expected from a bally American bounder?" She would no doubt smile indulgently.

All things come to an end, however. We found ourselves at last uttering our goodbys in the railway station, surrounded by hurrying travelers and attended by eager porters.

The countess did not lift her veil. I deliberately drew her aside. My hot hand clasped hers and found it as cold as ice and trembling.

"For God's sake," I whispered hoarsely in my humbleness, "say that you forgive me!"

She did not speak for many seconds. Then her voice was very low and tremulous. I felt that her somber eyes were accusing me even as they tried to meet my own with a steadiness that was meant to be reassuring.

"Of course I forgive you," she said. "You have been so good to me."

"Good!" I cried bitterly. "I've been harsh, unreasoning, supercritical from the day I met"—

"Hush!" she said, laying her free hand upon my arm. "I shall never forget all that you have done for me. I—I can say no more."

I gulped. "I pray to heaven that you may be happy, Aline—happier than any one else in the world."

She lowered her head suddenly, and I was made more miserable than before by hearing a quick, half suppressed sob. Then she withdrew her cold little hand and turned away to follow Colingraft, who had called out to her.

Runaway June

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

SYNOPSIS.

June, the bride of Ned Warner, impulsively leaves her husband on their honeymoon because she begins to realize that she must be entirely dependent on him for money. She desires to be independent.

June is pursued by Gilbert Blye, a wealthy married man. She escapes from his clutches with difficulty. Ned searches distractedly for June, and, learning of Blye's designs, vows vengeance on him. After many adventures June is rescued from river pirates by Durban, an artist, who uses her as a model for "The Spirit of the Marsh." Mrs. Durban becomes jealous and drives June out. She is kidnaped by Blye and Cunningham.

June is taken by Blye to the boarding house of Mrs. Russel. She escapes, gets a job sewing and engages a cheap room in a tenement. The failure of another woman's attempt to be independent and a home maker opens June's eyes. Blye finds June in the tenement.

FIFTEENTH EPISODE.

"At Last, My Love!"

CHAPTER I.

AT the moment that Blye met June Ned Warner was springing up the stairs, his jaws set and his fists clinched.

It was thus that Ned Warner had, after all his weary pursuit, found his bride—in the presence of Gilbert Blye! Behind Ned came the runaway June Warner's stern faced father and gentle faced mother; came Iris Blethering, June's bosom friend; Bobbie Blethering, husband of Iris; came Marie, June's high cheek boned maid, with her friend and admirer, Officer Dowd; came fat old black Aunt Debby, panting and out of breath and shrieking for her Miss Junie; came that handsome and energetic collie, Bouncer, leaping and barking and encouraging the excitement with all his canine might.

For only an instant Ned Warner stood nonplused before the door of the room; then he seized a chair, and, striding to the door, he swung the chair, while the others of the little throng, which had piled in after him, fell back.

Beyond the door the dark, handsome man with the black Vandyke had led the beautiful little runaway bride to a heavy man with thick lidded eyes and a round head bristling with short hair. He sat in a chair, and in his hands was money. He rose as June was led up to him, and into her hands he thrust the money. Then he smiled at her, while Gilbert Blye stepped back, suavely smiling and stroking his black Vandyke with his long, lean white fingers.

June shrank from the fat hands which were about to be clasped upon her shoulders and from that wide, thick smile upon the face of the heavy man and, laughing nervously, turned to Gilbert Blye, who bent his dark, handsome head above her and spoke to her in his low voice.

Crash!

The door splintered and gave way, and through it burst the wild eyed Ned Warner, his jaw set and his fists clinched. For a second he stood bewildered by the strange light which flooded this large room; then, with an oath, he sprang for the black Vandyked man. He clutched his fingers around the throat and, with a savage roar, bore Gilbert Blye to the floor. The runaway bride uttered shriek after shriek.

At the door downstairs there stopped an electric coupe, driven by a sharp featured woman with a long nose and high arched brows. She jumped out, and from the dim hallway there came a short, thick man with a short, thick stub of a cigar in one corner of his mouth. It was the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf.

"Got him, Mrs. Blye!" he triumphantly husked. "Your husband is right upstairs—with the girl!"

"The viper!" hissed Honoria Blye and dashed into the dim hallway.

Bill Wolf caught her as she started up the stairs.

"Not so fast, madam!" he called and laid hold of her arm. "This way, please."

"But my husband! The girl, June!"

"They're here all right, and they can't get away. Here's your pictures, ma'am, and here's your bill."

He handed her a large roll of paper and two photographs, one of Gilbert Blye and one of June Warner.

Upstairs there was a scene of wild confusion. The runaway bride, her mother, Iris Blethering and the vivacious Tommy Thomas were screaming in hysteria, while the heavy man with the thick eyelids and the man with the white mustache and Bobbie Blethering and half a dozen other men rushed upon the fiercely struggling men on the floor.

"My husband!" shrieked June. "My husband!" And she ran around and around the excited pack of scrambling men, followed by the leaping, barking Bouncer.

Into this tumultuous scene there rushed Marie and Officer Dowd and fat old black Aunt Debby just as Bobbie by main strength dragged from Gilbert Blye the maddened assailant who had sprung upon him.

Gilbert Blye rose feeling of his throat, and for a moment he contemplated Ned Warner with dazed bewilderment; then a flush of anger came into his cheeks, and his black eyes blazed.

"Let him go!" he yelled, and, thrusting the heavy Edwards out of his way, he made a mad rush for the man who had attempted to strangle him.

It was huge Officer Dowd who this time jumped in between the two furious combatants and, with the aid of half a dozen young men, prevented the desperate encounter which would have ensued.

"My husband!" sobbed June and tried to throw herself upon him, but he turned from her. "Ned! Mr. Blye!"

A hand was laid upon Ned's arm—Iris Blethering's. She had forced her way through the excited throng.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Dick had not come to the farm to spend Sunday with Nell, but had sent a letter of explanation. It read:

"Dear Little Wife: I may not be able to get away in time to catch the noon train tomorrow, but be sure I shall come as soon as possible. You see, Miss Rudolph is going away on her vacation next week and there is quite a good deal of work to finish up. I send this fearing I cannot make it. Lovingly,

"Dick."

"It's always Miss Rudolph in some form," thought Nell bitterly. "As she is going away perhaps he wanted Saturday and Sunday with her."

Nell knew they were never seen together now. Dick had had a talk with her, had explained that his care for her good name would not permit him to be seen with her, and they were better friends than ever. Nell would never have consented to come to the farm if she had not thought Miss Rudolph was to leave the same week. Then her vacation was suddenly postponed, and now Dick had missed his train.

"Come to supper, daughter," called Father Morton, outside her door.

"Please excuse me tonight. I am not hungry, father dear," called Nell, feeling utterly unable to face anyone.

"Dick is not sick, eh?" asked the old man kindly.

"No; just too busy to get away," she answered.

She sat down by the open window and dropped her head on her arm. This was their first separation and she had counted the days till Saturday, never dreaming that Dick could fail to come.

"He could have come if he had wanted to. He planned to miss the train," she sobbed. "He doesn't care if he could do this when I am far from well, when we have been married so short a time. What can the future hold for me but the place of an unloved wife, living a humdrum life, with no love's wages for my work?" She thought of all the married people she knew and decided that most of the wives were doing just that.

"Here's a cup of tea, Nell. You drink it, and eat this toast. You'll feel better. I want Richard to think we've taken good care of you when he comes." Mrs. Morton set the tray down on the table by the window. It had been daintily prepared.

"Oh, I didn't want you to go to all this trouble, mother dear. I really wasn't hungry."

"Now you aren't going to mope, are you?" The old lady bent anxiously over Nell and peered into her face for signs of tears. Richard will come next week."

Nell forced a smile and Mrs. Morton bustled from the room.

"Next week," Nell repeated. How can I wait till then?"

The family went early to bed. Nell could not sleep, but sat by the window looking out over the moonlit meadows, dry, flat and uninteresting, and her life stretched before her equally dreary and colorless. The clock in the sitting room struck ten in solemn tones.

Someone was walking up the drive with a handbag. It was Dick! She rushed out to meet him.

"Oh, Dick, I needed you so desperately," she almost sobbed as he caught her in his strong young arms.

"How did you get here?" she asked as they walked over the sear grass to the porch. "Father met the last train."

"I caught the Junction train and walked over."

"Six miles!" she exclaimed, stopping in front of him, in amazement.

"I'd walk much farther than that to be with you over Sunday," he answered, drawing her to him.

Household Hints

A NEW SANDWICH

Prune and Nut Sandwich—One lemon, pinch salt, one-half pound stewed prunes, one cup chopped nut meats.

Slice bread and cut with fancy cutter. Rub prunes through sieve, add salt, nut meats and strained lemon juice. Mix and spread on bread and place two slices together.

SOME TOOTHSOME DESSERTS

Novelty Dessert—Bake shells of rich puff paste. Fill when done with butterscotch filling, cover with meringue made of the whites of two eggs, set in oven until a golden brown. Cool. When ready to serve lay the rings of gelatin on, fill center with maple mousse or plain ice cream. Strew top with crumbled pecan rolls. Serve with two cream wafers on side of plate. This is a delicious as well as an elaborate looking dessert. It sounds complicated, but in reality is very simple to prepare. Especially when wanted for a Sunday dinner, as the shells and the gelatin rings can be prepared the day before. Always keep a tin of pecan rolls on the emergency shelf.

Gelatin Rings—Ring molds can be purchased at a nickel and dime store. Soak two tablespoons of gelatin in cold water; add two cups of boiling water, one cup sugar, grated rind and juice of one lemon; fruits of all sorts may be added. Put in molds and chill.

Maple Mousse—Yolks of two eggs well beaten, small cup of maple syrup, stir over the fire until boiling, add eggs; when cool add quart of whipped cream. Freeze twenty minutes.

Baked Alaska—As many individual slices of ice cream as there are persons to be served; an equal number of slightly larger slices of angel food or sponge cake, a meringue made of the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs and six tablespoons of powdered sugar. Cover a board with white paper, lay on it the slices of cake, place a slice of ice cream upon each slice of cake, sprinkle with chopped nuts, entirely cover the ice cream with meringue and brown quickly in a hot oven. As the board, paper, cake and meringue are poor conductors of heat, they prevent the cream melting. This is equally as satisfactorily made with a brick of ice cream and large sheets of cake.

Washington Fruit Ice Cream—Take two dozen sweet and half a dozen bitter almonds; blanch in scalding water, throw into a bowl of cold water; pound one at a time in a mortar till they become a smooth paste free from the smallest lumps; add frequently a few drops of rosewater or lemon juice to make them light and prevent "oiling." Seed and cut a quarter pound of best bloom raisins; mix with them a quarter pound of currants, picked, washed and dried, and three ounces of chopped citron; dredge well with flour. Take a half pint of very rich milk, split a vanilla beat, cut it into pieces two or three inches long, and boil it in the milk till the flavor of the vanilla is well extracted, then strain it out and mix the vanilla milk with a pint of rich cream and stir in gradually a half pound of powdered loaf sugar and a nutmeg grated. Then add pounded almonds and a large wineglass of the very best brandy. Beat in a shallow pan the yolks of eight eggs till very light, thick and smooth, and stir them gradually into the mixture. Simmer over the fire (stirring all the time), but take off just before it boils, otherwise it will curdle. At once stir in the fruit, set to cool, and then add a large teacup preserved strawberries or raspberries, half a dozen preserved apricots or peaches, half a dozen green limes and any other very nice and delicate sweetmeats; add a pint whipped cream lightly to the mixture; put the whole in the center, freeze four hours in the usual way. Turn out when wanted on a glass dish.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Animal School.

On the last day of school in Animal Town
The children sing songs and recite
The pieces they've learned, and their parents
Applaud with the greatest delight.

Last time they did this 'twas a splendid affair;
The parents came dressed in their best
And all of the children behaved very well
And went through the program with zest.

"Before we speak pieces," said Schoolmaster
As he rapped on his desk with a stick,
"We'll just show your parents how wonderfully
You manage Arithmetic

"Give me the right answer," said Schoolmaster
"How many are thirteen and two?"
Then Adeline Adder said, "Fifteen!" right quick,
And Professor Crab said, "Very true."

"And now we'll have Mew-sic by Caroline Remarked the Professor, "and then
You will be entertained by a beautiful lay,
To be rendered by Harriet Hen."

And when this was over young Daniel Dog read
Some splendid original verse;
His proud friends remarked, "It was good doggerel,
We've really heard very much worse."

There were many more things that those Animals
That I haven't time to repeat,
And to finish the program, Professor Crab gave
The Animal children a treat.

Then finally the parents and children went home,
And Professor Crab shook his old head.
"Though they are a handful, I'll really be glad When they come back next year," he said

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

WHAT CAN VOTES DO?

"Votes can right no wrong and solve no problems until a way has been thought out by means of which these things can be accomplished," admits Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, head of International Suffrage Alliance. Then what we need are ideas, not "votes for women—and, as Napoleon said, "you cannot out-number a brain," we must find a way to right wrongs and solve problems before any number of votes can achieve progress. The comparison of laws shows that the way for women is the quiet, dignified, womanly, non-partisan influence along moral and educational lines by which she has, according to suffragists themselves, achieved everything, "if the franchise were omitted." With the vote she has accomplished nothing not accorded her without the vote except a certain notoriety in partisan politics.

According to suffragists, woman's political choice is needed in every activity of life—except that of deciding whether she shall become a voter or not. Here, though admittedly "the majority of women do not want to vote," we are told "they ought to want to!" Why, merely to play with politics? Women should be divided and counted at the polls on every legislative fad that occurs, according to the feminists, and a majority of one would be as good as a majority of a million. If they get the vote—but the women of the 90 per cent. who choose to stay out of politics must not be considered, according to suffrage logic. They should stand aside—and let the feminists misrepresent them in politics. On the same principle the one million men who want Socialism in this country ought to make the 25 million who do not want it accept it anyhow, so that the Socialists can try out the "co-operative commonwealth." "Votes for women" is the same sort of a proposition—its enthusiasts have the same percentage approval among women as Socialism has among men—4 per cent.—and these twin agitations are active allies!

SOCIALISM AND WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

1848—Socialism formulated by Carl Marx.
"Votes for women" demanded at Seneca Falls.

1914—Suffrage National Convention in Nashville, Tenn., met Sunday afternoon—male politicians don't have mass meetings on Sunday—November 15, where Socialists turned out in force with two banners inscribed, "Every Socialist is a Suffragist" and "Two Million Socialists Will Vote in 1916." Banners brought in and placed in honor at rear of auditorium throughout meeting—attended by 316 delegates of 53 American suffrage associations.

1914—National Suffrage Convention chooses May 1, Socialists Day, for Suffrage Day, 1915, in spite of protest of only one delegate, by unanimous vote.

National American Woman Suffrage Association carries standing advertisement appealing for Socialist support in the "Masses," the "Revolutionary Magazine," publishers of "God's Blunder," apologists for convicted I. W. W. rioters, and pleaders for the "final goal of feminism," as set forth in the "Woman Rebel," whose editor, a woman, was imprisioned by Federal authorities for teaching sex subjects not allowed in the mails. The Woman Rebel until suppressed bore the motto: "No Gods, No Masters," which got the enthusiastic endorsement of the first secretary of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage—who, of course, is a Socialist.

It does not take an astute anti-suffragist to see danger under these circumstances. A body of hysterical women who have shown themselves regardless of the value of priceless treasures and the law of the land in England (and 112 American suffrage associations cabled support to the Pankhurst militants at the height of their outrages)—misled by another body of heedless men, who have shown themselves regardless of the rights of private productive property, and who have advocated soldiers shooting their officers in the back under cover of darkness—might plunge this nation into a Sex War and Social War not even equalled by the navalism and militarism of Europe—which has the merit of system, at least, in its destruction.

Nations can survive wars—no nation ever survived a decadent womanhood. "A salient point in the handling of the woman suffrage question in the last 65 years has been the vulgarizing of the woman it sought to dignify."—Ida M. Tarbell, "America's greatest woman journalist."—Selected by

NEW MATERIALS ARE STRIPED AND FLOWERED.

After having enjoyed an era of rather plain materials, it is refreshing to see the new summer silks and cottons heavily striped and figured. In the latter case considerable art must be used in making up the fabric so as to use the stripes in a matter at once decorative and conservative. This has been done with excellent effect in Ladies' Home Journal Patterns No. 8873 and 8874, where the two-piece foundation skirt is cut with the stripes running vertically, while the two-piece straight tunic, which is attached at the hips on a curved line to give the smart circular flare, is cut exactly on the cross grain of the goods. If, however, the wearer is a short woman, these tunic sections can be cut on the same grain as the skirt without detracting from the effectiveness of the gown. The blouse, which can be made with full-length or shorter sleeves, has a shawl collar, a deep girdle and a plaited chemisettes, with a collar that can be turned back or worn close to the throat. Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 872 8cuts in sizes 32 to 42 inches bust measure, and Ladies' Home Journal skirt pattern No. 8874 in sizes 22 to 30 inches waist measure. Dress in medium size requires 6¾ yards 36-inch material, with ¾ yard 36-inch satin and ½ yard 36-inch lawn for chemisette.

The original dress of Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8878 showed very clearly that the costumes of the Empress Eugenie was its inspiration, for it has the long pointed bodice that was so becoming to the Empress, and under its long flaring tunic was a veritable hoop skirt. This will develop well in flowered taffeta, with yoke of soft lace and trimmings of heavy net. The pattern cuts in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure, requiring in size 36, as illustrated, 4¼ yards 36-inch silk, with 4 yards 42-inch net, ⅝ yard 27-inch allover lace and 6½ yards lace edging or footing.

Patterns can be secured at the store of A. E. Force & Co.

A COAT FOR TRAVELING.

Just the sort of coat for traveling and general wear this spring is this coat of light weight worsted fabric which has the merit of covering the frock beneath entirely. The coat is tan in shade, with a checked pattern in light brown. Its lines are exceedingly graceful, pleats below the low-placed belt, giving a smart flare at the edge of the garment. Pleats are also introduced at the side, near the front.

DR. CAIRNS TO SPEAK.

He will speak in the interests of the league which he represents. At the evening service the pastor will take for his subject "The Moral Effect of a Holiday Sunday."

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

The Advice of This Plainfield Woman Is of Certain Value.

Many a woman's back has many aches and pains.

Oftimes 'tis the kidneys' fault.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

Many Plainfield women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, says: "I endured much misery from backache, caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all and in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain on my back made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians, but their medicine didn't help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Drug Store, that I had any hope of getting rid of the trouble. They made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Moore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples Are Impurities Seeking an Outlet Through Skin Pores.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.—Adv.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.—Adv.

Hugest and Most Marvelous of All Universal Expositions Meets With Record Breaking Attendance

BEAUTIFUL STATE BUILDINGS ON THE AVENUE OF STATES AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION

Along this great thoroughfare are to be found some of the finest of the state buildings and the foreign pavilions at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco. A part of the great crowd which overflowed the Canadian pavilion upon the day of its dedication is shown. In the background, reading from right to left, are: The New York City building, which is the first city building ever to have been erected in any exposition and which contains a wonderful display of New York articles; the beautiful Illinois building, in which is the finest collection of Lincoln memorabilia; (in the background) the Virginia building, which is a reproduction of Mount Vernon, President George Washington's home and which contains many of the objects formerly in Mount Vernon; the Ohio building, in which historical and interesting displays form a prominent part. The Utah building shows the real progressiveness of the state. It is filled with exhibits showing the many activities of the state. The Washington State building is one of the most beautiful of all the state buildings. It is large, and many of the interesting relics connected with its early history are shown.

VAST and exquisite exhibit palaces filled with displays and priceless masterpieces garnered from all portions of the globe are to be found at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. The tremendous attendance at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco every day since it opened has known no equal at any former world's celebration. A half million human eyes beheld the Exposition on the first day of its completed splendors on Feb. 20. The attendance since that time has known no cessation. Special trains from all parts of the United States and Canada are bringing throngs to this largest and most beautiful Exposition of all times. Steamers crowded with excursionists are passing through the Golden Gate to the Exposition City on San Francisco bay.

The photographs on this page show but a few of the more than fifty state and foreign buildings, in which are to be found the rarest and most beautiful art and utility products of the universe. A visit in San Francisco will be like a tour of the whole world for the Exposition is so large that there is plenty to interest every one. The Panama-Pacific International Exposition will probably be the last of the great expositions of the present generation.

In its beauty, comprehensiveness, magnitude and the attractions of its special events, which touch upon every phase of human activity, it surpasses any exposition that the world has ever known.

SUDDEN DEATH OF E. H. MUMFORD

Well Known Inventor Passes Away at His Home on Compton Avenue.

ILL BUT A FEW DAYS

Deceased Was Born at Groton, Mass., the Son of Rev. Thomas J. Mumford, a Unitarian Minister—Leaves Wife and Four Children.

Edgar H. Mumford, aged 53 years, a well-known resident of this city since 1892, died yesterday at his home, 27 Compton avenue, following an illness of a few days with stomach and other troubles. Prior to this illness he had always enjoyed excellent health and his death was a shock to many friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Mumford was born at Groton, Mass., September 20, 1862, being the son of the Rev. Thomas J. Mumford, a Unitarian minister and for many years editor of the Christian Register, of Boston. He spent his early life at Groton, Dorchester, Mass., and vicinity. When a young man he developed a strong tendency for mechanical engineering and later was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was widely known as an inventor of a molding machine which makes molds for various kinds of foundry work, and which are in use in all parts of the country. Mr. Mumford's office was at 30 Church street, New York, but on May 1 he planned to remove to 50 Church street.

He and his family removed from Philadelphia to Plainfield in 1892, living for a time on Belvidere avenue and later removing to Compton avenue. He possessed a whole-souled, genial personality and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. During his residence here he was a prominent member and supporter of All Souls' Unitarian church, where he was a regular attendant.

He was also a member of the Machinery, Engineers, Technology Clubs, and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, of New York, and the Art Club, of Philadelphia. He was acknowledged as an authority on mechanical engineering and was often sought for information concerning this kind of work.

There survives a wife, two daughters, the Misses Elizabeth and Constance Mumford and two sons, Thomas and Warren Mumford, all residing at home.

The funeral will be held at All Souls' church at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Rev. John Baltzly, the pastor, officiating. The burial will be at Milton, Mass.

SIXTEEN YEAR OLD YOUTH HELD FOR A HEARING

Arraigned in the city police court before Judge DeMeza this morning, sixteen-year old Earl DeNise, of 315 West Front street, was held in $200 bail for a hearing tomorrow morning on a charge of larceny. The prisoner was arrested by Patrolman Thomas Flatley late Saturday night in the rear of Philip Mechanik's bicycle store in West Front street.

It is alleged that DeNise broke into the store after closing time Saturday night and stole a number of flashlights. He was caught while coming from the place.

HENRY—SMITH.

Miss Lyvona Henry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Henry, of Evona avenue, and Elmer Smith, also of this city, were married Saturday evening by Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage of the church. After a short trip the couple will reside in this city. The bridegroom is employed at the Rushmore plant on South avenue.

TWO DUNELLEN BOYS HELD UP AND ROBBED

Wesley Huff Relieved of $9 by Men Who Claimed to be Detectives.

While walking along Railroad avenue, Newark, Saturday afternoon, Wesley Huff and Edward Lewis, two Dunellen youths, were held up by a pair of burly hoboes who claimed to be detectives. Huff was relieved of $9 in greenbacks but Lewis displayed some lightning footwork and managed to get away from the miscreants.

The boys went to Newark Saturday afternoon where Huff purchased a spring suit and finding that they had an hour to wait for the next train decided to take a stroll. The formidable looking desperadoes grabbed Huff and with the admonition that they were detectives, demanded that the youth show them what he had in his pocket. In the meantime Lewis made good use of his time and beat it post-haste toward Market and Broad streets in search of a policeman.

Strange as it may seem the youth claims he could not find a copper at the "four corners" and during the interval the thieves had taken Huff's money and made good their escape. So frightened were the youths when they again met that they boarded the first train for Elizabeth without notifying the Newark authorities. Huff was so dazed by the blow he received from one of his assailants that he does not remember anything that happened after he was let go by the men.

JOHN STEWART DIES IN SEVENTY-FIFTH YEAR

Following an illness of three months with a complication of troubles, John Stewart, a well-known resident of this city, died at his home at 510 Watchung avenue, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Stewart was a native of Ireland, where was was born seventy-four years ago but had made his home in Plainfield for the last twenty years. He had followed the contracting business for a long time and was a factor in recent building operations in the Netherwood district. Many handsome homes in that section of the city were erected by him.

Mr. Stewart is survived by his wife, three sons, William, with whom he lived; Matthew C., of South avenue, and Albert, of New York; also one daughter, Mrs. John H. Brown, of Glen Ridge. Mr. Stewart had a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the city, being well liked by everyone and enjoying the confidence and respect of both business associates and neighbors. He was a member of the Plymouth Brethren and the local society will have charge of the funeral at the late home this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MOOSE OFFICERS WILL BE INSTALLED THIS EVENING

VOTE AVALANCHE ENDS CAMPAIGN

Contestants in Daily Press Tour Contest Pile up Thousands of Ballots.

WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Much Interest Displayed in Judges' Decision—Eleventh Hourt Count the Heaviest of the Eight Weeks—Contest a Big Success.

More than doubling their vote in the last day of the Plainfield Daily Press' Free Transcontinental and Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour contest, competitors for the awards put a fitting finale on eight weeks' of faithful campaigning. When the lock on the contest manager's door clicked promptly at 10 o'clock Saturday night a mountain of ballots had been piled up and lay awaiting the judges, Tax Collector William R. Townsend, City Judge William G. DeMeza and Armstrong Mulford. During the hour consumed in totalling the votes friends and relatives of the active contestants awaited in an ante-room for the first returns. When the announcement of the winners was made it was the signal for congratulations and the campaigners breathed a sigh of relief.

For three hours previous to the windup the contest manager was kept busy checking up the eleventh hour returns and the avalanche of votes was indicative of the volume of reserve strength held in store by the young women. When the total compilation had been recorded shortly after 11 o'clock it was seen that the combined count in the three districts had soared to 432,720, a feature

DEMEZA AND CRANE FORM PARTNERSHIP

City Judge and Former Law Clerk Will Open New Headquarters May 1.

City Judge William G. DeMeza and J. Henry Crane, two well-known legal practitioners in this city, have formed a partnership and on May 1 will open new headquarters in the Jeffrey building in Park avenue. Mr. Crane is at present located in that building but the firm has decided to take the whole second floor, the space offering more commodious and better adapted offices than either has at the present time.

The combining of the two interests is the direct result of a long-standing affiliation between the two lawyers. When Judge DeMeza opened an office for himself eighteen years ago Mr. Crane was employed by him as a clerk. Diligent study during the ten years he was employed there equipped Mr. Crane with a knowledge of law that enabled him to successfully pass the examinations which admitted him to the New Jersey Bar and he later was admitted as a counsellor.

Judge DeMeza is now serving his second two years' term as local magistrate and during his eighteen years as a practitioner he has built up an excellent practice. Prior to taking offices for himself he studied with his brother, the late George W. DeMeza who was at one time city judge.

Since Mr. Crane started an independent practice four years ago Judge DeMeza has maintained his office in the Codington building. The new firm will go under the name of DeMeza & Crane.

LARGE AREA OF WOOD LAND DEVASTATED BY FIRE

Fire Warden Edward T. Canning, of Watchung, and a large force of men, were kept busy yesterday fighting fires throughout this section of the Watchung Mountains. In the morning, Mr. Canning was called to the Scotch Plains district and after a few hours' hard work succeeded in extinguishing the blaze.

In the afternoon a fire was reported in the woods near Washington Rock and the fire-fighting force was called to that section where they worked for several hours. The firemen had the aid of the chemical engine in putting out the blaze, but before this was accomplished a large area of woodland was burned.

JOINT BENEFIT FOR LOCAL CAUSES

Anti-Tuberculosis League and Visiting Nurse Association to Have Circus.

TO BE HELD ON MAY 7

Frank A. Robbins Shows to Appear Here for Two Well-Known Charities—Local People Will Take Part as Performers.

For the benefit of the Anti-Tuberculosis League Open Air School and the Visiting Nurse Association combined, a benefit circus will be given in Plainfield on Friday, May 8. It will be the first out-door amusement enterprise of the year to visit the city, and that both of these worthy charities will benefit materially by the performance goes without saying. The members of the Executive Committees of both organizations have met and endorsed the plan and are now planning to begin the active work of selling tickets within a day of two.

While the show to be given will bear the same name as that which came here last year, it will be new throughout. There has been an entire change of program, the number of features has been increased and the parade greatly strengthened. As was the case a year ago, there will be a number of local people taking part in the program, and in the various work of selling tickets and other duties about the show. They will act as ticket-sellers and takers, barkers, peddle lemonade and peanuts, usher the people to their seats and in other ways assist the performance.

Members of the two organizations to be benefitted have been planning for the affair for over a month, but pending the arrangement of a date notice of the plans have been withheld until today. The advertising car of the show will be in town on Friday next and big posters will be placed everywhere announcing the forthcoming production. The tickets will be placed on public sale on Monday of next week at the Daily Press office, and through members of the committees of women in charge of the two charities.

The original arrangements for the show were made at a meeting of the Anti-Tuberculosis League held in March, and endorsed by the directors of the Visiting Nurse Association a few days afterward. A meeting of the women identified with the movement was held this morning at the Babcock building. Provisions have been made, as was the case last year, for twenty-four boxes, seating four each at both the matinee and night performances, and there will be plenty of reserved seats in addition to the general admission accommodations.

The Robbins show has been much strengthened since it was here last May under the same auspices. In fact there are virtually none of the same acts with it, and in other ways it has been enlarged. The menagerie will be included in the general admission price. The show has been wintering at the State Fair Grounds at Trenton, and will open on Thursday of next week with a monster benefit in the capitol city for the New Jersey Children's Home Association. They will then tour a few towns in South Jersey, and arrive at Plainfield on May 7 in the early morning.

There will be no advance in the general admission price over what is always charged by the Robbins show when it appears in Plainfield.

$15,000 BLAZE NEAR OAK TREE

"Fire-bug" Starts Fire That Destroys Big Barns Owned by William Kelley.

SUSPECT UNDER ARREST

William Shoemaker Believed to Have Had a Hand in the Affair—Attempts to Prove An Alibi—Two Horses and a Cow Burned.

Flames that illuminated the sky for a radius of mayn miles between the hours of 11:15 Saturday night and 5:45 Sunday morning did damage estimated to reach $15,000 to barns and outbuildings on the estate of William Kelley, at Oak Tree, near Melrose Manor. Locked in the South Plainfield jail the village authorities have a man by the name of William H. Shoemaker whom they believe is afflicted with a peculiar mania which prompts him to start conflagrations. He is alleged to have set fire to the Kelley barn, the fire later spreading to the other buildings and endangering the lives of people sleeping in the immediate vicinity.

Five outbuildings were completely destroyed, nothing remaining yesterday morning but a smoldering mass of debris. The "firebug" had done his work well and had evidently laid some careful plans. The ignition was made at the base of a forty-ton pile of hay, and fanned by a stiff breeze the flames soon assumed rapid headway. The haymow in which the fire had its origin soon resembled a raging furnace and sparks began to fly to other smaller buildings within a 100 foot radius.

INTERESTING DEBATE ON STAGE AND PRESS

Has Been Arranged to Take Place in Social Hall Tonight By Holy Name.

In St. Mary's church Social Hall in Liberty street tonight members of the local Holy Name Society will take opposite sides in a debate on the subject: "Resolved, that the press is a better educator than the stage." Paul H. Burns and James J. McCann will take the negative side and Albert LaRock and Timothy Meaney will support the affirmative. Both debating teams have given considerable time to the preparation of arguments and an interesting meeting is anticipated. The admission is free and it is hoped that a large number of those affiliated with the organization and their friends will be in attendance.

Yesterday afternoon Paul H. Burns, president of St. Mary's Holy Name Society, and Daniel J. Courtaine, president of the Union County Federation of Holy Name Societies; attended the first inter-county debate between the Essex and Bergen Federations in Cathedral Hall, Newark. The subject under discussion was: "Resolved, that every citizen of the United States should be subject to a term of compulsory military service." The affirmative side, supported by the Bergen county debaters, was awarded the decision by the judges who included Martin Comboy, J. J. Hammill and Charles J. McCarthy. At the conclusion of the affair yesterday the Union County Federation was challenged by Essex county and Hudson county was challenged by Bergen county. Both defies were accepted and the dates, subjects, etc., will be announced later. It is not unlikely that some Plainfield talent will be introduced in the Union-Essex team, local orators having been tuning up for some time past for such an event.

CIVIL SERVICE "EXAMS."

The men to be appointed in each county are to be chosen on or before August 25.

FAMILY MOVES OUT; TWO WILL MOVE IN Double Race Objection Will Be Established in West Fifth Street Soon.

Although residents of West Fifth street living in the vicinity of Lee place are congratulating themselves today on the supposition that agitation started Saturday has forced a negro family which located in the house at 825 West Fifth street, to move, their joy will be short-lived, if the statement given out by Edward Byer, a local colored real estate dealer, bears any credence. The objectionable feature protested against by the residents' protective committee was in the nature of a colored family establishing a home in the center of a refined neighborhood and many joined the agitation for the establishment of a "color line" and to possibly ostracize the family in question.

So when the new occupants of the house moved out Saturday night there was much jubilation in that section. Queried by a Daily Press reporter this afternoon concerning the reason for the removal, Mr. Byers said that the action was only a temporary one and that two families would take possession of the dwelling as soon as the plumbing was overhauled. Although he admitted that the eight rooms in the house had the facilities for only one family Mr. Byers stated that the families of Milton Brown and Edward Hunter will move in this week.

A woman living near 825 West Fifth street, said today, that if the premises were occupied by colored people there are at least six white families that will remove from the neighborhood.

Former Councilman Robert Lee, of the citizens' committee, has been investigating similar conditions in New York, for the purpose of advising the committee.

Mr. Byers today displayed the copy of a letter addressed to Dr. P. B. Cregar, of the citizens' committee, in which he offered to sell the property in question for $5,000.

ITALY-AUSTRIA PARLEY AT END

All Negotiations Reported to Have Been Broken Says Paris Report.

AIR RAID ON BELFORT

French Claim More Successes But Germans Say Not—English Reinforcements Drive Turks Back in Bashro District.

Paris, April 19 (Central News Cable)—The negotiations between Italy and Austria have been broken off, according to telegrams from Rome which confirm the report to that effect.

German aeroplanes have bombarded the great French fortress of Belfort, it was officially announced here today in the official communique from the French war office. Bombs dropped from the aeroplane set fire to two hangers and caused other damage, but not of a serious nature. The communique also reports further successes in the drive of French troops toward the Rhine River, they taking a series of important heights, two cannon and two machine guns. The British troops have also taken the offensive again. It is announced that they have captured German trenches.

Berlin, April 19 (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"South of Ypres the English were ejected yesterday from a small German position which they still occupied. English attacks along the Ypres-Comines Railroad broke down with heavy losses. Between the Meuse and the Moselle there were artillery duels. A French attack against our position of Combres and in the Vosges failed.

"On the east front the situation is unchanged.

"French and English reports about victories on the west front are all inventions. The regular reports from German headquarters are sufficient proof of this."

Roland Garros, the famous French aviator, has been taken prisoner, it is officially announced.

Constantinople, April 19 (via Berlin and Amsterdam)—The war office issued a statement that the arrival of British reinforcements in the Bashra district had forced the Ottoman troops to retire. "Our advance guards," says the statement, "made successful attacks in the Basnra district. Fighting followed near Sjario and Alberdjressie. Our troops penetrated the enemy's fortified positions but retired upon the arrival of British reinforcements."

She was also active in temperance work and will be remembered by many people as taking part in temperance meetings throughout the city.

THEODORE HUBBARD DIES IN 35TH YEAR

Well Known Young Man Passes Away Suddenly at Sister's Home.

Theodore Hubbard, aged 35, passed away very suddenly yesterday morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. James Allen, of Bound Brook road, after an illness of only four days with pleuro-pneumonia. Mr. Hubbard was taken ill Tuesday evening. Yesterday morning he felt so much better that he went upstairs while no one was around to go to bed and get some rest. This occurred at 7 o'clock and at 8:30 'clock his sister took some breakfast up to him and he ate heartily. Fifteen minutes after descending with the dishes Mrs. Allen went upstairs to clean up and her brother lay over the foot of the bed dead.

The deceased was born and brought up here. Both of his parents preceded him in death, his father dying last year. Mr. Hubbard left the local schools before graduating and took up the trade of mason and before his health commenced to fail he was generally recognized as one of the best bricklayers in this section and his services were in great demand by contractors. Mr. Hubbard leave four sisters, Mrs. James Allen, Mrs. LeRoy Jennings, of this place, and Mrs. May E. Dutcher and Miss Susan Hubbard, of Plainfield.

Miss Rose Wyckoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wyckoff, of Front street, was given a linen "shower" at her home Friday evening in honor of her approaching wedding to Edward Honning, of this place.

The reception room and the parlor of the home in which the festivities were held were attractively decorated, the color scheme being pink and white.

The program commenced at 8:30 o'clock with a concert by the band of the Dunellen Social Club under the leadership of Albert Naylor. The band played numerous pieces during the evening. A feature of the program which included dancing and singing, was an Irish "jig" by Frances Sullivan and John Hartman. Supper was served at 12 o'clock. Miss Wyckoff was literally showered with useful household articles of linen.

Joseph Morgan, of New York, a former resident of the borough, who is superintendent of the J. W. Fiske Iron Works, of New York, spent the week-end in the borough visiting friends.

The entertaining program consisted of dancing, singing and games. The feature of the program was the singing of Miss Mary Donnelly, of Plainfield. Miss Donnelly was accompanied by Miss Evelyn Ackerman, also of Plainfield. An elaborate birthday supper was served at 12 o'clock after which dancing continued until 2. Miss Haver received many useful presents.

AUTOMOBILE AND TROLLEY COLLIDE AT DUNELLEN

Robert Stryker, brother of Walter Stryker, the proprietor of the Stryker garage on North avenue, had a very narrow escape from serious injury Saturday afternoon, when he scraped the side of the 3:20 o'clock trolley to Bound Brook with an automobile he had been testing. The trolley was approaching Washington avenue and young Stryker in the car made a turn from Washington avenue into North avenue on his way back to the garage at a speed too great to make a short turn so that his car could pass between the curb and the trolley in safety.

The mudguard of the car, which was fortunately the only part of the car to come in contact with the trolley, was badly bent. The car was stopped and names of the witnesses taken. On the trolley at the time were John Logan and John Campbell and they said that they thought some one had been badly hurt.

The trip will be made by trolley and a number of parents will be along the line of march to see the showing their boys will make.

The monthly meeting of the Fanwood Fire Company for April will be held in the firehouse tomorrow night at 8 'clock.

At a recent meeting of the board of trustees of the Scotch Plains Public Library it was decided to change the meetings, which are held every other month, so as to have the last meeting of the year fall in December. That is done in order that the yearly report may be received before January 1.

Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Homan, of Jersey City, spent the week-end with their sister, Mrs. Augustus Sheelen, of North avenue.

Fanwood borough must hold out some attraction for stray children, although the authorities have yet to find the reason, because one is picked up ntarly every day. The last such case occurred on Friday, when an Italian girl of about six years was found near Graceland by Italians living in that section, who brought her to Sheelen Brothers grocery store. After telephoning several towns it was learned that she belonged on Cottage place, Plainfield. People in a passing automobile offered to take the child to Plainfield and also had to take four others as the man and his wife who had found her could not understand English and insisted on going while the two youngsters refused to be left alone.

From accounts received here from the Worcester team of the New England League, "Nibs" Hand, a local product, is making good for the backstop position. "Nibs'" throwing to bases and heavy hitting, which broke up many a game when he played with the old Scotch Plains team, are standing him in a direct line for the job.

There promises to be plenty of fun in Excelsior Hall on the night of Thursday, April 29, as arrangements are under way for the holding of a mock trial, the proceeds of the affair to be for the local Jr. O. U. A. M. City Judge William G. DeMeza, of Plainfield, has consented to be the judge, and Samuel S. Swackhamer, also of Plainfield, and L. D. Gilmour, a former resident, but now living in Newark, will be the attorneys, while the defendant, complainant and witnesses will be local people.

The young boys of Scotch Plains have formed a baseball team to play games on Saturday afternoons and will lineup Saturday against a Westfield team at that place. Frank Lee will do most of the pitching and Sidney Lidgate will be at the receiving end. Edward Hatfield, Willard Marston, Walter Anson and Frank Hodge will compose the infield, while the guardians of the outer field have not yet been decided on. The grounds opposite School No. 1 will be used for the home games and as Scotch Plains has no semi-professional team this year the young fellows ought to receive pretty good support.

NEW JERSEY LEAGUE TO MEET AT ASBURY PARK

Mayor Lighton Calkins, who is one of the temporary officers of the New Jersey League of Municipalities, anounced today that steps have been taken by the "steering" committee to hold a conference at Asbury Park in May at which time a permanent organization will be effected and plans will be discussed toward furthering the interests of the organization and increasing its usefulness.

One of the things which Mayor Calkins plans to bring up at the conference is the rcent decision of the Supreme Court in favor of the Public Service Corporation and against the city of Plainfield in the latter's contention for free lighting service under the terms of a franchise. This decision affects every municipality in the State and for that reason the league will take the matter up giving all the publicity possible. Other questions of interest to the municipalities of the State will be discussed.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER PASSES AWAY IN BROOKLYN

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Berckmans, widow of Emile C. Berckmans, and a native of this city, died Saturday at her home, 1128 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, following four days' illness with double pneumonia. Mrs. Berckmans was the daughter of the late Augustus M. Dunham, for many years a prominent resident of this city, and was seventy-three years old. Her husband was a teacher of music in Plainfield until their removal to Brooklyn in 1890.

Mrs. Berckmans is survived by one brother, Edward Dunham, who made his home with her, and several nephews and nieces. One of the nephews is Joseph S. Dunham, of New York, whose wife was buried in this city one week ago today. Mrs. Berckmans' body will be brought to Plainfield tomorrow and burial will be made in Hillside cemetery at noon

All devotees of moving pictures are aware of the fact that the Paramount productions are vastly superior to all others, consequently the service at the Plainfield Theatre is the best in the city. The latest releases from the Paramount service are shown only at this house and the fact that large audiences have been noted afternoons and nights indicates their popularity with the people.

The attraction at the Plainfield Theatre today and tomorrow is the picturization of Henry W. Savage's melo-dramatic success, "The Million." It is in five parts and features Edward Abeles, one of the local favorites. The serial film, "The Black Box," is an added attraction for tomorrow, the succeeding episodes being shown on every Tuesday. For Wednesday and Thursday, Manager Shannon will provide his patrons with another up-to-date Paramount, "The Italian," produced by Thomas Ince and having George Beban as its star. Mr. Beban is one of the foremost comedians on the American stage and many Plainfielders are familiar with his work through his appearances here in regular attractions during the past few seasons.

The present week's program at the Plainfield Theatre will be completed on Friday and Saturday with "Stop Thief" as the attraction. This farce comedy recently crowded the Gaiety Theatre, New York, nightly, as a legitimate production from the Cohan & Harris house and Plainfield is one of the first cities to receive it in picture form. The principal feminine role has been posed by Miss Mary Ryan. There will be no advance in prices during any of these Paramont presentations.

THREE TELEPHONE ALARMS.

The city fire department answered three telephone alarms since yesterday noon, none of which were for any serious blaze. At 12:25 yesterday noon the apparatus from No. 4 house was called to the telephone storage yard at South avenue and Scott place where a number of poles were in flames. The blaze was extinguished but at 8:30 this morning the department was called to the same spot again. At 9:32 last night, the West End Company extinguished a fire in the grass and bushes at Monroe avenue.

FIREMEN TO WEAR BLOUSES.

A slight change in the summer uniform of the city firemen has been ordered to take effect May 1. Instead of the familiar gray flannel shirt, which has been a part of the outfit for a number of years, the men will hereafter wear the regulation blouse which New York city adopted some time ago. The style is up-to-date and is one that is quite pleasing to the members of the department.

FIRE-WARDENS NAMED.

The Forest Park Reservation Commission of New Jersey has named a number of State fire-wardens, those for Union county being the following: Fanwood, Charles Meyer, of Scotch Plains; New Providence, J. S. Del Duca, Berkeley Heights; Springfield, A. P. Brill, Springfield. Edward T. Canning has been named for the Watchung section.

SPOILED THE GAME.

The Prospects Were Excellent, but They Were Too One Sided.

A young singer who had been studying for opera work had the good fortune to be engaged by an impresario for a tour through South America. His chest swelled with pride as he walked the deck of the steamer that was to take him on his first trip to foreign lands. On the second morning out he was much surprised to meet an old classmate, who, like himself, was a tenor singer.

"Well, well, where did you come from? Where are you going?" each asked the other.

And each answered, "I'm engaged by an opera company for a South American tour."

"My manager is on this steamer," said one.

"And mine too."

Within five minutes both singers found that they had been engaged by the same opera company for the same part. "What does the man mean by hiring two different men for the role of first tenor?" asked one

"Pardon me," interrupted a youth who had been standing near and overheard their conversation. "You have myself and two other singers for companions in this affair. We have just found out to our surprise that we have all been engaged by the same man for the same part on the same tour. What under the sun can he mean by having five first tenors?"

The five youths then took counsel together and decided that they would see the manager and demand an explanation.

They found him on the forward deck. He listened, seemingly amused at their complaint, and said: "Gentlemen, don't you worry. I am an old an experienced man in this game and know what I am doing. If you were acquainted with the climate of South America you would know yourselves that it is absolutely necessary. We shall scarcely arrive there before three or four of you fellows will be stricken with the deadly tropical fever. Experience has taught me in all my tropical tours to allow for all sorts of mishaps and misfortunes. Of course you can see what excellent prospects are offered to the chap who is able to withstand everything." And with these words the manager retired to his cabin.

The five young singers then sat down and debated the "excellent prospects." They soon came to a decision. One chance in five of being a star singer instead of a dead one did not prove sufficiently attractive. So when the steamer stopped at Liverpool the youths went ashore, and the impresario never saw them again.—Youth's Companion.

Pills For Earthquakes.

In 1750 a number of smart earthquake shocks were felt in London, which created quite a panic. The clergy, from the bishops down, exhorted, warned and pamphleted the people to an almost incredible extent lest worse things yet should befall. Quacks made small fortunes out of pills which they advertised as "good against earthquakes;" ladies wore "earthquake gowns"—warm garments for sitting out of doors at night—and most of the fashionable world lived through that summer in their coaches in the parks, "passing away the time with cards and candles."—London Express.

Old Scottish Words.

A correspondent of the Glasgow Herald submits the following samples of old Scotch words from East Aberdeenshire: Mowse—To say anything is nae mowse means it is uncanny or dangerous. Connached—Spoiled. Clean connached would mean utterly destroyed or rendered useless. Blaud—To blaud anything would mean to soil it. A child would be told, "Dinna blaud your clean pina." Gardies or gaurdies—A child's forearm. The last is a very old expression, but I have heard it used. "Sic bonnie gardies he has," means the baby has plump arms.

Verdi's Secrecy.

Verdi observed great secrecy concerning his operas, even to his business associates, and it is said that the first intimation his business managers, the Ricordis, received of the composition of "Falstaff" was a toast offered by Boito, who as supper one night, when the publisher and his wife were present, slyly glanced at Verdi and proposed a health to the "fat knight," at which it seemed Verdi and Boito had been working for months.

Another Point of View.

Employer—You have asked for an increase of salary, but I have been thinking of taking you into the firm. In that case would you want the increase of salary, too? Clerk—Oh, no; under such circumstances I should be rigidly opposed to any increase in our running expenses.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Difference.

"Now, remember, you are only allowed one deer," said the license clerk.

"That's queer talk for a man about to be married."

"Oh! Did you wish a marriage license? I was issuing a license to hunt."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

His Plea.

"Will you marry me?"

"But I love another from the bottom of my heart."

"You dear girl! There's always room at the top."—Columbia Jester.

On the Contrary.

Mrs. Doone—Tell the gentleman I'm not receiving today, Jane. New Domestic—But he ain't deliverin', mum; he's collectin'.

—You'll know what the old advertising-makings meant by urging that "time is money" if you delay advertising for a tenant.

BIG BLAZE NEAR OAK TREE

of the conflagration came when they were aroused by Mr. Kelley's sixteen-year-old grand-daughter. She had been atending a dance in Oak Tree and on her way toward the house noticed the illumination in the back yard. Soon after she gave the alarm of fire many neighbors flocked to the scene and volunteer bucket brigades were organized. The flames lighted up the back yard and when the girl, who discovered the blaze, noticed a man crouching by the side of a bush, she notified her father, but nothing more was thought of this incident until the hunt for a "fire-bug" started yesterday morning.

Farm implements, corn-cribs, feed and grain, two horses, one cow, one hundred and fifty chickens, several wagons and some miscellaneous matter was consumed in the blaze. Three mules tied in the back yard within a few paces of the fire's origin were released in time to be saved.

The Eagle and Washington Hose Companies, of Metuchen, responded to an alarm of fire and two pumping engines and twenty firemen were brought into play. Although a fire hydrant is located less than 100 yards from the scene of the fire, no pressure could be secured and as a result this means of combating the flames was rendered practically useless. Water was drawn from a small pond a short distance from the barns.

The firemen left the scene shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning. At that time everything of value had been consumed and the owner decided the best course would be to allow the debris to burn itself out. All day yesterday the ruins smoldered and many curious sight-seers viewed the remains.

Early yesterday, Mr. Kelley hired detectives to work on the case, suspicion that the blaze had had an incendiary origin prompting him to take this action. He recalled that several days ago a neighbor had informed him that Shoemaker, a former farmhand, had threatened to "make old Kelley sweat before the week was out."

This statement, coupled with the corroborative description of the man seen in the back yard, which was furnished by Miss Kelley, was responsible for the belief that Shoemaker had a hand in the matter. He was taken into custody in a shack near the Kelley farm and lodged in the South Plainfield lockup. He was later identified by Miss Kelley. In a statement made before a Daily Press reporter in his cell, yesterday, Shoemaker attempted to prove the following alibi:

"I quit work at Spicer's plant in South Plainfield at 12 o'clock Saturday noon. I got dinner and then went to Charley Compton's (the place where he was arrested) and remained there until 2 o'clock. I then went to Metuchen and later to Perth Amboy by trolley. I left Perth Amboy to come home at 11 o'clock, 'hopping' a coal train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. I got off at the Lehigh crossing near the coal storage plant in South Plainfield and went to the house and called to be let in. No response came and I went to the wagon shed where I slept until I was let in at 5 o'clock."

Under cross-examination, after taking an affidavit to the above statement, he admitted that he had lied and that he crawled in a window of the shack and went to bed shortly after 5 o'clock. When cross-questioned Shoemaker became badly confused and it was evident that he was trying hard to build up an alibi. During the cross-examination he claimed he had never been in Plainfield. Later when queried by a Daily Press reporter he said he was here seven weeks ago, then denied being here, and later admitted having visited Plainfield two weeks ago. He admitted having served time in jail and said that it was for a charge of assault and battery.

Harry Campbell, Mr. Kelley's son-in-law, when interviewed by a Daily Press reporter said that the fire loss would amount to between $15,000 and $20,000 and that he carried not more than $4,000 insurance. He claimed that Shoemaker had set fire to a barn belonging to another member of the family a number of years ago and that he had been indicted for it, but later let go. Mr. Campbell said that he was prepared to push this charge to the limit and was determined to see the man put behind the bars. Mr. Campbell, like a number of other villagers, is well acquainted with Shoemaker who has been a familiar figure in that neighborhood for the past thirty years.

Harry Sofield and several other South Plainfield young men identified Shoemaker as the man they had seen near the old postoffice building in the village between 11 and 12 o'clock Saturday night. They claimed that Shoemaker was running away from the scene of the blaze.

CAPSTICK AT DISPOSAL OF HIS CONSTITUENCY

With a view to getting in touch with the voters in the Fifth Congressional District, Congressman John H. Capstick, of Montville, Morris county, has issued the following letter to the voters:

"Through the provisions of the Constitution fixing the time for regular sessions of Congress, I will not be called upon before next December to take up the legislative duties of the office to which I was elected last fall unless there is an extra session called by the President.

"My term started March 4, however, and I am now your representative, ready and anxious to serve you in any way possible prior to, during and after the legislative session.

"I want you to consider me your Congressman and to command me, whatever your political affiliations and whether you voted for me or not.

"You will favor me and assist me in my work if you will write me at once your full name, your residence address and the kind of business in which you are engaged, as I wish to classify the entire electorate of my district along the line of occupation with a view to mailing public documents that will be of interest and service to the people whom I represent.

"The Government printing office will doubtless issue documents during my term of office of special intrest to you in your business or profession, and it will afford me pleasure to send them to you free of charge if you will kindly comply with my request.

"Whether you have made any requests or not up to this time, it is your privilege to make as many as your interests may demand, and for this reason there should be no hesitancy on your part."

RECORD NUMBER VIEWED BABY SAVING EXHIBITS

Six thousand persons, the greatest number recorded in a single day since the exhibit opened, viewed the charts and other novelties in the local Baby Saving Show headquarters Saturday. The various illustrative charts, showing features of baby welfare work, are attracting considerable attention and the attendance has been steadily increasing each day.

Tonight the local Boy Scouts will parade through the city streets with a view to instilling added interest in the exhibit. The demonstration will be in the nature of a torchlight parade and householders along the line of march have been requested to display flags.

CLERGYMAN INJURED AS VEHICLES CRASH

Rev. Isaac P. Brokaw's Arm Broken While Going to a Funeral.

Somerville, April 19.—While riding to a cemetery at the head of funeral of the late Mrs. John H. Perlee, three men, two of them clergymen, were badly shaken up and more or less injured yesterday afternoon, when an automobile struck their carriage. The auto hit it with such force that it was almost overturned. The three men in the carriage were thrown about and one of the clergymen sustained a broken arm.

The men are Rev. Isaac P. Brokaw, a retired clergyman; Rev. Dr. Herman Hegeman and Ryhnlander Garrison. They were in the first coach. The carriage was about to make a turn in the road when the auto, in which were two men, and which bore the license number 57,-148 N. J., came along. Both vehicles were going in the same direction.

The auto did not allow the carriage roo menough and they came together with a crash. The carriage room enough and they came three men were badly hurled about and Rev. Mr. Brokaw sustained a broken arm and other injuries. The other men were also bruised and shaken up. The men in the auto stopped long enough to ascertain that no one was killed and then continued on their way.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN.

Differing Forms of Speech In Great Britain and This Country

The common objects and phenomena of nature are often differently named in English and American. Such Americanisms as creek and run for small streams are practically unknown in England, and the English moor is a stranger in the United States. The Englishman is naturally but little familiar with bayou, gulch, gully, canyon, butte, divide and bluff. He knows the meaning of sound (Long Island sound), but always uses channel in place of it.

In the same way the American knows the meaning of English bog, but almost always uses swamp or marsh (often elided to ma'sh). Foothill is an Americanism; so is cold snap; so also are prairie, backwoods, flats and neck (in the sense of peninsula). The Englishman seldom if ever describes a severe storm as a hurricane, a cyclone, tornado or blizzard. He does not say that the temperature is 29 degrees or that the thermometer or the mercury is at 29 degrees, but that there are three degrees of frost. He calls ice water iced water.—Pittsburgh Press.

Settled the Duel.

Lord March, afterward the Marquis of Queensberry, was not accustomed to view a duel with unbecoming apprehension and usually attended an affair with an air of enjoyment that often was decidedly displeasing and embarrassing to his adversary. But he was served at last with that sauce which the proverb explains is for the gander as well as for the goose. It was when he was challenged to fight an Irish sportsman. Lord March appeared on the ground accompanied by a second, surgeon and other witnesses. His opponent arrived soon afterward with a similar retinue, but added to by a person who staggered under the weight of a polished oak coffin, which he deposited on the ground, end up, with its lid facing Lord March and his party. Lord March became decidedly uncomfortable when he read the inscription plate, engraved with his own name and title and the date and year of death, and peace was patched up.

He Dodged Cold Mutton.

A curious reply was made by Cecil Rhodes to a lady who, seeking to draw him out, suggested that he owed his phenomenal rise to the impetus of noble sentiments.

"Madam," returned Mr. Rhodes, "I owe my fortune simply and solely to cold mutton."

"Cold mutton!" gasped the lady. "Oh, Mr. Rhodes, what do you mean?"

"When I was young," continued the South African millionaire, "I was so dosed with cold mutton and I hated it so cordially that I resolved to grow rich in order to put it on one side for the rest of my life. Yes, madam, cold mutton was at the root of my success. Noble sentiments had nothing to do with it."

Drinking Water.

It is surprising how many people drink little or no water. There is no greater purifying agent than plenty of water internally. An abundance of it not only flushes the entire system, but improves the action of the skin; hence the complexion. Care should be taken that the water drunk is free from germs. If there is any doubt boil it. Do not confine yourself exclusively to either cold or hot water and do not take either at extreme temperatures.

Not Warranted.

Grubbs—Is there any truth in this report that Miss Oldgirl is to be married? Stubbs—She thinks there is doubtless, but in my own view her belief merely represents another triumph of hope over experience.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

LACK OF FISH HITS ALL EUROPE HARD

North Sea Trawling Paralyzed by War Zone Raiders.

PINCH OF SCARCITY IS FELT

Annual Catch of Million and a Quarter Tons of Sea Food For Rich and Poor Suddenly Cut Off Adds to Perils of Starvation, Which Even In Neutral Countries Are Feared.

"With its war zones and counter-war zones, its mined areas, its hostile fleets and its heavily defended shores, the North sea in a few months has been transformed from one of the richest food producing areas in Christendom into a region upon whose mastery may depend the starvation of one or the other of two of the mightiest nations of the earth."

The above statement appears in the current issue of the National Geographic Magazine, the official organ of the National Geographic society. The nations referred to are not named, but it is apparent that the countries referred to are England and Germany.

The article, which is unsigned, points out that in times of peace "no other like area has given to humanity such rich supplies of food" as has the North sea. There more than in any other known region of the oceans, it adds, the food fishes congregate.

The fish food output of the North sea in the year preceding the present war totaled 1,250,000 tons.

Food of Rich and Poor.

"Today," says the article, "a hundred thousand Englishmen who manned the steam trawl, the drifter and the sailing boat; tens of thousands of Germans who vied with them in their work; Belgians, the French, the Dutch, the Danes and the Scandinavians, who also helped exploit the North sea fisheries—all of these are largely out of jobs. Fishing boats now sweep the sea for mines instead of seining it for fish.

"Germany cannot look to the Baltic for any large supply of fish to replace her former supplies from the North sea, for the waters of that sea are poor producing grounds. The total annual yield there is only about a tenth as great as that of the North sea, and Germany's share of this is in normal times very small.

"Great Britain's North sea fisheries represent nearly two-thirds of the total catch there and are more than eight times as large as those of Germany.

"In the North sea three-fifths of the total catch are herring; haddock takes second place, constituting 11 per cent of the total; cod comes third, with 8.5 per cent, and the plaice fourth, with 4.3 per cent of the total catch. In the matter of values the ratio is somewhat different from that of weights. Constituting 62.7 per cent of the weight of the season's catch, the herring accounts for only 45.4 per cent of its value.

"The vast proportion of the fish consumed in Europe is salt fish. The fresh fish go to the tables of the rich, while the herring and other salted varieties are consumed principally by the masses. The result is that when the pinch in the fish supply began to come it visited the homes of the well to do first. All of the countries at war probably have enough salt fish in their warehouses to tide over a considerable period, but if the war keeps up this reserve must disappear.

"Not only do the nations at war feel the pinch of the fish shortage caused by the war, but neutral nations as well. Holland feels it sorely from a production standpoint, as do also Sweden, Norway and Denmark. On the other hand, it hits Switzerland more from a consumption standpoint. That country normally buys nearly $1,000,-000 worth of fish from the countries that border the North sea.

Hard to Realize Here.

"We in America, where fish forms such a minor part of our daily diet and where so many of the fish that we eat are grown in our rivers and bays, under a great American originated system of fish culture, find it hard to realize how serious in their proportions and how farreaching in their consequences are the results of the practical closing down of the fisheries of the North sea.

"Europe has depended very much on these fisheries for fish supplies. More than half of all the fish produced on all the fishing grounds operated by Europeans are caught within the limited territory that constitutes the North sea fishing grounds. How much they are depended upon is shown by the fact that Great Britain annually absorbs 500,000 tons of North sea fish. That means twenty-two pounds per capita. And, while this is small in proportion to her per capita meat consumption of 119 pounds, yet it is that margin which represents the difference between a bounteous plenty and positive hunger unless other foods can be secured to take its place.

"The same condition applies to Germany. Not only has that country heretofore used all of its own catch, but has annually imported more than 1,500,-000 barrels from other countries around the North sea. The United Kingdom and Germany are the two greatest meat eating nations of the six leading ones now at war, Germany's per capita consumption being 113 pounds."

N. P. H. S. BANGED OUT ANOTHER TRIUMPH

New Brunswick Baseballer No Match for the Boroughites.

North Plainfield High School baseball sluggers hit the ball hard in the pinches Saturday afternoon on Hyde Oval and scored a 5 to 3 victory over the New Brunswick High School aggregation. The game was the best exhibition the local team has put up this season, Stahl holding his own throughout the nine innings. Each team totalled six hits but three of the boroughites safeties came in a row in the seventh inning and netted two runs, which won the game.

Once More the First Man to Face Stahl Pick'd up a Clean Single.

On the first ball that Stahl served up, the Brunswick batter singled into deep center and it was only through fast fielding and a good throw to second that he was held on first. He died trying to steal third. The visiting pitcher had the "Indian sign" on the home batters in the first inning, Hebert fanning for a starter. The first score of the game came in the second inning when VanMater doubled, went to third on Dawe's single and scored when Meade laced the ball into center field. After stealing second Dawe also scored on this play. On two errors, a single and a free issue, the New Brunswick team chalked up one tally in the third and another in the following round on a single and a misplay by Hebert in left field.

North Plainfield took the lead in the fifth inning when VanDeventer crossed the plate on a pair of errors by the second baseman. Both teams failed in the sixth stanza, but New Brunswick tied matters up again in the seventh with a pass, a sacrifice and a clean single. With the score a deadlock at 3-3, Smalley sent a liner into left center for two bases. Stahl foul-flied out to the catcher and Hebert singled, Smalley taking third. After stealing second Hebert scored behind Smalley on a pretty hit by VanDeventer. For the next two innings Stahl held his opponents safe and ended the game by fanning Bergen, the last batter.

The score follows:

In the opening game of the season, the First Baptist baseball team trounced the Imperial A. C. nine on the West End avenue grounds Saturday afternoon by a score of 12 to 4. The church team pounded out a total of 19 hits off Stites and aided by eight errors, had little difficulty in obtaining a lead. The Imperial batters could only get five hits.

In the first inning the Imperials scored three times while the Baptists were blanked. The latter tied the score in the second and took the lead in the fifth when two men crossed the plate. Two in the sixth and five in the eighth put the game away as the Imperials could only get one more run, that coming in the seventh. Five errors were chalked up against the Baptist fielders. Cady, Banks and Patterson each pounded out a double-sacker. Patterson and Ungaretti did the pitching for the Front street aggregation. The score follows:

CATS!

When Judge DeMeza declared in the city police court that "cats were becoming a nuisance in Plainfield and something should be done to thin out the feline trouble makers" he hit the nail squarely on the head. At the present time there is a bill before the Assembly providing for the licensing of cats and if passed the measure will provide relief for weary Plainfielders who are becoming sick and tired of having their slumber broken by the night marauders with their accompanying meows on the back fence. While there are some who would oppose the measure on the grounds that cats are household pets, and others because they would be deprived of their nightly exercise gained by hurling hardware from a second-story bedroom window, popular opinion favors some legislation in this direction. There is apparently no more reason why cats should be allowed to run loose than there is for dogs.

Humane workers will have to admit that the licensing of the feline would save an almost inestimable amount of pain and suffering by the stray and homeless cats of our city. This argument is one based on fact and strengthens the usual bird destruction and slumber breaking reasons. Licensing them would to some extent do away with the enormous reproduction each year and diminish the number of homeless ones.

DISCOURTESY ON TRAINS.

It is said that the Pennsylvania Railroad has determined to institute "courtesy meetings" with a view to impressing on employes the importance of good manners while in the performance of their duties. Merely as a practical, money-making proposition, the idea is excellent. There are few, if any railroads that have not been compelled to pay dearly for discourteous acts on the part of their employes. Discussing such instances, a Western editor says:

It costs something to stop a train after it has left a station, but it does not cost $5,000. One railroad recently had to pay that sum for refusing to stop and back to the station to let off a woman whom it had carried past. She urged the conductor, after having told him where she wanted to get off, to stop, but he refused. The woman was three hours late in arriving at her destination. The court gave her $5,000 for mental agony and because the road had not paid due attention to her rightful request.

In a large Eastern city recently a railroad employe drove a cabman off the company's ground with much profanity. This cost the company $1,000, although unquestionably it was the company's ground on which the cabman had trespassed. A passenger on a New York train was told by the conductor that he was going beyond the station for which his ticket called. In the dispute that followed the conductor told the passenger that he was a fool, emphasized by a profane definition of the particular kind of fool he had in mind. The passenger paid the extra fifteen cents under protest. The court made the railroad company pay $2,500 damages. In a Western station a waiting passenger was cold and asked for more fire. The agent refused, although there was coal in the box, and in the course of the controversy resorted to the usual profane discourtesy. The courts awarded the passenger $750 damages.

The popular prejudice against railroad corporations, which has influenced court decisions and resulted in a practice among politicians described as "railroad-baiting," is not due solely to the widespread belief that the said corporations have grown rich through overcharging. At least some part of it is due to the discourtesy of officious employes.

Our railroad conductors have not the pompous military air and overbearing manner so noticeable in the magnificent creatures who command the railway trains in Germany, but they are human, and wherever proud man is dressed in a little brief authority, as the bard of Avon has observed, there is danger of behavior such as tends to make the angels weep. Reminders in the form of "courtesy meetings" would be serviceable not merely among railroad employes but among employes in every line of business, especially those exercising some degree of authority and suffering from too extensive an appreciation of their own importance.

In view of the fact that the police department is short of men the police board could do no better than to select at least three of the four candidates whose names have been turned in as "possibilities" for the local department. It developed at the last meeting that it would be best to increase the force by at least three men and as a consequence the board is considering the advisability of taking this action. To get rid of all the red tape that goes with every examination for the department it might be well to name the trio from the four eligibles. Whether or not this is the intent of the board is not known, but to hold another test would be mere folly.

Down in Mercer county it has been found that the Board of Freeholders have been paying men for working twenty-seven days on the county roads in a month of thirty days which had five Sundays and two holidays. That certainly is going some. It reminds us of the Ocean county Freeholder who put in a bill and was paid for thirty-three days in one month, and got away with it—until a supreme court investigation made him pay back several hundred dollars to the county.

With some nine hundred automobiles owned in this city, and nearly as many more licensed here from nearby places, the automobile department should immediately replace the local licensing agency.

Harry K. Thaw has landed on the front page again. Are we ever to be relieved of the burden of following his troubles.

There are always some things for which to be thankful. For instance, the Legislature will adjourn this week.

CONTEST ENDS

which shows that the contest was a marked success.

In winning the highest honors and right to select a chaperone Miss Agnes Leighs turned in a grand total of 118,977. This proved a pleasing contrast to her 48,177 votes credited in the official announcement of Saturday afternoon. During the last day of the contest she increased her score by 70,800. This exemplifies the thoroughness of her canvas during the final hours of the race and the result makes her well deserving of the honor she has had bestowed on her. She has selected her mother, Mrs. George T. Leighs, to act as chaperone.

Mounting from 38,678 to 102,158 in the last day's efforts, Miss Anna McGinnis annexed the award in district No. 2. Her increase over the Saturday afternoon announcement amounted to 63,480 votes and this in itself was a remarkable achievement.

Miss Lorena B. Harris' tally of 37,564 earned for her the prize in district No. 3. Her activity in the suburbs during the eight long weeks was productive of victory over a number of other competitors who pressed her hard until the final spurt.

Taken in its entirety the contest was a pronounced success from every point of view. The contestants present at the final count were enthusiastic in their commendation of the manner in which the competition had been conducted and each put herself on record as being thoroughly in accord with the verdict.

The result announced will stand unless it is altered by the verification of subscriptions. Should this investigation show that old subscriptions have been turned in as new it will be necessary to alter the gradings accordingly. Any changes will be announced in the paper.

Ever since the contest was set underway February 23 there has been a city-wide interest evidenced. Scores of relatives and friends have been concentrating their efforts toward booming the prospects of their favorite. All knew that the contest would be productive of nothing but winners, inasmuch as every contestant active to the end will receive something in return for the energy expended. Those whose vote was not sufficient to take them to the Exposition will get a share of the proceeds, the sum being determined according to the number of subscriptions they have turned in. Some idea of the interest held by friends of the contestants in the result may be gleaned from the announcement that the telephones in the Plainfield Daily Press office were kept ringing constantly for more than an hour after the judges had finished their work and numerous similar inquiries were received yesterday and this morning.

The young women vote-getters and their friends well knew that the windup would be a close one and while confidence was expressed on every hand, inwardly the competitors were a little doubtful as to the outcome. Eagerness was written on every countenance Saturday night and the hours preceding the announcement were spent in nervous floor pacing and speculation.

The party will leave on July 3 for a trip to the Pacific coast under the direction of Thomas Cook & Sons with all expenses borne by the Daily Press.

The final vote in the contest of the candidates is as follows:

Health Notes

Published Every Monday. Prepared by N. J. R. Chandler, Health Officer.

BEATING THE FLY TO IT.

Now is the time when "fly-swatting" will count in ridding the city of the fly-pest. The flies that have lived through the winter will soon come out of their hiding places—in fact, some of them have already emerged. If all these flies could be killed, there would be none left to become the parents of the countless millions that will otherwise come into being. Fly-swatting is only one means of getting rid of flies (because some are bound to escape), but just now, when there are so few of them, it is important to kill every one that you possibly can.

The next important thing is to keep your premises so clean that there will be no place for the flies to breed. Although most of the flies are bred in stable manure, they will lay their eggs in any kind of filth, even old wet newspapers. Any decomposing (and that means "rotten") matter will do. If garbage is left uncovered, it will be swarming with maggots in two or three days, which, in a few days more will develop into as many flies. In such a case, kerosene oil should be poured over them to kill them. Manure should not only be kept covered, but treated with some material that will prevent the eggs or the maggots from developing, and it should be removed often.

The third thing for you to do is to screen your windows and doors. If the flies once get into your house they are sure to find their way to some of the food which you will eat. Nobody wants to eat food or drink milk when it has been seasoned with the filth and disease germs from the inside and outside of the bodies of these loathsome creatures. One fly was known to have 6,600,000 germs on its body.

Fourth, see that your grocer, baker, butcher, fruit and vegetable dealer and any others that supply you with food, keeps the food protected from flies.

Speaking of keeping your premises clean reminds us to remind you that it is time for you to begin your spring house and yard cleaning. Clear out the rubbish; do away with useless things that clutter up your house and yard, taking up valuable air space in your house and making your yard an eye-sore and place for flies to breed. An untidy yard or a pile of rubbish is an invitation for more rubbish to be thrown on it. On the other hand, one hesitates to throw things in a clean yard. Besides, you want to use your ground for lawns and flower and vegetable gardens. Call at the Board of Health office for some seeds or write to Senator James E. Martine at Washington for them.

Viola in her luxurious home plays the lovely fairy, with wings and all, to perfection. She wants to be a fairy in real life; the death of her father in the European War, and the perfidy of the friends to whose care Major Drayton had entrusted her, gives her the chance of realizing her ambition. She runs away and gets a position in the ballet of a theatre. But the girl discovers that the fairyland of her ideals does not exist on the stage. She is used so roughly that she deserts from the theatre all in her pretty stage dress.

A kindly waif takes pity on her and shelters her. Policemen appear at night and discover that Viola is the girl for whom a reward of $100 is being offered. For Major Drayton has not been killed in the war after all and has returned to claim his daughter and make her happy.

GERMANS RULE AIR IN POLAND; CORRESPONDENT VISITS A CAMP

Crack Corps Located In Vodka Factory—Watching Troop Movements Tries Nerves.

"The Humming Bird," New Kind of Machine, Rises Quickly Out of Danger.

OF all the fine fellows who are dying for their kaiser the finest are the fliers. So I welcomed an invitation to ride out and visit a German aviation camp in Poland and have a look at the men and machines that got on the nerves of Warsaw, says a staff correspondent of the New York Times, writing from a vodka factory in Poland. Half a dozen Aviatik biplanes were out tuning up on the ideal flying field, as big as Hempstead plains (a good landing place is a rarity in Poland, I was told). A dozen big square tents for hangars and machine shops had been pitched in the shadow of a big red brick factory, a solitary vodka distillery, which the Germans have converted into their "aero club."

"Morituri te salutamus!" said Captain D., the squadron commander, by way of welcome, extending the freedom of the reformed "clubhouse," about which he told one of war's little comedies.

"The Russians left so fast that they left all their vodka behind. When a Russian does that you can imagine he's going some," Captain D. explained in good American. It turned out that he has a brother in America, who teaches school in Kents Hill, Me., and I was to let him know that his flying brother when last seen was well and winning medals. Three Cossacks of more heroic mold, however, had stayed behind for a last drink, and yet another, until their escape was cut off by the storming Germans.

"They hid up the chimneys and were not discovered until we happened to build fires, when they were literally 'smoked out.' They are now in our ethnographical collection in Germany."

To an American the sight of that abandoned vodka was more convincing than all of the official bulletins of the great general staff—mute evidence of the finish of a grand offensive. "It enjoys complete immunity; it isn't even fit for motor fuel," the flying squadron chief laughed.

Captain D. and his fliers were manifestly an all star aggregation, for they all wore the iron cross of the first class but when I tried to get a first hand hero story from the men who had "worried Warsaw" they, with suspicious unanimity, suggested "interviewing Icarus."

Icarus, the Flying Dachshund.

The modest hero of a hundred flights posed beside a big biplane long enough to be photographed, but resisted all journalistic advances with a negative quiver of his supersensitive tail—for I had met Icarus, the death defying dachshund, the kaiser's only air dog. No one could financially induce Flieger Abteilung No. X to part with their little black and tan mascot. They consider him a "lucky dog" very literally, for their squadron has had only two casualties in six months of aerial war, an astounding record, while on one occasion he helped to save his flying companions from death or captivity. Outwardly this dog of war, who has had experiences and birdseye views that no truthful correspondent can boast of—Cossack patrols no bigger than mice scampering over the landscape, shrapnel bursting in woolly clouds around him, a panic stricken populace fleeing for cover—looks no different from any other well regulated, elongated dachs, most unlike a hero. But I had an opportunity of noting his iron nerve and happy fatalism, for at my urgent request the "daredevil dachshund" was allowed to give an exhibition flight. Throughout the photographing and attempted interviewing process Icarus had worn the bored expression of his breed, but yelped joyously when he was lifted into the tonneau of the Aviatik and strapped in beside the observer, after first having been warmly wrapped up by a sergeant mechanic, as the winter air was biting cold.

"Has he dropped bombs over Warsaw?" I asked, scenting the best canine interest story of the war. But Germans are irritatingly truthful. His little paws, they explained, weren't strong enough to pull the chain that releases the bombs suspended from the bottom of the car and simultaneously sets the clockwork mechanism going. He was purely an interested looker-on and giver of moral support, helping to make history by providing comic relief for nerves that are strained to the breaking point.

While the principal protagonist was off on his aerial "joy ride" Lieutenant von H., the tallest of the kaiser's fliers whom I have seen, six feet three and a modest, boyish looking hero, told of their closest shave.

Narrow Escape From Cossacks.

"We were coming back from a successful reconnoissance when two squadrons of Cossacks saw us and began peppering away at us at an altitude of about 2,000 meters. We were shot through the benzine tank, and when the motor stopped things didn't look promising. We volplaned to earth and made a good landing, but unfortunately didn't have time to set our machine on fire—the Cossacks were coming. We just 'beat it' and hid in a swamp. However, we made some further useful observations of a big troop movement, for we heard Russian columns passing all night long. We had lost our bearings, but the next morning my observer, Lieutenant G., who is a hunter, saw some wild ducks on the wing and said, 'They'll be going south.' We remained hidden all that day, and at night followed the ducks fifteen kilometers to the Russian lines, behind which we had landed. We let this blessed pup lead the procession and successfully slipped through the Russian lines under cover of a dense fog at dawn." For this exploit Lieutenants H. and G. wear the iron cross, first class, pinned on their left breasts. The second class, by the way, is worn on a white edged black silk ribbon in the buttonhole, and it is considered rather good form to tuck the cross out of sight inside the uniform, leaving only the ribbon showing. The superdachs drew a blank, dogs not being eligible for decoration.

Icarus, however, proved to have other accomplishments besides being able to fly and outwit Cossacks, and when he returned to earth he was put through his repertory of war tricks, of which the best were these: "Franzos," said his tutor. Icarus wagged his tail and showed no hard feelings. "Russ." Icarus keeled over and "played dead." "Englander" (English). Icarus howled dismally.

"Echt Deutsch—he's every inch a German," said the captain seriously, patting his 'anti-English' pupil, while the others watched the performance in a grim jawed circle. It was not a joke, but a ritual. Beyond this bleak, wind swept Polish plain they saw the mirage of a hated island.

Through the courtesy of the great general staff I had been able to tell fully everything of interest about German military aviation. I had seen it in France, but the Germans always have something new to show you every time you come around.

New Type of Aeroplane.

I learned that "Taubes Over Warsaw" is not technically a truthful headline, as none have flown over Warsaw any more than over Paris, the Taube being a superannuated monoplane model. In the east, as in the west, the Germans pin their faith to the Aviatik biplanes, but with their genius for specialization they have, since the war taught the necessity for it, developed a new military model for "certain special work"—a baby monoplane—which I was permitted to see in action. It is not a Taube, but a "humming bird," and it beats the biplane by some miles an hour. But its crowning military merit is its ability to hop off the ground quickly and climb fast at a steep angle. The limit of prudence for an aeroplane making observations is an altitude of 6,000 feet, but with the increased experience in shooting at aeroplanes even this height is no longer as 'safe' as is desirable. Moreover, while you can make satisfactory observations from 6,000 feet under favorable weather conditions, you have got to go lower down into the danger zone at other times, particularly here in Poland, when there is "snow in the air." Then you won't see anything if you are higher up than, say, 3,000 feet. Here is where the fast "climber" comes in handy. You can do your observing at lower altitudes and head for the upper regions the moment you are in danger of being potted. Again, cunningly concealed batteries can only be spotted, as a rule, from low altitudes, and here, too, the swift darting "humming bird" comes in handy. The trial flight which I witnessed was astounding.

More interest, of a different kind, attached to the squadron's "lieblingsapparat," or favorite machine, which I was invited to inspect, I didn't know why, for it looked like all other German biplanes I had ever seen, as if it had just come out of the factory. Their machines are groomed like race horses. Inquiry showed, however, that the lieblingsapparat well deserved a place in the history of aeroplaning. It was a veteran of six months' standing, had been in action from the first day of the war and was going yet, had flown 8,000 kilometers with never an accident, had paid seven visits to Warsaw and been hit seventy times. The closest shot was within two inches of the vital water cooler. Each "treffer" or shot that hit the mark, on wing and body, had a small red ring painted around it, with the date marked in small black letters, while on one side of the car or body the aviators had painted a skeleton map of the eastern theater of war, and an accurate diagram, in different colors, of all the heights which the lieblingsapparat had successfully negotiated, including the bomb dropping visits to Warsaw—a unique historical document, for in addition to the varicolored routes there was a most methodical "index" giving the dates of flights and names of aviators who performed them. Its present pilot is Corporal Hucker, the star flier of the squadron, and who is said to hold the record for Warsaw flights.

No Place to Play

Plenty of room for dives and dens,
Glitter and glare and sin;
Plenty of room for prison pens—
Gather the criminals in.
But never a place for the lads to race—
No; never a place to play!

Plenty of room for schools and halls,
Plenty of room for art,
Plenty of room for teas and balls,
Platform, stage and mart.
Proud is the city—she finds a place
For many a lad today,
But she's more than blind if she fails to find
A place for the boys to play.

Give them a chance for innocent sport,
Give them a chance for fun.
Better a playground plot than a court
And jail when the harm is done.
Give them a chance. If you stint them now
Tomorrow you'll have to pay
A larger bill for a darker ill,
So give them a place to play.

DENY BETSY ROSS DESIGNED U. S. FLAG.

Historical Societies Oppose Plan For Monument on Grave.

The introduction of a bill in the Pennsylvania legislature providing $25,000 for the erection of a monument over the grave of Betsy Ross, in Mount Moriah cemetery, Philadelphia, as the maker of the first United States flag, has aroused adverse comment among members of historical and patriotic hereditary organizations, who declare that the story of Betsy Ross is too obscure to receive the formal stamp of approval by the state.

Such official recognition also, they assert, will tend to substantiate the belief by many that Betsy Ross actually designed the stars and stripes, and thus cause further inaccuracies in order to perpetuate "a merely popular and picturesque tradition of American history."

Even the story of the house on Arch street, which is believed by many to have been the home of Betsy Ross, and the legend that the first flag was made there, is not taken seriously by them.

There are no deeds on record, they say, to show that the house now designated as "the birthplace of Old Glory" is authentic.

"Betsy Ross was a seamstress in the employ of the government during the Revolution, making uniforms and standards," said an officer of one of the societies. "It is possible she may have sewed the flags together; but, as to the story that Betsy Ross actually designed the stars and stripes, nothing could be more ridiculous."

DISCOVERS "THIRD SEX" HERE

Paris Editor Blames Education of American Women.

Education among the women of America is producing a third sex, Boston society people are being told by Robert Hugues Le Roux, editor of Le Matin, Paris, who is visiting that city with his American wife, formerly Mrs. John Van Vorst, sister-in-law of Marie Van Vorst, the novelist.

"I have made a particular study of American women students," says M. Le Roux, "and found that the tendency is to produce a nonproductive sex.

"The business woman is also a member of the third sex. She demands an equality with men and the privileges chivalrous men have bestowed on women as well.

"The chief trouble lies with the education of American women. Women were not meant by nature for such education.

"In France we recognize but one vocation for a woman—marriage. The Frenchwomen prefer being loved to being worshiped."

LEAVES FRIEND $10,000,000.

Miss Garrett Bequeaths Estate to Miss Thomas Unconditionally.

Practically the whole of her $10,000,000 was left by Miss Mary Elizabeth Garrett of Baltimore, daughter of John W. Garrett, late president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, to her friend, Miss Mary Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr college.

Absolutely no condition is attached to the bequest, and it will not be contested. In her will Miss Garrett refers to the fact that she and Miss Thomas had been closely associated in work for the higher education of women, and says she is confident that Miss Thomas will make appropriate and wise use of the legacy, that her sympathy with and confidence in Miss Thomas' judgment and wisdom were her motives in making her friend the residuary legatee.

Had Miss Garrett survived her friend the money would have gone to Johns Hopkins university.

GROW FOOD IN CITY PARKS.

Austrians Get Emperor's Order to Plow Up Greensward.

From Vienna comes information that the Emperor Francis Joseph has issued an order to the authorities that vegetables are to be grown in every available space in the city.

The public parks and greens, including also the famous Prater, the emperor's personal property, will be utilized and planting will begin as soon as the turf is plowed up and the ground is suitable for cultivation. Thus all the greens in the Austrian capital will take on the appearance of vegetable gardens.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Baseball's grandoldope has begun to cloud the atmosphere. Although we have had no definite news from the front we happened to spy an auto load of Britt Martin's Saurer stars motoring down the avenue in baseball woolens late Saturday afternoon and suspect that there must have been practicing somewhere. Well now, that's something like. Until Saturday we were doubtful concerning Plainfield's prospects for the season but now we feel a little bit easier. Scholastic pastiming is all right at the time and in the place it belongs, but red-blooded fandom can't exist on this stuff for a whole long season. Give us a little of that stuff they dub semi-professional competition and serve it up in double portions to make up for the pitfalls of the last couple of slip-shod years.

You sport lovers who devote some of your attention to field and track competition can't do too much to help boom that monster festival booked for Decoration Day on Parker Field. It's one safe bet that the cream of schoolboy athletic talent in Jersey will toss its hat into the ring on that occasion and if there aren't some hair-breadth decisions dealt out it won't be the fault of those entered. There'll be plenty of high school banners floating around the cinder-path at the Randolph avenue rendezvous and there'll be athletes galore to support these banners. If you happen to be too rusty to run a furlong or have too much lead in your supports to leap over the front porch railing do your little part of the boasting to make the affair one big success long to be remembered in Central Jersey.

Plainfield came as nearing to having a sport earthquake Saturday as it probably ever will. The reason, viz.: Leal School ball tossers copped a scalp in their initial setto. It's so long since the local private schoolboys have done anything to set the athletic world afire that the "big guns" in charge of the battle Saturday are having the time of their lives trying to pull their wits together again. Just to put a little sauce on top of the pudding Voorhees sent seventeen back to the bench via the "S. O." route.

If this fellow Voorhees manages to hold fast to this quick route habit of his there ought to be something coming Leal's way in the interscholastic league race this season. But then, they don't all fall as easily as Staten Island.

Bob Fitz, Jr., has started a school of pugilism up Dunellen way. Even if the youngster doesn't happen to be an aspirant for the heavyweight crown he has centainly inherited some of his grand old dad's publicity getting characteristics. The first thing the junior scrapper did after setting up a punching bag in his barn was to notify the news reporters that he was ready to be "writ up."

Two coaches of the calibre of those engaged by North Plainfield should certainly be able to disspell that jinx said to be lurking on the other side of the brook. Seldom does a day go by but what this hard luck bringer sticks his head above the horizon.

Plainfield High School footballers will train in the Maine woods this year, according to latest reports. If they use some of the big pines for tackling dummies they'll certainly be well tuned up by the time they are ready to rough it in the east.

'Smatter with the Sunday School League? Still, we don't wonder that the Sunday schoolers keep under cover after accepting the Slonim trophy as a merit award after such a season as last.

Who was it said something about Y. M. C. A. baseball about four weeks ago? When you give the other local nines the "once-over" you'll see that the association talent has become pretty widely distributed.

Looks as though some of our alley favorites were going to pin all summer. Next thing you know we'll be having outdoor lanes for this pastime.

North Plainfield skinned through another game Saturday afternoon. This time Brunswick schoolboys were the victims and the contest proved a "howling" success from more than one standpoint.

In the N. P. H. S.-Brunswick game while the players were not kicking at the "ump's" decisions they actually played baseball.

WILLARD IN PARLIAMENT.

Jess Willard has the unique distinction of figuring in hansard—the official minutes of Canada's sedate House of Commons. On the day of the Havana fight the House was engaged in an important debate, in which Premier Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier took part. The member who had the floor was proceeding in serious vein when a page put a note on his desk. The M. P. glanced at it and said: "For the information of the honorable gentlemen I may say that Willard won the fight in the twenty-sixth round." (Great applause.) After it had subsided the speaker went right along with his remarks, in the record of which Willard's victory became a part.

P. H. S. BOYS THERE WITH THE BINGLES

One High School Manages to Get Away From Somerville Alive With a Win.

With a fusilade of bingles the Plainfield High School baseball team banded a severe drubbing to Somerville High School at that place Saturday afternoon by a score of 11 to 1. Every member of the team except Hirsch secured at least one of the fourteen hits. Van Pelt, Somerville's pitching star, seemed to have nothing on the ball which the local youths could not solve. They gathered their hits in tight places and brought eleven men across the home sack on earned circuits.

Bennie Rosenson Came Through with Another One for Three Cushions.

The Plainfield team has found a wonder in the pitching line. He is none other than "Tone" Denny, a brother of "Jack," a former P. H. S. star. In the first four innings only twelve men got a chance at his curves. He allowed but three hits, and the run which Somerville got was through a mistake on the part of Umpire Smith, a former Plainfield High School youth. He called two strikes on Kershaw, and after Denny had handed over another strike, he again said it was two strikes, forgetting his former decision. Denny, thinking the man out, threw the ball away letting the only man who had reached third tally for his team.

The local boys scored three runs in the opening period of play when Rosenson, with two men on bases, slammed out a triple-sacker. Apgar sent him in on a sacrifice fly. In the eighth inning, with two down, the next three men up got hits, filling the bases, and on two errors brought three more counters over the tally bag.

The fielding of "Runt" O'Leary, on second base, was a feature of the game. He handled eight difficult chances without an error. Four of these were in tight places.

Ralph Runyon, of Plainfield High School, scored three points for his school in the New York University's annual field day games held Saturday afternoon. Over thirty schools of this section of the country were represented. Runyon finished second in the pole vault event, his mark being 10 feet 3 inches, while the winner's was 10 feet 9 inches. He was the only Plainfield entrant. Mercerburg won the N. Y. U. trophy with a total of 22½ points.

SPECTACULAR "STAB" ENDED A GOOD GAME

McDonough's Feat Causes Dispute and Subesquent Forfeit.

The initial baseball contest of the series between the St. Joseph's and St. Mary's T. A. B. teams, played on the Woodland avenue field Saturday afternoon, ended in an argument during which the St. Joseph players left the field. The game was well-played for eight innings, the boroughites leading their opponents by a 2 to 1 count.

McDonough's Scoop Started the Argument that Ended the Game.

In the last half of the ninth round, the T. A. B. team was at bat and had runners on first and second bases with none down. The ball was hit to right field and Andrew McDonough made the appearance of a spectacular one-hand "shoe string" catch. He then played the ball to first base where it was relayed to second, completing a double play, as both of the runners were attempting to score. The "Tabs" claimed that McDonough had made a pick-up of the fly and the umpire ruled in their favor. The borough players would not accept the decision and left the field. The umpire ruled a 9 to 0 victory for the St. Mary aggregation. The box score follows:

FLOYD M'FARLAND, FIRST MAN TO BRING A BIKE SEXTET TO PLAINFILED, MURDERED

Floyd A. MacFarland, world-famous as a six-day bicycle rider, was stabbed in the head with a screwdriver by David Lantinberg, a confectionery dealer, Saturday afternoon, at the Newark Velodrome, and died at 9 o'clock that night in the Newark City Hospital.

A charge of murder was made against Lantinberg by Police Captain Thomas J. Corbally, and he was locked up in the Seventh precinct station to await the action of the Essex county prosecutor.

The sharp edge of the screwdriver was driven into MacFarland's skull behind his left ear and penetrated the brain. MacFarland was taken to the hospital in Lantinberg's automobile. The physicians did not dare perform an operation.

MacFarland was general manager of the Cycle Racing Association and was in charge of the Velodrome. Lantinberg, whose home is at No. 240 Grafton avenue, Brooklyn, has a confectionery privilege at the track and was putting up a sign to which MacFarland objected. MacFarland asked him to take it down and Lantinberg is said to have refused.

Witnesses of the tragedy say that the cyclist argued several minutes and they both appeared to be getting angry. MacFarland then, it is said, attempted to push Lantinberg away from the sign.

It was at this moment that the latter, with the screwdriver in his right hand, is said to have struck at MacFarland with a sweeping blow.

As the screwdriver pierced the rider's skull he sank to the floor. He never regained consciousness. Riders who had been working out for yesterday's races leaped off their cycles and ran to MacFarland's assistance.

Lantinberg, alarmed at the effect of the blow, which evidently was harder than he had intended, rushed to his automobile and with the help of the riders put the injured man into the car and hurried him to the hospital.

Frank Mihlon, president of the Cycle Racing Association; Mrs. Mihlon, Frank Kramer, widely known bicycle racer, and John T. Chapman, former manager of the Velodrome, were at MacFarland's bedside when he died.

The races scheduled for yesterday were called off because of the tragedy.

MacFarland, as general manager of the Cycle Racing Association, had control of the tracks in Newark, Phildelphia, Chicago, New Haven, Boston, Brighton Beach and Toronto, and dictated the arrangements for all the meetings and decided upon all their features. He was regarded as the most prominent figure in America in the revival of bicycle racing.

His last important race was in 1911 in New Haven, where he won a ten-mile paced contest from Joe Fogler, Willie Fenn and Alfred Goullet. He won the 1900 6-day race at Madison Square Garden with Harry Elis. The 1908 Race he won with Jimmy Moran.

At the end of every season in American it was his custom to take the American riders with him on a trip to Paris, Berlin, Brussels and other European cities, where the long races were in vogue. He had the distinction of winning nearly every sort of cycling event from a quarter mile dash to the six-day grind.

MacFarland took the management of the Philadelphia track in 1912, and at the close of the year came to Newark, living at No. 73 North Munn avenue.

MacFarland was widely known in Plainfield, especially among members of the old Crescent Wheelmen and bicycling enthusiasts of twenty years ago. When the Crescent Oval, on Randolph road, was in its heyday MacFarland participated in all the big race meets, competing with such well-known riders as "Tom" Cooper, Earl Kaiser, Eddie Ball, A. A. Zimmerman, Orlando Stevens and Jay Eaton.

Mac Farland was the first man to bring a sextet into Plainfield, the six men on a bicycle creating a sensation. The bicycle riders always made their headquarters at the Hotel Grenada, now the Kensington.

The prizes will consist of gold, silver and bronze medals to be awarded to the athletes finishing first, second and third in all events except the relay races. The school obtaining the greatest number of points in the meet will have its name engraved on the Ross Cup, which will become the property of the school winning the meet three times. A plaque will be given to the school winning the meet, and silver and bronze medals to the first and second teams in the relay race, and a banner to the school winning the race.

Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools and Leal School have received entry blanks and will probably be represented.

FIRST CHANCE TO COMPARE LOCAL AND BORO TEAMS

Tomorrow afternoon the Plainfield High School baseball team will play New Brunswick High at Parker Field. Brick and Peacock will take charge of the battery work for the local team.

The result of this game will be watched with interest, for this team is the one that met defeat at the hands of North Plainfield last Saturday by a score of 5 o 3.

15,000 RAINBOW TROUT.

Newton, April 19—Fish and Game Warden J. D. Roe has announced that 15,000 rainbow trout will be received from the State hatchery at Hackettstown, to be deposited in the different lakes throughout Sussex county. The fish will measure from 9 to 11 inches in length.

HIGHLANDERS WIN.

The Highlanders and North Plainfield Stars met on the diamond Saturday, the former scoring a victory, the final count being 12 to 5. Bennett's hitting featured the contest.

CLIFF RANDOLPH ALLOWS BUT ONE SCRATCH HIT

Perty Amboy, April 19—The Perth Amboy Pacers won easily from the Baltimore Giants here yesterday. Randolph let the opposition down with one scratch hit.

Score by innings.

Baltimore Giants	0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 — 1
Perth Amboy	...5 1 0 0 0 0 3 0 x — 9

Batteries—Bradford, Mitchell and Johnson; Randolph and Bader.

RIFFERT HITTING GOOD.

Jack Riffert, formerly an athletic star in the Plainfield High School, played right field on the Swarthmore baseball team against Fordham Saturday. His team lost the game by a 4 to 2 decision by Riffert pounding out two singles. He has played right field on the team for two years.

How a Wizard of Illumination brought the Northern Lights to Great Panama-Pacific International Exposition

SAN FRANCISCO PALACES by NIGHT

By Edward H. Hurlbut.

7:45 P. M. Announcement salute, 8-inch shells.

7:50 P. M. Aurora borealis single beams; half sections and sections of four, and in column of batteries. Scotch plaids dissolving and expanding in unit beams and in half sections and sections of four.

8:49 P. M. Beam dance. Form beacon, white light concentrating Batteries A and B over the Column of Progress and concentrating entire battery in white light on Tower of Jewels. Change in the following order: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6. Battery A form aurora borealis Exposition colors with center on Column of Progress. Change formation to sections of four——"

This hasn't anything to do with the war. San Francisco is not marshalling the coast artillery to repel an invading force—not a hostile invading force at any rate. It is something quite different. It is the illumination chief of the Panama Pacific International Exposition issuing orders to his aides de camp preparatory to releasing on a brief parole the Aurora Borealis.

The Aurora is in captivity at the exposition and for a few minutes each night the resplendent hues that flame in the gloom of the Arctic night will flame as gloriously under temperate skies.

It's merely a little trifle of science. Of course, the original Aurora Borealis wouldn't have achieved such a place in history, fact and fiction had it not been for the thing science knows as the spectrum. Any first grade high school boy with his elementary physics could tell you that. They brought everything to this world's exposition from all the 180 degrees of latitude and the 360 degrees that cross and circle the globe. There was only one thing left—the Aurora Borealis. Some bright mind—President Moore, Director of Works Connick, Chief of Color Jules Guerin, or possibly the publicity director, George Hough Perry—happened to think of the perennial wonder of the frozen lands north of fifty-three.

So they sent for the Chief of Illumination, W. D'A. Ryan. Ryan had already produced marvels in lighting. It was put up to him to take that same little spectrum and rifle it of the secret of the Aurora Borealis. It was one of those simple little commissions which the exposition directors have had such a habit of lightly distributing.

But—well have they selected their men—it was a commission executed with the same expedition and success that the commission was executed, for instance, to build the largest frame structure under one roof in the world today; that the commission was executed to paint on exterior walls mural canvases by famous artists, when such a thing had never been done before; that the commission was executed to create here a new and distinctively western school of architecture; that the commission was executed to paint an exposition in color for the first time in history; that the commission was executed to produce a landscape effect that gives the seeming of gardens rooted for a generation.

However he did it—this little trifle of science—Ryan executed his commission. The Aurora Borealis is here.

Located on the yacht harbor of the exposition is a miniature Morro castle—combining, oddly enough, the tropics with the temperate zone in this arctic circle feature—and in this castle is a scintillator of 3,600,000,000 candle power. From this the Aurora Borealis bursts in effulgence and glory, mile on mile in spread, from the Golden Gate to timbered Tamalpais and down the stretches of the bay to touch with friendly greeting the rooky old whalers tied up for the season in the placid anchorages of the estuary.

It takes scores of giant projectors with many colored lenses besides this stupendous scintillator to complete the effect, and a company of men to man them. They work by batteries The system of operation is as methodical and as intricate as the manning of a coast defense battery. Hence the codified directions of Mr. Ryan to his staff. Only, rather than repelling invaders, the sum and total of this entire grand effect of illumination, is to invite and hold visitors. The extracts given from the "manual of operation" are but three out of thirty-three. No display lasts longer than five minutes and many of the lighting effects whirl one after the other at minute intervals.

The Aurora Borealis is by no means the only spectacular effect. There is the grand illumination of the exposition, including Alcatraz Island and the hills of Marin, across the bay. There is the Beam dance, Spook's parade, Plumes of Paradise, Cloud salvo, Devil's Fan, Chromatic Wheels, Fairy Feathers and the Sunburst. Sunset clouds burst forth in the night and grotesque figures move across the heavens marked by the rays of searchlights. Steam serpents spit and hiss as they gyrate. Mines explode into great banks of smoke giving forth radiations of every known shade and tint, and many that the average person does not know. There are in all 300 effects worked out by the Scintillator in addition to the Aurora Borealis.

But Mr. Ryan would not thank anyone to center him entirely in his Aurora Borealis, which is classed rather as an attraction feature. It is in the utility phase of the science of illumination—or the art, for Mr. Ryan has made of his illumination an art—that the effects of most profound revelation in lighting are secured. And yet, without the color scheme of Mr. Jules Guerin—not Monsieur, as Guerin complains, for he is exceedingly democratic and everyday American—these lighting effects, colorful though they are, would fail of their richness. The man who deals with carbons, filaments, amperes and voltages is not generally held to carry in his system the temperament of the man who deals in colors and canvases. But Mr. Ryan is a temperamental mechanic. There is a great deal of the poet in him. He has occasional glimpses into the fourth dimension, just as the artist and the sculptor and the master writer have.

That is why Guerin and Ryan have worked out so esthetically the scheme of this exposition, by which color and light are co-ordinated as nature intended they should be. Initially, the color scheme of the exposition was designed to merge this vast artificial creation with the setting of nature in which it has been placed. Glints of greens blend with lawn and landscape; browns and russets with hill and sandy beaches; ultramarines with the changing hues of the bay before; reds with the sunset tints that aureate the Golden Gate and cerulean blue that reflects the tones of the skies above.

It is a poetical conception: a dreamy, radiant glowing that envelops the practical detail of ground and dimension, with the glorious investiture of some new creation of enchantment by the fabled god of light.

To handle superlatives with conviction is the particular ability of a Carlyle or a circus press agent. Between these two extremes of intellectual effort the average writer makes a sorry mess. When the bald statement is made that the exposition lighting is an achievement in the superlative everything has been said. It is a step ahead of anything that has been attempted. On the entire area of the exposition—except alone in the Zone, where a carnival atmosphere is sought—there is not an arc light or an incandescent to fret the eye. Flood and indirect lighting have been developed to an extent where the facades, colonnades, towers and domes of the mighty palaces glow under the subdued rays of concealed lights as they do by day.

There are eight colors used in the exposition scheme and it is on these rich tones and tints that the lights play with enchanting effect. Travertine, a buff or old ivory in successful imitation of Italian Travertine stone, is the foundation color of the exposition. Against this is used French green, in lattices, flower tubs, curbing of grass plats, etc., oxidized copper green, a peculiar mottled green used on ten of the domes to give the effect of age and afford a pleasing though subdued contrast with the sky; blue green; pinkish red green, used on the flagpoles; wall red, in three tones, found in the backgrounds of colonnades, niches, arches, sculpture; yellow-golden-orange, largely used in enriching the Travertine and in deepening shadow effects; cerulean and Oriental blue, verging upon green and used in ceilings and vaulted recesses, coffers, and in the background of ornamentation; gray and verde antique.

To these colors all artists employed at the exposition were restricted.

In harmony with these colors are the lighting effects. Throwing forth in mellow, incarnadined relief a lofty platform of columns here, or emphasizing the cloistered depths of a recessed colonnade there, the beams and rays bathe the undulating opalescent expanse in a shifting, shimmering kaliedoscope. Centered on the two dominating sculptured groups—the Nations of the East and the Nations of the West—are searchlights which lift these Homeric groups apart from their architectural environment and from a distance the illusion is complete of the theme on which the exposition is founded: the meetings of the nations of the world. The mighty elephant with brilliant howdah that centers the one group seems marching, with attendant Arabs, Shieks and Mohameddans, across the Court of the Universe, to meet the advancing prairie schooner and cowboys, Indians and pioneers which are grouped around the great wagon of the companion group. It is precisely as though one saw, silhouetted in evening russets against the horizon, the living cavalcades.

Elsewhere spraying and playing fountains are centered in radiance; individual bits of sculpture picked out by a vagrant ray in the foliage; fluttering standards and gonfalons in the colors of red, orange and blue; while high in the heavens, as fireworks release them, the flags of all the nations float downward with the breeze, followed in their course by detective searchlights.

From the Aurora to the last tiny beam of cardinal that seeks out a sequestered nook and illuminates some appropriate sculptured figure from the Arabian nights the illusion of forgotten dreams of childhood's embowered, empurpled visualization of faryland and fable, is complete. It is something that long will linger, this vision by night that bursts in glory under the release keys of Mr. Ryan's magic switchboard.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Count Wants the Castle.

I SAW them board the train. In my heart there was the memory of a dozen kisses I had bestowed in repentant horror upon the half asleep Rosemary, who, God bless her little soul, cried bitterly on being torn away from my embrace.

"Well," said Billy Smith, taking me by the arm a few minutes later, "let's have a bite to eat and a cold bottle before we go to bed, old chap. I hope to heaven she gets through all right I am strong for her, aren't you?"

"I am," said I, with conviction, coming out of a daze.

He led me off to a cafe, where he seemed to be more or less at home, and where it was bright and gay for him but gloomier than the grave to me.

* * * * * * *

I drove the car home the next day. When he got down at the garage, Britton shivered and drew a prodigious breath. It was as if he had not breathed for hours. We had gone the distance in little more than half the time taken on the trip down.

"My word, sir," was all he said, but there was a significant tremor in his voice. It smacked of pride.

Mrs. Titus placidly inquired how we had got along and appeared quite relieved when I told her we had caught the train at K. Jasper junior revealed a genuine interest in the enterprise, but spoiled it all by saying that Aline, now prematurely safe, was most likely to leap out of the frying pan into the fire by marrying some blithering foreigner and having the whole beastly business to do over again.

"How soon do they go?" asked Poopendyke late that afternoon, after listening to Mrs. Titus' amiable prophecies concerning Aline's future activities and getting my harassed ear in a moment of least resistance.

"I don't know," said I hopelessly. I had heard about all I could endure concerning his lordship's magnificent estates in England, and the sort of a lord he was besides. "There's nothing to do but wait, Fred."

"She is a remarkably fine woman, but"— He completed the estimate by shaking his head, trusting to my intelligence, I suppose.

We waited two days for word from the fugitives. Late in the afternoon of the second day Britton returned from town with a telegram for me. It said:

Cargo safely aboard Pendennis, Captain Pardee commanding. Clear at 2 today. Everything satisfactory. C. G. RAFT

No sooner was this reassuring news received than Mrs. Titus complacently set about having her trunks packed. The entire household was in a stew of activity, for she had suddenly decided to catch the 8 o'clock train for Paris. I telephoned to reserve accommodation on the Orient express from Vienna and also to have it stopped at the town across the river, a concession secured at a no inconsiderable cost.

She was to travel once more as my mother.

"You will not fail to look us up when you come to New York, will you, Mr. Smart? Mr. Titus will not be happy until he has expressed to you in person his endless gratitude. You have been splendid. We shall never forget your kindness, your thoughtfulness, your—your forbearance. I—I"—

Upon my word, there were real tears in the dear lady's eyes! I forgot and forgave much in recognition of this instant of genuine feeling on her part. It was not necessary for her to complete the sentence so humbly begun.

Their departure was made with some degree of caution. Mrs. Titus rather considerately reminding herself that my interests were at stake. I saw them aboard the train. She played her part admirably—I will say that for her. She lifted her veil so that I could bestow a farewell filial kiss upon her cheek. Jasper junior's eyes popped very wide open at this, and as he shook my hand warmly at parting he said:

"You are a wonder, John—a sure enough wonder. Why, hang it all, she doesn't even let dad do that."

But Jasper junior was very young, and he couldn't understand.

At last we were to ourselves, my extensive household and I. Late that night I sat in my study considering the best means of reducing my staff of servants and in computing, with dismay, the cost of being a princely host to people who had not the least notion what it meant to do sums in economic subtraction. It was soon apparent to me that retrenchment, stern and relentless, would have to follow upon my wild though brief season of profligacy. I decided to dismiss the scullery maid.

I was indescribably lonely. Poopendyke was worried about my pallor, my lassitude. At the end of a week he took it upon himself to drop a line to the Hazzards, urging them to run out for a visit in the hope that company might take me out of myself. All attempts to renew my work on the ill fated novel met with utter failure. The power of mental concentration was gone. I spent most of my time in the garden.

The Hazzards came and with them the joyously beautiful Betty Billy Poopendyke must have prepared them for the task in hand, for they proceeded at once to transform the bleak, dreary old castle into a sort of hilarious merry go round, with me in the very vortex of it all. They succeeded in taking me "out of myself," I will say that for them. My spirits took an upward bound and, wonderful to relate, retained their altitude in spite of all I could do to lower them. I did not want to be happy. I figured that I owed it to my recently aroused temperament to be permanently unhappy. But the wind blew another way, and I drifted amiably with it, as a derelict drifts with the currents of the ocean, but preferably with the warm gulf stream.

We had word from Mrs. Titus in London that negotiations had been reopened with the count and that a compromise might be expected. The obdurate nobleman had agreed, it seemed, to meet Jasper Titus' lawyers in Paris at no distant date. My chief concern, however, was for the countess herself. That she had successfully reached the high seas was apparent; if not, the newspapers, which I read with eagerness, would have been filled with accounts of her seizure. We eagerly awaited the promised cablegram from New York announcing her safe arrival there.

Smith joined us at the end of the week. I nerved myself to question him about the Englishman.

"Splendid fellow," said he, with discouraging fervor; "one of the finest chaps I know, eh, George?"

"For an Englishman," admitted Hazzard.

"He's a gentleman, and that's more than you can say for the tagtag of nobility that paid court to Aline Tarnowsy. He was in love with her, but he was a gentleman about it. A thoroughbred, I say."

"Good looking?" I inquired.

"Well, rather—the sort of chap women rave about. Ask Betty. She was mad about him, but he couldn't see anything in her. I think she hates him now. He had eyes for no one but the fair countess. An awful grind on Betty. She's used to something different."

Hazzard studied the clouds that drifted over our heads. "I wonder if Aline cared anything for him."

"I've always believed that she liked him better than she cared to admit even to herself."

"I fancy he'll not let any grass grow under his feet now that she's free," said Dr. Hazzard.

"Think she'll have him?"

"Why not? He has a much better position in England than Tarnowsy has here, and he's not after her money. I hate to say it, but Aline is a seeker after titles. She wouldn't be averse to adding 'your ladyship' to her collection."

"Oh, come!" I protested. "That is a nasty thing to say, George."

"She may have been regenerated," he said obligingly. "You know her better than I do, old chap. What say?"

"I didn't say anything," I muttered.

"I thought you did."

I hesitated a moment and then purged myself of the truth. "As a matter of fact, I have reason to believe she's in love with Amberdale and has been for a long time. I'm not saying it in disparagement, believe me. God knows she's entitled to something decent and fine in the shape of love. I hope he's good enough for her."

They looked at me with interest, and Smith broke the momentary silence.

"Oh, he's good enough for her," he said, with a queer smile.

"I'm glad of that," I said gruffly.

"The old la—I mean Mrs. Titus—will be tickled to death if the match is pulled off," said Hazzard.

"She was tickled the first time," said I sententiously, and changed the subject. There was no sense in prolonging the agony.

Toward the close of their visit a message arrived from the countess herself, signed with the fictitious name we had agreed upon. The news she gave caused us to celebrate that night. We had a bonfire in the courtyard and drank to the god of good luck.

Cargo safely landed in New York and forwarded to the Adirondacks for storage and to await the appearance of a claimant. Former owner has agreed to accept $1,500,000 and release all claims. When are you coming over? ALROSE.

By the most extraordinary coincidence a curt, businesslike letter arrived in the evening post from Maris Tarnowsy postmarked Paris. Its contents staggered me.

John Bellamy Smart, Esq.:

Dear Mr. Smart—Will you put a price on Schloss Rothhoefen? I am desirous of purchasing the castle if you care to sell and we can agree upon a fair price for the property. Sentiment moves me in this matter, and I earnestly hope that you may be induced to part with your white elephant. If you will be so kind as to wire your decision, you will find me deeply grateful and at the Ritz for the ensuing fortnight. Faithfully yours,

MARIS TARNOWSY.

My "white elephant!" I was so eager to get rid of it that I would have wired at once, naming a figure proportionately low had it not been for the united protests of my four friends and the canny advice of Mr. Poopendyke.

"Soak him!" said he, and I arose to the occasion.

I waited for three days and then telegraphed him that I would not take a heller less than $250,000, more than doubling the price I had paid for the property. I was prepared, however, to come down a paltry hundred thousand or so if he revealed signs of reluctance.

We built another bonfire that night and danced around it like so many savages.

Terms acceptable. Will come to Schloss Rothhoefen at once to complete the transfer TARNOWSY.

Accompanied by Hazzard and Smith, I went over the castle from top to bottom in quest of the reason for Tarnowsy's prompt acceptance of my demand. We had no doubt that he had a good and sufficient reason for wanting the place, and but one thing suggested itself to our imagination; his absolute certainty that treasure was hidden somewhere about the venerable pile, treasure of considerable magnitude, you may be sure, or he would not have revealed such alacrity in accepting my terms. Sentiment had nothing to do with this surprising move on his part. That was all bosh. He had an ulterior motive, and it was for me to get the better of him at his own game if I could. While I was eager to get rid of the castle at any price, I did not relish the thought of being laughed at for a fool by Maris Tarnowsy after he had laid his greedy hands upon treasure that had been mine without my knowledge.

He was no fool. The castle meant nothing to him as a home or as an investment. No doubt he would blow it to pieces in order to unearth the thing he knew its walls secreted.

We spent two unprofitable days in going over the place, and in the end sank down tired, defeated and without the slightest evidence in our possession that so much as a half crown lay hidden there as treasure trove. I gave in and announced that if Tarnowsy could find anything worth having he was entitled to it so far as I was concerned, and I wouldn't begrudge him a farthing's worth.

He telegraphed that he would arrive on the morning of the third day, accompanied by his lawyer, a notary and an architect. My four guests departed in haste by the late night train after extracting a promise from me to join them in Vienna when I was no longer the master of Schloss Rothhoefen. I rather relished the thought of a brief vacation.

Then, like the spider, I crept back into my web and waited for the foolish fly, knowing all the time that he would have the better of me in the long run.

I confess to a feeling of sadness in parting with the place, after all, elephantine though it was in every sense of the word. Within its gray and ancient walls that beautiful thing called love had come to me to live with me forever. It had come unbidden, against my will, against my better judgment and in spite of my prejudices, but still it was a thing to cherish and to hold in its virgin youth all through the long years to come. It would always be young and sweet and rose colored, this unrequited love of mine. Walking through the empty, dismantled rooms that had once been hers, I grew sick with longing and in something like fear fled downward, absurd tears blinding my eyes. Verily, I was a fool—a monstrous, silly fool!

Tarnowsy was as bland and smiling as a May morning as he came jauntily down the great hall to where I awaited him.

"I am here incognito, my dear Smart," he said, extending his gloved hand, which I took perforce. "Sub rosa, you might say," he went on, with a wry smile. "A stupid, unchivalric empire has designs upon me, perfunctorily perhaps, but it's just as well not to stir up the monkeys, as you Americans would put it."

"Our late friend, the baron, was not totally without friends, I take it," said I dryly.

He made a grimace. "Nor enemies," he declared. "Brave men usually have more enemies than friends, and he was a brave man, a truly brave man. Because he was a brave man I have no feeling of regret over the outcome of our—er—meeting. It is no honor to kill a coward, Mr. Smart."

He introduced his three companions. I was surprised to see that the lawyer was not the fawning Schymansky and later on inquired for him. Tarnowsy laughed. "Poor old Schymansky! He is in prison."

"Aha! I am not surprised," said I.

"He was my second, poor chap. It did not occur to him to run away after the—er—duel. They had to make an example of some one. His trial comes up next week. I am afraid he may be dealt with rather harshly. I miss him dreadfully. But let us come to the matter in hand, Mr. Smart. I daresay your time is valuable. You have no objection to my going over the place with Mr. Saks, I am sure. He is the architect who is to rebuild the castle for me. My attorney and Mr. Pooly, the notary, will, with your assistance, draw up the proper contracts preliminary to the formal transfer, and I will sign them with you upon my return."

"Would it not be better to discuss the question of payments before we go any further, Count Tarnowsy?"

"You will be paid in cash, Mr. Smart, the instant the deed is transferred," he said coldly.

I followed him to the top of the stairs which descended to the basement of the castle. It was rather significant that he elected to explore the lower regions first of all.

"I shall accompany you," said I deliberately.

A faint scowl came into his face. He eyed me fixedly for a moment, then shrugged his shoulders and said that his only desire was to avoid putting me to any unnecessary trouble. If I cared to come he would be more than grateful.

"It isn't necessary to visit the cellars, Saks," he said to the architect. "Ample time for that sort of rummaging. I particularly want your opinion on the condition of the intersecting walls on this floor and above. My scheme of improvement, Mr. Smart, contemplates the enlargement of these halls by throwing them into one."

"A very simple process," said I, "if the whole structure doesn't topple down upon your heads while you're about it."

"I shall contrive to save my scalp, Mr. Smart, no matter what happens. It is very precious to me."

Runaway June

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

"Why, Ned!" she called, shaking his arm and looking at the eyes from which the light of reason seemed to have fled. "Ned, listen to me. It's Iris! Don't you see? This is a motion picture studio!"

They all had to repeat it again and again before they could reach his dazed intelligence. He had seen but two objects in all this huge room, crowded with its moving picture machines, its properties, its scenery, its banks of strange lights, and those two objects had been his runaway bride and Gilbert Blye.

June! She stood now supported by her father and mother, her large, lustrous eyes turned appealingly on Ned, waiting the moment when she dared approach him again.

"Don't you understand, Ned?" she frantically cried. "Won't you understand? It's a motion picture play!"

Slowly he turned his glassy eyes in her direction. He comprehended at last, but there was no softening in his face, for there still stood the dark, handsome Gilbert Blye. Ned made a sudden lunge for his enemy, but Officer Dowd, watching him narrowly, stopped him.

"You have been with that man ever since you left me!" savagely charged Ned, turning suddenly toward the trembling June and shaking his finger at her.

In the abandoned bank room below Bill Wolf stood near a dusty window with Honoria Blye and rolled out before her a bill, yards long, covering all the separate items of his sleuthing on the trail of Gilbert Blye and June Warner.

"Go over the list, ma'am, item by item," confidently invited the faithful detective. "You'll find them correct. And here's a check on your own bank, all ready and made out for you to sign, and here's a fountain pen, ma'am."

Honoria Blye took the long list and began to check it off, item by item.

In the studio above a score of indignant eyes turned on Ned Warner, and there was a loud chorus of protest as he pointed accusingly at his unhappy runaway bride.

"What do you mean?" demanded the cold, stern voice of Gilbert Blye, and he advanced, his black eyes glowing. "This girl has done no wrong!"

They all talked at once, and they all talked indignantly at Ned Warner—Tommy Thomas, the white mustached Orin Cunningham, the round headed Edwards, Marie, Officer Dowd, Bobbie and Iris Blethering and all the camera men and members of the Blye Stock company. According to them, June Warner was the sweetest and best little wife any man dared wish for, and if Ned Warner chose to criticise her in any way he would have to answer to every person here, including fat old black Aunt Debby, who breasted straight up to him, waddling her voluminous self defiantly from side to side.

"Looky hyah, you, Mr. Ned!" she flared, and Bouncer, who had been rushing around the separated bride and groom, stopped to bark ferociously up at Ned. "Ain't that Marie been with our honey ever since she done come an' got her clothes? Ain't you got no gumption? Why, looky hyah, if you say a word about our Miss Junie I'll jest about squash you!"

Iris and Father and Mother Moore bent forward eagerly toward Ned, and all smiled reassuringly. Then father Moore turned to June.

"My daughter," he said, "come home."

Mother and daughter wept in each other's arms.

CHAPTER II.

"NED!" It was a pathetic little figure which turned appealingly to the scowling young man. Her big eyes were full of tears. "It was all a mistake, dear!"

She choked back her tears, and there was a tense silence, in which Ned Warner stood with cold eyes and folded arms waiting.

"Oh, Ned, can't I make you see and understand?" And there was a piteous wistfulness about her. "We were all so happy on that day of our wedding, so happy as we started on our honeymoon trip! And when we stood alone in the Pullman drawing room, surrounded by our white ribboned baggage, there seemed to be no cloud in our sky!"

"Then why did you leave me?" Ned Warner's voice was harsh.

"It was the money!" Her lip trembled. "Don't you remember when I missed my purse? The porter came in just then, and you gave him a dollar. When he went out you gave me $30 and in just the same generous way you gave it to the negro. The difference was $29."

They were all startled by the force of the comparison. Only Gilbert Blye smiled, and the smile did not escape Ned.

"Do you remember I cried and you put my head on your shoulder? You thought I was tired, but I cried from humiliation. I felt like a beggar. I realized that for the rest of my life I would have to accept gifts of money from you. Then I dreamed about it. I dreamed that I was a piteous little beggar, always holding out my palms for alms; that I was receiving pay for being your wife just as mother paid Aunt Debby and Marie." Both Aunt Debby and Marie sniffed sympathetically. "And last of all I dreamed that I was being dragged home from the altar by a ring in the nose as the savages of old dragged home their brides. And when the train stopped and woke me up I couldn't stand it. I threw down your money and ran from the train."

"To meet this man!" interrupted Ned sternly. "Gilbert Blye was waiting on the station platform at Tarnville." And he noted that June looked at him in surprise.

"Hold on there!" Gilbert Blye spoke sharply. "I was waiting, but for a New York train. I had been to our Tarnville factory. I saw this beautiful girl on the platform and thought immediately what a good motion picture subject she would be. I was right. She screens perfectly." And he smiled approvingly at June.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

DARING? YES! BUT ACTUALLY WORN, THIS NEW STYLE!

This striking, yet severely simple walking costume appeared a few weeks ago, and several fashionable women have taken up the style and are having similar suits made to order. The mannish coat is of navy serge; skirt and trousers of striped blue and white serge. The feature of the suit is the mannish coat with its long revers and low pockets. Skirt and coat without the rather sensational trousers will make the ideal walking costume this summer.

NEWEST SKIRTS SHOW A DECIDED FLARE.

Delightful and smart are the new wide skirts. Not only graceful and comely, but they are a pleasant relief from the narrow skirts that preceded them, and will be gratefully welcomed everywhere. A particularly pleasing design, having circular flounces and narrow vertical panels suggestive of the Princess gowns, is Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8885. Sheer lawns, sprigged with Dolly Vardon flowers, make up charmingly with this pattern. Printed China silks and pussy willow taffetas are popular and are adaptable to this design. The dress opens in the back and has V-neck with roll or flat collar, full-length and short puff sleeves, chemisette with standing collar and skirt is five-gored with applied trimming bands and three gathered circular flounces. Pattern cuts in sizes 32 to 42 inches bust measure, requiring in size 36, 7⅝ yards 36-inch material, with 1⅝ yards 27-inch contrasting material, ⅝ yard 27-inch net for chemisette, and ⅝ yard 36-inch silk for bias bindings.

Patterns can be purchased at the store of A. E. Force & Company.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

The family carriage containing Father and Mother Morton drove down the lane on the way to church, in spite of the fact that the thermometer registered the greatest heat of the season. Nothing short of a cyclone would have kept the old lady from church.

There was no grass between the fields and the road and the long rows of corn stood wilting in the parching heat. A sudden breeze rustled the dry leaves of the cottonwood and struck the cheek like a blast from a furnace. The highway lay bare and empty in the quivering heat.

Suddenly in front of them, from a neighbor's lane, shambled an old white horse; on his back sat a barefoot boy in blue overalls. He stopped whistling as they approached him and drew up his steed by pulling on its mane.

"Morning!" He touched the wide brim of his straw hat, out of the broken top of which protruded a shock of red hair.

"I was just riding over to your place to take a letter father got on Friday. He had it in his pocket and forgot to send it over. He said he hoped it was nothing important."

The old man took the letter, then clasped the lines between his knees while he fumbled for his glasses. When they were adjusted he read: "Mrs. Richard Morton." "Oh, that's Dick's wife; she is at the house. Would you mind taking it over there?"

"Sure, I'll take it over," and the boy reached for the letter, slapped the mare's flank with his palm and urged the ancient animal into an awkward trot.

Nell and Dick had wandered from place to place, trying to find a comfortable spot and were in the hammock under the apple tree when the old horse ambled up the lane.

"Who can it be from? I do not know the handwriting," said Nell as the whistling youngster rode away. She tore open the envelope and drew out two letters. Opening one, she read:

"Dear Mrs. Morton: I am taking the liberty of sending the enclosed letter as it nearly concerns you. It was found in Miss Rudolph's waste-paper basket by Mrs. Brown's maid. She gave it to my maid. Knowing that you are my friend, my maid very properly brought it to me.

"You did not choose to heed my friendly warning, but you can no longer refuse to believe the truth.

"Your friend and well wisher,

"Anna Ellson."

The other letter was a crumpled scrap of paper in a round girlish hand. Nell read:

"Dear Chum: Your interesting letter telling of the conquest of the handsome young Dick came Saturday. I never would dare carry on a flirtation right under a wife's nose. Believe me, it's dangerous. You say the young man is devoted to you, but dare not be seen with you because of the talk, so the daily walks are abandoned. Do be careful. I knew a girl who lost her position because of such a conquest. I never flirt with a mar—" here the page was torn off.

Nell looked at Dick. He was serenely lying back in the hammock smoking.

"Read that!" she commanded, throwing the letters at him and starting for the house almost on a run.

Household Hints

WORTH KNOWING

To curl ostrich feathers after being out in the rain, hang hat upside down over a heater or stove, shaking occasionally. This will make them curl up again.

Stove Polish — When applying stove polish, whether of the liquid or paste variety, use a small paint brush, for it does not soil the hands and reaches all the corners and the little seams so hard to get at any other way. The brush when not in use should be kept in a cupful of water to prevent it hardening.

Sewing Hint—To prevent a placket from tearing, fasten the last hook and eye, and hammer them together. The strain will come on them and not on the goods.

Crisp Crust—Before filling in a pie, run some white of egg thinly over the bottom crust. This prevents the juice from soaking into the bottom crust and making it soggy.

Setting colors—Red and pink may be permanently set by dipping material into turpentine. This is particularly useful when using these colors to trim garments.

A LITTLE PLANNING CUTS DOWN HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES

When wheat flour is high, cut down the allowance of white bread and use instead whole wheat, graham and corn breads and muffins. Since entire wheat flour contains all the gluten of the wheat it is only logical that a loaf of whole wheat bread, with its added degree of food value, will "go farther" than a white loaf and it is not difficult for one's taste to become educated to it. Graham bread is a close second to entire wheat, either of them containing considerably more proteid, fat and mineral matter than the white loaf.

Use more of the cereals, oatmeal, cornmeal, rice and barley and buy them in bulk from a reliable grocer.

These will come to you as wholesome as the boxed varieties and considerably cheaper.

Use less pastry desserts.

Upon this I would place special stress, as many people forget to include them in the process of elimination. Sustitute for them fresh, stewed or canned fruits, custards, puddings of left-over cereals, cornstrach and gelatine.

Your stomach will be the gainer thereby, this being one of the instances which justify the saying: "Great are the uses of adversity."

To lower your meat bills and even up expenditures, learn about and use the many good combinations of rice and meats and rice vegetables.

Delicious cream soups, splendid in food value, can be prepared from rice and badley; while baked rice with cheese and rice griddle cakes, croquettes and various desserts are still to be tried by many.

The following recipes may be helpful in combating the high price bugaboo.

Southern Beef and Rice—This quantity will serve four and is delicious and inexpensive. To one-half pound of ground round steak (raw) add one cupful of boiled rice, one cupful canned tomato, one small onion cut into bits, one teaspoonful butter, salt and pepper. Bake in a moderate oven about one hour.

Carrots and Rice—Put through the food grinder two medium sized carrots, add one and one-half cupfuls of rice, one tablespoonful butter, onion cut into bits, salt and pepper, pint of milk. Bake in moderate oven one hour.

Entire Wheat Bread—To two cups of scalded milk ad done-fourth cup of sugar or one-third cup molasses and one teaspoonful salt. Dissolve one cake of compressed yeast in one-fourth cup lukewarm water. Add to first mixture dissolved yeast cake and four and two-thirds cups of entire wheat flour. Beat well, cover and let rise to double its bulk. Beat again, turn into greased bread pans, filling the pans about one-half. Let rise to not quite double its bulk and bake.

Corn Bread—Mix and sift three-fourths cup cornmeal, one and one-fourth cups wheat flour, one-fourth cup of sugar, five teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt. Add one cup of milk, one well beaten egg, and one and one-half tablespoons of melted butter. Bake in shallow greased pan in hot oven about a half hour. Serve with butter and maple syrup.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

How the Animals Made Garden.

The summer vacation in Animal town
Is always a lively affair,
For the children go out to good Mother McGrew's
And spend their vacation time there.

And each time they go there the animals find
That thoughtful old Mother McGrew
Has planned some new game or some interesting thing
That she thinks they'll be happy to do.

Last summer as soon as they got there she said:
"I have a most excellent plan;
Suppose you make gardens of your very own,
And raise things to eat if you can."

The animals hailed the idea with delight,
And all fell to planning with zest;
Each said to the other, "I feel very sure
That my garden plot will be best."

Now none of them had the remotest idea
Of vegetable gardens, and so
The questions they asked were as queer as could be
Regarding the things they should grow.

For instance, when Mother McGrew said, "I think I'll let you plant just what you please,"
Miranda Mouse squealed with excitement and said,
"Then I'll have a garden of cheese."

But when good old Mother McGrew had explained
To them just how gardens are made,
They said, "We are sure this is going to be
The nicest game we ever played."

Then she said to her children, "Tomorrow we'll start
To work if the weather is bright."
Of the queer things they did, and the fun that they had,
I'll tell you the next time I write.

WOMEN DISCUSS FAMOUS WRITERS

Literary Department of Monday Afternoon Club Hold Final Meeting.

RESUME OF STORIES

The Works of American Authors Are Presented in An Interesting Manner—Publisher of Atlantic Monthly to Speak Here May 3.

The final meeting of the literary department of the Monday Afternoon Club was held yesterday afternoon in the Parish House of the Congregational church, Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard, chairman of the department, presiding. The afternoon was devoted to readings and discussion of American writers and short stories.

Mrs. Henry M. Maxson read an unusually interesting paper on "American Magazine Writers," treating her subject in a critic's manner. She illustrated her topic with the works of such noted authors as Booth Tarkington, Henry Sidney Harrison, Francis Hopkinson Smith, and Mary E. Wilkins. The attention of the members of the department was called to the story "Some Mothers and Others," which was written by Mrs. Charles L. Sykes' son.

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller led the discussion on "Is Magazine Fiction Deteriorating" in a splendid manner, giving her views on the subject from much time and study given to the reading of stories. She took the affirmative side of the issue and substantiated her claim by many points. In her treatment of the subject she took that part of the magazine which embodies the short story. Her definition of a good short story was that it should contain certain qualities, namely, it must have an objective point and sustain interest throughout the narrative. Because of the enormous increase in the publication of magazines in the last twenty-five years there is a decadance in the short stories. Mrs. Miller declared that the present work of Mary Wilkins and Kipling is not up to their standards of a few years ago. The tendency of many writers is to leave the reader in the middle of the narrative and let him finish the plot for himself. The speaker deplored the number of immoral stories that are written, many of them foolish and silly, but still carrying much influence with the middle classes and do much harm in the formation of ideas in the minds of the young.

On Monday afternoon, May 3, the members of the club will have the pleasure of listening to an address by the publisher of the Atlantic Monthly. In connection with this meeting, a business session will precede the department meeting promptly at 3 o'clock, which all members are urged to attend.

PUNISH WASHINGTON SCHOOL ROWDIES

Mayor Takes Matter up, and Officer Will Arrest First Disorderly Pupil.

The rowdyism by pupils at the Washington School has been brought to the attention of Mayor Calkins, and drastic steps will be made to put it to a stop. For some time a lot of the boys and some of the larger girls have been making life miserable for people in the vicinity of the school at the noon hour and after school in the afternoon.

Complaint was made to the Mayor, yesterday, and he immediately took the matter up with Superintendent of Schools H. M. Maxson, suggesting that as the janitors were special policemen, they might be able to stop the practice. It was also suggested that the school be called together and the riot act be read to the youngsters. Dr. Maxson said that this had been done, and all the threatening that could be made had not the desired effect.

Patrolman McGinley will be sent to the school at the time when the rowdyism usually takes place, and with instructions to arrest the first disorderly pupil, so it is now probable that the trouble will be stopped. The police have the names of the ringleaders in the trouble, and if they do not behave themselves in the future, they will regret it, according to the Mayor.

YOEMEN OBSERVE ORDER'S BIRTHDAY

Queen City Homestead Celebrates the Eighteenth of the B. of A. Y.

Queen City Homestead, No. 4996, Brotherhood of American Yeomen, enjoyed a social evening in its hall, at 109 Park avenue, last night, in connection with a celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of the order. The ceremonies followed a class initiation, during which three candidates were admitted to membership.

Irving Kunzman was master of ceremonies, and the program given under his direction was enjoyed by a large gathering of guests, to whom the doors were opened after the initiatory work. Chief Deputy Yeoman W. T. Morgan, of this city, gave an interesting address, in which he reviewed what had been accomplished by the Brotherhood of American Yeomen since its organization. The order had paid out $12,000,000 in benefits and had accrued a surplus of over $3,000,000. The membership is now more than 200,000. Mr. Morgan afterward displayed a handsome set of silver which is to be awarded the member of Queen City Homestead presenting the largest number of candidates between now and July 1.

Another instructive address was given by Honorable Foreman David L. Coleman. Musical selection were furnished by Professor Leonard Twasta, piano, and Vincent Spilastro, violin. Excerpts from "Hamlet," given by Dan Di Leonardo, the local disciple of Shakespeare, were a feature of the evening, and were greatly enjoyed. Mr. Di Leonardo has unusual oratorical ability and delivers classics with the ease of a tragedian.

The affair was concluded by the serving of a collation by Mrs. David L. Coleman and Mrs. Katherine M. Hess, members of the entertainment committee.

ARREST FOLLOWS ALLEGED ASSAULT OF JOHN EVANS

John Evans, of South Plainfield, who was assaulted in front of the Norman House at that place, Saturday night, is now improving. He claims that as he came out of the Norman House two men, known to him as John Wickarish and John Momento, both Polish, and employes of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, attacked him without provocation. Evans is about seventeen years old, while the other two men are over thirty years of age.

Wickarish and Momento, it is said, went to Perth Amboy after the attack, the former returning this morning. As he alighted from a train he was placed under arrest by Officers Everhardt and Saverd. He is now being held at South Plainfield while the detectives are searching for Momento. It is expected that Wickarish will be given a hearing this afternoon and held for the Grand Jury.

MANY QUALIFY IN ORATION CONTEST

Thirteen High School Pupils Will Compete for Honors.

SUBJECTS ARE CHOSEN

Essays Were Prepared Yesterday for Medal Competition to Be Held Later—List of the Successful Contestants.

Thirteen representatives of the Plainfield High School entered and qualified yesterday morning for the county oratorical contest for county High School honors, which is to be held in Cranford, May 28. There are twenty-four contestants entered, representing High Schools of Elizabeth, Roselle and this city.

The written or qualifying examinations were held yesterday morning at the court house, under the supervision of County Superintendent A. L. Johnson, where orations were written by the contestants on selective subjects. The oral contest will be conducted under the auspices of the county prize speaking committee, in the auditorium of the Cranford High School on the evening of May 28. Gold, silver and bronze medals, not to exceed in cost $10 per set, will be awarded as first, second and third prizes.

The written contests held yesterday under County Superintendent Johnson's supervision, were for the purpose of preparing the orations. Each contestant was permitted to choose from one of four subjects, not previously announced, and was allowed two hours in which to compose the oration, not to exceed 600 words. Each of the contestants was required to sign a fictitious name to his or her paper, the nom de plume and the proper name of the contestant being given to the county superintendent.

The selective subjects for the orations were, "Government Ownership of Railroads," "Why Should We Have a Merchant Marine," "Imperishable Names" and "The Panama Canal."

The papers will be examined and judged by a marking committee of three disinterested persons, to be appointed by County Superintendent Johnson, these judges probably being selected from out of the county. The maximum number of points will be sixty, apportioned as follows: Originality, 10; use of English, 35; adaptibility for speaking, 15. The judges are required to give due consideration to style, clearness, coherence, unity, presentation of subject matter, etc., bearing in mind that good essays are not always good orations.

In the oral contests the pupils will deliver the orations exactly as written. The judges of the oral contest, three in number, also may be selected from out of the county. Forty points in addition to the ratings on written papers are attainable in the oral contests. The points shall be determined on the basis: Memory, 5; ease of delivery, 5; articulation, 15; interpretation, 15. The judges will take into consideration in determining these points, gesture, movement on the stage, quality, inflection, control, clearness of tone and carrying power, pronunciation, power of interpreting and sympathic rendition. The auditors of the two best written examinations will be named to represent each district in the oral contests. The contestants who took the examination yesterday are:

Robert Moyer, Harold W. Tomlinson, Elvira Patten, Gladys Dickerson, R. A. Whitford, Margaret Eaton, Mary Smith, Muriel Cockburn, Randolph Stelle, Roger Cockburn, Ernestine Wilson, Elsie Stevens and Arthur McKay.

RUSSELL GETS APPOINTMENT IN SPITE OF COLLINS

Governor Fielder last night named Lucius T. Russell, of Elizabeth, as president of the State Tax Board of Assessors despite the opposition of General Dennis F. Collins and other prominent Democrats who were in Trenton for that purpose.

Henry Crofus White, of North Plainfield, Republican, was named a member of the geological survey of the Department of Conservation and Development, and William L. Saunders, also of North Plainfield, was named as a member of the Department of Commerce and Navigation.

FIVE DOLLARS OR 20 DAYS.

Edward and Jennie Ayers, the couple who were arrested on Sunday night for fighting, were brought before Judge DeMeza this morning and pleaded guilty, being fined $5 each, with the alternative of spending twenty days in jail. The woman paid her fine at once, but Ayers was unable to.

SUFFRAGE DEBATE ENJOYED BY MANY

Mrs. O. D. Oliphant and Alexander Millar Argue Question Pro and Con.

SPEAKERS APPLAUDED

Interesting Affair Held in Parish House of Grace Church Under Auspices of Men's Club—Both Sides Well Represented.

Arguments pro and con on the Suffrage question were listened to with great interest in the parish house of Grace church last night, the debate being arranged as a "ladies' night" affair by the Men's Club of the church. Mrs. Orville D. Oliphant, of Trenton, represented the "Antis," while Alexander Millar, of this city, spoke in behalf of the Suffragists. W. W. Robinson, president of the club, presided and introduced the speakers of the evening.

Mr. Millar, who opened the debate, declared that the question of the extension of the franchise to women is beyond the experimental stage, with over forty years of history behind it Suffrage is not in the defensive stage, but it is on the offensive, it is laboring, it is pushing forward. We have, he said, a large and influential demand on the part of women for the vote. It has been said that 92 per cent. of the women are opposed to women's suffrage, and Mr. Matthews repeated this statement in a meeting in this city. Mr. Millar said he had asked Mr. Matthews for proof of the statement, but the latter had not yet responded.

The census of 1910 showed that there were in this country twenty-four and a half million of women of the voting age; in the twelve suffrage States there were 3,665,000 women of voting age. This leaves 20,835,000 to be accounted for. The anti-suffragists admit that 10 per cent. are favorable to suffrage. This leaves 18,720,000 not accounted for, if all these are on the fence the suffragists might well claim one-half of them.

The anti-suffragists claim that just as good work has been accomplished by women without the vote as by those who have it. Mr. Millar then quoted the views of many persons prominent in civic and settlement work, showing that they claimed much had been lost because women were not articulated. The extension of the franchise to women had been endorsed by the Women's Federated Clubs, the National Grange, the National Educational Association, the W. C. T. U., the recent conference of the Methodist church and many other great organizations.

How does women's franchise handle the liquor question? Illinois closed 1,000 saloons and added 22 counties to the drys and it was all done by the women's votes, these carried the day.

Mrs. Oliphant, in beginning her argument, remarked that the suffragists seemed to rely upon the statement of those opposed to equal suffrage for their arguments, and she wondered how in the world they would get on if they didn't have the arguments of the "Antis" for the basis of their speeches.

Replying to Mr. Millar, Mrs. Oliphant said that he should be able to show that all who already have suffrage are in favor of suffrage; they are not, she declared, and this after twenty-five years of experience.

So far as New Jersey being favorable to women's suffrage the latest figures show that there are 40,000 suffragists in this State, and these included men, women and children from the cradle up. This means that 3 per cent. of the women of New Jersey favor votes for women the remainder are either actively opposed or are non-suffragists. "We insist," said Mrs. Oliphant, "that it is a minority agitation, and so an unjust proposition to force the responsibility and burden of the franchise on the majority of the women of the State. What kind of a Democracy will improve the will of the minority on the majority? It is not Democracy, but tyranny."

Did the audience know how the vote of the Women's Federation of Clubs was won demanded the speaker. "Steam Roller," she answered her question in her characteristic way. It was true the State Grange had voted for women's suffrage, but she had addressed individual granges throughout the State, and each had shown itself opposed to woman suffrage, and officers of the State grange had told her that had the organization she represented explained the situation before the conference the vote would never have passed.

PROF. PRINCE ON PRIMITIVE MUSIC

Gives Interesting Talk Before Dutch Arms at Trinity Reformed Church.

ILLUSTRATES SUBJECT

Well Known Linguist Traces the Origin of Music From Earlist Ages up to the Present Day—Sings One of His Own Compositions.

"Primitive Music" was the subject of an interesting informal talk given by Professor John D. Prince, of Columbia University, at Trinity Reformed church, last night, the affair being under the auspices of the Dutch Arms, to which the women of the church and congregation were invited. The Dutch Arms Band was present and discoursed a number of popular selections to the enjoyment of the large audience.

Professor Prince traced the origin of music from its earliest age up to the time that composers began to harmonize it. He gave examples of the earliest songs, after explaining the development of musical instruments, and then sang a number of Indian, Arabic, Bohemian, German and Scandinavian songs, concluding with an Irish song, and his own composition, "On the Road to Mandalay," which aroused the enthusiasm of the audience.

In speaking of the early age, Professor Prince said that in his opinion the lower jaw was so poorly developed that it was practically impossible to articulate, and he then noted the progress made through succeeding generations, showing the development of melody, and then told in an interesting way how musical instruments came into existence, from the primitive drum and reed instruments to the present day kinds. He also touched on the origin of the bagpipes. Interspersing his talk, Professor Prince frequently sat at the piano and sang various songs to illustrate a point he wished to bring out in his lecture, the songs including Turkish, Spanish and Italian compositions, which were replete with harmony.

Professor Prince complimented the Dutch Arms Band upon its playing and the efficiency attained. At the conclusion of his talk the band played many selection, and ice cream and cake were served. During a short business meeting of the Dutch Arms prior to the talk of the evening two new members were elected.

ELK BOWLERS WILL HOLD BANQUET TONIGHT

An interesting and attractive program has been arranged for the second annual banquet for the members of the Elks' house bowling league which is scheduled to take place in the Watchung avenue clubhouse tonight. There will be about 100 present and the dinner will be served at 8:30 o'clock.

George O. Stevens will act as toastmaster and the prizes offered in the tourney will be awarded during the evening. A musical program has also been arranged.

HOLDS TRUANT RECORD; SAYS HE WILL BE GOOD

It was truant day in police court this morning and Judge DeMeza had a number of offenders brought before him by Miss Holley. Most of them were first offenders, and promised to go to school regularly in the future, but one case called for promise of severe treatment if his ways were not mended. Clarence Biggs has been trying to keep away from school at every possible opportunity. He has been before the judge for truancy six or seven times, and has been before the Juvenile Court at Elizabeth once. Judge DeMeza gave him a good talking to this morning, and promised him that if he played hookey again he would be placed in the Children's Home. He started for school today with his mother.

MISS LEECH TO SPEAK.

Watchung Equal Suffrage League is making arrangements for a suffrage meeting to be held in the Watchung schoolhouse next Saturday night at 8 o'clock. The speaker of the evening will be Miss Florence Leech, of Montana, who is doing field work, for the New Jersey Equal Suffrage League. Miss Leech will tell of the work in the West under woman suffrage, and will answer all questions concerning it asked by the audience. During her stay at Watchung Miss Leech will be the guest of Mrs. C. C. Wheeler, president of the Watchung League.

SHOEMAKER HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Justice Kaine Fixes the Bail at $2,000—Suspect Taken to New Brunswick.

William Shoemaker, who was arrested at South Plainfield, Sunday morning, on suspicion of having set fire to William Kelly's barn at Oak Tree on Saturday night, was arraigned before Justice P. F. Kaine at South Plainfield, yesterday afternoon, and held in $2,000 bail for the Grand Jury. Shoemaker was taken to the county jail at New Brunswick this morning by Detectives Everhardt and Savered.

Shoemaker told many conflicting stories at a preliminary examination before Justice Kaine on Sunday and even yesterday was unable to give a clear account of his actions on Saturday night. Several witnesses were called yesterday and testified that they saw Shoemaker on the Oak Tree road Saturday night going in the opposite direction from the fire.

In view of threats which Shoemaker is alleged to have made recently and which were brought to the attention of Mr. Kelly and his son-in-law, Harry Campbell, suspicion was at once directed to him at the time of the fire. Many years ago Shoemaker is said to have been indicted for a similar offense, but subsequently secured his freedom. There is a belief that he harbored a grievance against certain people at South Plainfield and Oak Tree.

PRESS VS. STAGE TOPIC OF DEBATE

Judges Unable to Give Decision at Holy Name Society's First Discussion.

The first of the series of debates to be held each week by members of St. Mary's Holy Name Society took place in Social Hall last night and demonstrated that there are a number of excellent "arguefiers" within the organization. The subject selected for the initial discussion was: "Resolved that the press is a greater educator than the stage." The affirmative was taken by Timothy Meaney and Albert F. LaRock, while Paul Burns and James McCann spoke for the opposition.

Mr. Burns and Mr. McCann displayed a surprising knowledge of the subject and successfully combatted many strong points that were calculated to bring the victory for the affirmative. On the other hand, Mr. Meaney and Mr. LaRock ably handled their side, but were prevented from using arguments that had been prepared owing to the construction of the resolution, this prohibiting them from making use of the power and influence of the newspapers of today. The judges, Peter J. McDonough, John Hines, Robert Guttridge and M. B. Caffrey, were unable to arrive at any decision and the matter will be debated again later on.

It is the intention of the Holy Name Society to hold a debate at each of the Monday night social gatherings and from last night's beginning it is believed they will become highly popular. Different members will take part each time and from the best of the talent, debaters will be selected for an inter-county discussion with two men from the Essex Holy Name Society.

MRS. GEORGE J. ROBBINS.

Mrs. Ada C. Robbins, wife of George J. Robbins, died shortly before midnight last night at her home on Liberty street. She had been ill for several weeks with grip, which afterward developed into pneumonia. Mrs. Robbins was thirty-five years old and was a native of New York. Her maiden name was Ada Eyers. Beside her husband she is survived by three children. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made, but the service will be in charge of Rev. F. L. Greene, of Hope Chapel, of which she was an attendant.

BICYCLE IS WANTED.

The Charity Organization Society is interested in a little girl who could help her family much more effectively than she is already doing if she had a bicycle. She is large enough to use an adult's wheel and if anyone could assist the family by contributing a bicycle the Charity Organization would be very glad to hear from them. Telephone 103.

GERMAN FORCES ARE DRIVEN BACK

British Gain Three Miles in Big Drive in Belgium, London Hears.

HILL 60 IS CAPTURED

Roumania and Italy Will Enter War in May, Say Diplomats—Warships Bombard German Positions Causing Much Destruction.

London, April 20.—The strong British offensive in Belgium south of Ypres is said to be marked by fighting that matches that of Neuve Chapelle in fierceness. By blowing up a hill and harrowing the ground with shells, the way was cleared for the infantry advance, which, according to the unconfirmed statement of the correspondent of the Morning Post, has driven the German line back a distance of three miles.

The British official report briefly records the capture of a hill in that region. This height is being held today against the terrific assaults of the Germans, while the British artillery is hammering at the enemy's guns, which are hotly bombarding the newly won positions.

The latest Paris communique shows success for the French in the movement against Colmar in Alsace near the Rhine. The French are reported to be advancing down both banks of the Fecht river. They record the capture of Eselbrucke, north of Metzeral, which brings them near to the key of the Colmar position. Paris admits the loss of Lieut. Roland Garros, the noted aviator, who was compelled to descend within the German lines and be made a prisoner.

The British offensive southeast of Ypres is the first movement of importance since the costly assault of Neuve Chapelle a month ago. The British War Office gave out a night bulletin saying that Hill 60, two miles south of Zillebeke, had been won, giving the British command of a considerable district to the north and northwest. This statement said:

"A successful action which began in the evening of April 17 culminated last night with the capture and complete occupation of an important point known as Hill 60, which lies two miles south of Zillebeke and east of Ypres. This hill dominates the country to the northwest.

"The successful explosion of a mine at the foot of the hill commenced the operations. Many Germans were killed by the explosion and fifteen German soldiers and one officer were captured.

"At daybreak on April 18 the enemy delivered a heavy counter attack, but was repulsed with numerous losses. They advanced close to our formation before our machine guns opned fire. The effect was terrible. Yesterday the Germans made desperate efforts all day to recover the hill, but everywhere they were repulsed with heavy losses. In front of this newly acquired position in which we are now firmly stationed hundreds of dead lie in the open.

"Two more German aeroplanes have been brought down in this area since April 15. The total loss to the enemy now numbers five aeroplanes."

Berlin, April 20 (by wireless)—The following was given out at headquarters today: German sapping attacks in Champagne advanced yesterday. A French attack in the Argonne, north of Four de Paris, failed. Between the Meuse and the Moselle there were only isolated, but vivacious artillery duels. A French attack near Filery broke down near Croix der Larnes. German troops entered the enemy's main position. West of Avrecourt we stormed and reoccupied the villages of Ember and Menil. In the Vosges French attacks on Schillecker Heights failed. A German advance at Hartmansweilerkopf gained about 100 yards of ground. On the east front the situation is unchanged.

Petrograd, April 20.—The following statement was issued at the War Office today: On April 17 a cannonade continued in the direction of the Black Sea coast. The Russians in the region of Artwim are successfully progressing southward. No engagements are reported on other parts of the front.

Washington, April 20.—The State Department has not yet received the statement from the Berlin Government taking upon itself responsibility for the recent note delivered by the German Ambassador, in which it was plainly intimated that no effort was made by this government to observe neutrality. No answer will be made, Secretary Bryan said, until formal confirmation was received.

London, April 20.—French reports today that the Germans deliv-

MANY GUESTS AT 20TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Philip C. Smith Celebrate Their Wedding Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip C. Smith celebrated the twentieth aniversary of their wedding at their home on Dunellen avenue Saturday evening. Thirty-seven guests were present from Newark, Gladstone, Flanders, Somerville, New York, Plainfield, Pottersville and this place. Among the guests were two recently married couples, Mr. and Mrs. William Giddes, of Lincoln avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Congle, of Bloomsbury.

The evening was spent in playing games and having a good social time. At 10 o'clock the guests sat down to a dainty repast. Mrs. Smith received many useful and valuable presents, among which were china, cut glass and silverware.

Mr. Smith came to this place thirty-two years ago from Pottersville, when Dunellen was still a part of Piscataway township. Dunellen, looking north from Dunellen avenue, reminded one in those days of one huge farm. The only house on the side of the thoroughfare upon which Mr. and Mrs. Smith now live was the house now occupied by James Day. Mr. Smith secured employment as trainman on the Central Railroad, with which road he is at present affiliated as baggagemaster.

Three months after locating here Mr. Smith married his first wife, Miss Sarah Johnson, daughter of John Johnson, of Cokesbury. She died twenty-six years ago this May. They had one child, a daughter, who married Edward Rinehart, and is at present residing at Gladstone.

Six years elapsed before Mr. Smith married the present Mrs. Smith, Miss Ida Bittle, daughter of Augustus Bittle, of Plainfield. Upon being married Mr. and Mrs. Smith commenced housekeeping in the old McCall house on North avenue, which is now owned by Henry Wrage. They moved to their present home ten years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are both members of the Methodist Episcopal church. They are both highly respected and their numerous friends hope that they may have many more years of happy wedded life ahead of them.

Miss Margaret Crawford, teacher of the sixth grade of the Whittier School, has resumed her duties after an illness of four days with a bad cold. Superintendent Rentschler substituted for Miss Crawford during her illness.

Harry Dodwell, of Jackson avenue, who is ill with bronchial pneumonia, is getting along nicely.

JUDGE CAREY DISCUSSES COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

An interesting and instructive address on "Commission Government," was delivered before the Board of Trade in Junior Hall, last evening, by Judge Robert S. Carey, of Jersey City, a man of wide experience in municipal and governmental affairs, and was one of a small body of men who were responsible for the adoption of the Commission Form of Government by Jersey City.

He gave his hearers a good idea of conditions as they existed under the old regime of partisan politics and then told of the new Jersey City transformed by Commission Government.

He pointed out how this form concentrated responsibility, applies business principles to municipal government, reducing taxes and does away entirely with so-called party politics.

Following Judge Carey's address the Board held its monthly meeting but owing to the lateness of the hour, little business was transacted.

President Walton asked for the co-operation of the members of the Board in making a success of cleanup day as advocated by the Board of Health for May 1.

A short discussion of a Fourth of July celebration indicated that a sentiment is in favor of assisting New Market in its proposed celebration of the day.

It was voted to ask the party who is stripping the mountainside of timber to permit the trees bordering the roadway to stand, and the secretary was instructed to inform the Daughters of the American Revolution of the possibility of this despoiling the mountain and detracting from the beauty of Washington Rock Park.

George T. Schenck and family spent Sunday in Somerville as the guest of Mr. Schenck's uncle, J. C. Huff.

TOURING THE WORLD.

Miss Emily Appert, sister of Emanuel Appert, of Dunellen avenue, and a party of friends arrived in this country on Thursday from a tour of Northern Africa, going to that country from their native land, Switzerland. They arrived in the borough Saturday afternoon for a week-end's visit with Mr. Appert before leaving for Montreal, Canada, where they have planned to spend the summer.

The Crescent Tennis Club will open its season on its Madison avenue courts this Saturday afternoon.

The monthly meeting of the Sunday-school board of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held this evening at the home of Mrs. H. S. Townley, on Madison avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leach have moved from the McHugh house on Dunellen avenue, to the Todd house on Front street, recently vacated by H. A. Wickham.

Emil Stuffert, of Lincoln, accompanied by Carl Marx, of Dunellen avenue, motored to Newark yesterday in Mr. Stuffert's car and successfully passed an examination for his license.

Fred Oakley, of Front street, has rejoined the park force of the New Jersey Central.

Ryan, chairman; Owen Mohan, George Zink, John McMahon, Valentine McLoughlin, Edward Gray, Jr., and William Ackerman. The committee will hold its first meeting tomorrow evening.

MRS. H. B. WALTERS SUFFERS SEVERE INJURY

While descending the front stairs of her home Saturday evening Mrs. H. B. Walters, of Washington avenue, fell three steps to the bottom, breaking a small bone above the left ankle and tearing the ligaments badly. It is thought that the accident was occasioned by Mrs. Walters' ankle turning. Mr. Walters happened to be out at the time, and his wife suffered intense pain. She tried to awaken one of her children, but they were all sound asleep and did not hear her calling. Mrs. Walters managed to crawl upstairs on her hands and knees and into the room of her oldest, LeRoy, aged twelve.

Upon being awakened LeRoy assisted his mother until the father's return. Mr. Walters lost no time in summoning Dr. Platt, who, after a careful examination, announced the extent of the injury.

The injury caused Mrs. Walters' limb, from above the fracture to and including the foot to swell badly, and she suffered intense pain throughout Saturday night and Sunday. Yesterday the pain had practically subsided, and the injured limb was placed in splints by Dr. Platt. Last evening it was said that an X-ray examination would be made today.

It is probable that at the next meeting of the Borough Council steps will be taken to call the attention of the State inspectors to the reckless manner in which automobiles speed along South avenue. At the time that thoroughfare was surfaced with amiesite the turn known as the double "S" at the top of the Fanwood hill, was eliminated and a straight road was made all the way to Westfield. UNDESIRABLE NEIGHBORS.

There are a lot of Plainfield's colored residents who have pleasant homes in attractive parts of the city who are enjoying fully all the privileges of citizenship and causing no embarrassment for their white neighbors. If it was impossible for these people to have nice homes, there might be some excuse for the rental of a house in a neighborhood hitherto entirely occupied by whites, but when so apparent an act of spite work is made evident, as in the case of a colored family taking a house on West Fifth street, it is to be regretted that there is not some way of forcing a change. The local situation is one that reflects anything but credit on the owner of the house. The very fact that the agent in charge shows a letter in which he offered to sell the property for $5,000 to one of the residents living in the neighborhood, makes it quite conclusive that it was not merely the desire to rent the house that put these tenants there.

The United States Supreme Court, in the case of an ordinance providing for segregation which was passed by the Atlanta, Georgia, Common Council, has determined that it was a violation of the constitution. It is true that theoretically and legally colored people have the best of the question, yet the fact remains that in practically every part of the United States the presence of negro tenants in better neighborhoods has depreciated the value of property and caused disturbance.

Denunciation of race prejudice does not alter the situation in Plainfield. It remains, however, that mere response to nature's law that "birds of a feather flock together" is a perfectly normal, innocent, and even desirable thing in itself. Scores of people see injustice in race prejudice as a general abstract proposition, but the most humane among us are likely to bow to its decree in the presence of the problem in the concrete. It is certainly to be hoped that the tenants who have leased the house, and the owner as well, will see the matter in a different light, and thus do away with what promises to bring about a very unpleasant situation for that section of the west end of the city.

BUY IT NOW.

In using their advertising space to urge Plainfield people to BUY IT NOW, the Business Men's Association is participating in a nation-wide movement, which is sweeping the country. In cities, towns and villages the cry is being taken up, with a response which is most encouraging, for the improvement in business conditions has become evident in the last few days. Originally the idea came from the west, and was intended to start the farmers spending the $5,000,000,000 which they had received last year for their crops.

The farmers have most of the new wealth. They can begin to put it into circulation in no better way than to begin now buying, not wastefully or prodigally, but wisely those things they know they must have and cannot get along without. The railroads also have joined the movement. They haven't quite so tangible income ahead of them, but they have great faith in the future by reason of the decision of the interstate commerce commission.

Merchants and manufacturers are certain to feel the effects of this buying movement. Confidence which has been in hiding for a long time will begin to feel the warming influence and crawl out of the holes where it has been hidden. It takes times like these to show how interdependent the whole people are. The new orders coming in for farm machinery, for railroad steel, are ever widening in their influence. No better time than the present could be had for placing deferred orders. Fundamentally, the country's financial basis is sound. The war acts as a protective tariff. Now is the time. Join the movement. BUY IT NOW.

RECREATION WORK.

Plainfielders will again have opportunity to learn of the splendid work being done by the Recreation Committee, when the Choral Society gives its second oratorio of the season on Thursday night. The use to which the school buildings have been put since this body was formed furnishes an object lesson to other communities, which are only now waking up to the advantages of using them as recreation centers.

It is a pleasure to watch the widening use being made of the school buildings, as compared with the condition a few years ago, when school boards refused to let the buildings be used as social centers in their neighborhoods, and had kept the buildings closed. Gradually this obduracy has relaxed and the auditoriums are being used for other purposes besides the teaching of children. The day is not far distant when every school building will be a social center in the fullest and best sense of the word.

Whether the stage or the press is the better educator was interestingly discussed in a local debate last night. It's rather tough on the newspapers to have to be compared with some of the stage offerings now-a-days.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

For tomorrow and Thursday's attraction at the Plainfield Theatre, Manager Shannon has secured the latest Paramount photo-play, "The Italian," in which George Beban poses the leading role. Mr. Beban is numbered among the foremost character actors in America and in "The Italian" he has unusual opportunities to display his talent, as the following story of the play will show:

Pietro Dommetti, a handsome young gondolier with an exceedingly sunny nature, is in love with Annette Ancello, daughter of Trudo Ancello. Robert Galiia, the wealthy merchant of the city, is also in love with Annette. The merchant is a dilapidated old dandy, at whom the girl laughs. Annette's father, however, gives Pietro a year in which to make good and secure a home for his daughter. Fired with ambition, he comes to New York and sets up a bootblack stand, and in due season sends for his love, whom he marries.

In time, a baby is born. A gesture of the baby's, similar to that of his own, doubly endears the child to Pietro. During the intense heat wave which sweeps over the city, the baby is taken ill, and the doctor says he must have Pasteurized milk, or die. This is obtained for a while, but the scant funds of the father soon disappear. While on the way to a milk station, he is held up by a couple of gangsters and robbed of a few remaining nickles. He puts up a fight, and is arrested. He appeals to the ward boss, Corrigan, who, however, repulses him brutally, and is sent to jail as a consequence. When Pietro is released from jail five days later he finds his child dead, and he swears vengeance on Corrigan, whom he holds responsible.

His chance comes when the politician's child is taken sick, and Pietro enters the home unseen, but events lead to his foregoing the revenge because of the thoughts of his own child.

THE SILK FLAG GOES TO TROOP 9

Present Most Unique Float in "Baby Saving Show" Parade.

MANY NOVEL DISPLAYS

Boy Scouts of This City and Adjoining Towns Take Part in Fine Demonstration—Cheers Given for the Winning Troop and Others.

With flags flying, red fire burning and bands playing, the Boy Scouts of America paraded several miles of the city's streets last night to advertise the "Baby Saving Show" in the Stirling building. They displayed floats, transparencies and other contrivances designed to advertise the show, competing for a prize banner which was donated for the purpose by Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield, for the troop which showed the best idea for advertising the show. The result was that nearly every idea expressed in the show was taken off somehow in the parade, together with several others the Scouts invented themselves. The parade was over half a mile in length, and every troop in the city was represented, making a total of 300 Scouts in line. The line of march included nearly every section of the city, and the novel sight brought everyone to the sidewalks to see them pass, with the result that the Baby Saving Show was, through the generosity of Mr. Fairbairn and the co-operation of the Scouts, received an amount and a kind of advertising that it could not have received any other way.

The parade formed in line in Eighth street at the City Park, and marched west on Eighth street past the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, under whose auspices the Baby Saving Show was brought to Plainfield, where a short halt was made and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and their guests, who included Mr. and Mrs. Fairbairn and Mr. and Mrs. William M. Wherry, Jr., looked at the Scouts exhibits. The order of march was as follows: Color guard, bicycle squad, Scout Commissioner A. E. Beals, First Deputy Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., Second Deputy Commissioner A. E. Sproule, Troop 5 Fife and Drum Corps.

Troop 1, Scotch Plains, Scoutmaster Hare, showed a wireless apparatus on a bicycle and other displays. Troop 7 had a float, showing a baby protected by mosquito netting, under the direction of Scoutmaster Joseph Garner. Troop 5, from the First Presbyterian church, carried their Scout champion's banner won last year, and had a Red Cross float and one with two babies and their bottles, one dirty and one clean; Scoutmaster Mr. Searing. Troop 8 had two babies on a float, with Scoutmaster William Glaenitzer leading. Troop 9 had a transparency on a wagon, and a long line of boys bearing lighted letters making the slogan, "Save a Baby." Troop 12, Scoutmaster A. P. Palmer, had a wagon covered with signs, one of which declared that every time the bell rang a baby died, while within the wagon someone with terrible intent rang a bell with almost hideous regularity, going the red light sign at the Baby Saving Show one better. Troop 13, from the First Baptist church, was under the direction of Scoutmaster Frank Kellogg. Troop 14 is from the First Baptist church, and displayed two large milk bottles, one dirty and labeled wrong, and the other scrupulously scrubbed, and labeled right. They also had a transparency, "Swat the Fly," and a boat on wheels. The Scoutmaster was Ernest K. Powlison.

The floats nearly all showed the ideas brought out at the Baby Saving Show, sundry outfits of baby clothes being stretched to the bursting point to cover the husky forms of brawny Scouts, who lolled on the floats while their comrades hauled them along, there being usually a young giant Scout, clean, labeled right, and a smaller one, dirty, marked wrong. All the troops carried red lights, which were donated to them for the purpose by Mr. Wherry, and several had bands of music, of which possibly the best was that with the troop of colored Scouts. Interest was shown in Scout Wallace Weglan, who, though a cripple, kept his place on a bicycle.

The banner donated by Mr. Fairbairn was a splendid one of blue and gold, bearing the words B. S. A., Civic Welfare Troop, Plainfield, N. J.

The judges, who reviewed the parade at the Y. M. C. A. building, were Percy H. Stewart, Robert A. Fairbairn and William M. Wherry, Jr. They called for a second parade of Troops 9 and 14, and finally made the award to Troop 9 of the First Methodist church, with honorable mention to Troop 14. The winning troop showed a wagon with a transparency "Isn't a Baby Worth Saving?" and a row of transparencies borne by Scouts, saying "Save a Baby." To close the ceremonies, the Scouts gave three ringing cheers for Mr. Fairbairn, who gave the banner, for former Mayor Stewart, and for Troop 9, winners of the banner.

Sufficient Sentiment to Abolish Saloons Declares Senator Cummins.

In an address recently delivered before a Chicago labor union, United States Senator Cummins repeated his declaration for National Constitutional Prohibition. "I was gratified to read in the Washington papers some time ago," said the Senator, "of the action this local carpenters' union took in condemning the liquor traffic. Thity years ago I would have said prohibition was impractical. Under the conditions that existed then, it would have meant putting in the field two unregulated saloons to the one regulated saloon that had been there before.

"But the world has marched along in these thirty years until now there is sentiment enough in the United States to abolish the saloon. The United States ought to abolish it, and it will abolish it.

"There is no good in the saloon. There is nothing but evil to it; nothing but evil ever came of it. There may be some to whom liquor may afford moments of irresponsibility and alleviation of grief; some may be able to rise above their normal selves under its influence. But in the end even these must pay a double price for it.

"The saloon impoverishes our homes and blasts the lives of our people. It destroys the strength of our young manhood. The time has come now for the nation to wipe it out."

Employers are demanding sobriety of their employes. It is gratifying to notice a disposition on the part of many big employers of labor to apply the abstinence rule to themselves. This is right. If it is good for the man at the bench, the lathe or the desk, it is equally good for the men in the front office.

Shortly after the South Chicago mills of the Illinois Steel Co. posted the signs admonishing their men to total abstinence, the superintendent and head men of the plant met at their monthly banquet. Wine and drinks were banished from the table and the statement made that they would comply with the rules laid down for the men in reference to drink.

The prophecy that Chicago may go dry on April 3, 1916, is being heard on every hand in the windy city by the lake. G. F. Rinehart, a newspaper man who led the statewide prohibition campaign in Arizona, and to whom is given the credit for its success, is leading in a campaign for a dry Chicago, and the various temperance forces have united under his leadership. The city is to be thoroughly organized and speakers of national reputation will help make sentiment and votes for the cause. An effort is being made at the present time to secure 125,000 signatures before the election is called.

The crisis in Great Britain destroys another argument for rum. Driven from every other vantage ground, its advocates intrench themselves behind the fact that the traffic yields vast money returns to the government. Abolish liquor, they warn us, and you will be deprived of revenues without which the conduct of public affairs would put a crushing burden upon the people.

As to this, let the peril of England answer. Let the supporters of the liquor interests count up the taxes they have paid for the last hundred years, and weigh them against a deadened patriotism and a productive capacity destroyed—against defeat chargeable to industrial inefficiency and booze.

Does the United States need a war to teach it a lesson—North American of Philadelphia.

In just one year's time the W. C. T. U. of Crookston, Minn., known as one of the "baby unions" because of its short existence as an organization, has gained a membership of 115. It is now conducting ten departments of work with enthusiasm and thoroughness and has organized an L. T. L. of ninety members and Y. P. B. It has held six evangelistic meetings and other gatherings of a social nature. This union, of which Mrs. Thea Lacer is president, aims to reach the 200 mark by October 1. From the time it came into the W. C. T. U. world this "baby union" has given evidence of healthy growth and activity.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, has inaugurated a prohibition rule in his embassy, according to reports from Washington. Since an ambassador is the personal representative of his sovereign, Sir Cecil has deemed it his duty to follow the example of total abstinence set by King George and no British guest at the embassy will be offered any alcoholic beverages.

TELLS HOW SHE TURNED OVER GREAT CONCERN TO EMPLOYEES

Mrs. Warbasse Says Marriage and Six Babies Taught Her Need to Study Social Problems.

Looks on Absentee Ownership as Curse, So Gave Workers Complete Control of $6,000,000 Plant.

"IT was just a step in the direction of the inevitable, a step in the way I see things going."

That is how Mrs. James P. Warbasse, the woman responsible for putting into effect the most radical profit sharing plan known to industrial history, described the turning over of the $6,000,000 Dennison Manufacturing company to the full control of its employees.

Mrs. Warbasse lives at 381 Washington avenue, Brooklyn. She was the largest stockholder of the old Dennison company, of which her father, H. K. Dyer, was president for many years. She inherited his holdings and was in a position to control the company itself.

H. K. Dyer started in as a $1 a week clerk (and clerking meant wielding the broom on occasion in his day). There are still friends of his left, Brooklynites of the old regime, who shake their heads sadly over the "doings" of his daughter Agnes. Mrs. Warbasse admits that she never gave more than a passing thought to sociological problems until marriage "educated her."

"The one man power in the industrial world is already doomed," she said in an interview. "The time will eventually come when employees of all corporations will control the corporations for which they now labor.

Evolution or Revolution?

"It will come either through employers stepping aside, as we have done in the case of the Dennison company, or through their being forced to step aside in submission to the demands of competently organized labor. Whether it will be evolution through the first or revolution through the latter no one can say.

"While it is true that this plan could not have become operative without my support, the credit for it does not belong to me. It belongs to E. W. Dennison primarily, the founder of the company, who in 1875 advocated it and sketched the rough outlines which Charles S. Dennison, treasurer of the company, and myself have since filled in.

"When I was a girl I went to Packer institute, just as hundreds of other Brooklyn girls are doing, and when I was through with school I went out into society and had a good time and thought hardly any and wasted a lot of time.

"Then I married Dr. James P. Warbasse. Marriage is the greatest education any woman can have. Then my children came, and they taught me a lot too.

"So gradually in this way I became interested in old Mr. Dennison's original idea.

She Explains Scheme.

"I began to see that the greatest industrial wrong was absentee ownership. Charles S. Dennison, whom I have known since doll baby days, is a graduate of Harvard, a brilliant man and tremendously interested in all these problems. Together we gradually worked out the plan which has been put into effect, only it is not as radical as I would have liked it even yet.

"The plan provided for a reorganization. The present company sold out its entire property and assets, including good will, name and business subject to its liabilities, to a new corporation, which was organized under the same name under the laws of Massachusetts.

"It was authorized to issue preferred stock at the par value of $100 per share, and this was to have a preferential cumulative dividend at the rate of 8 per cent per annum. Four and one-half millions of this stock was issued and given to the old stockholders to replace the $2,500,000 of stock of the old company.

"Common or industrial partnership stock was to be issued to the principal employees, who were defined as employees earning from $1,200 a year up. We decided that it would be for the best interest of every one that the first issue of this common stock should be paid for at the rate of $10 a share in cash by the employees themselves until they had bought an aggregate of $1,000,000 of the stock. As soon as they had bought that amount the entire control of the corporation was to be turned over to them.

Owners Must Be Employees.

"Until they had it was provided that the voting power should be vested in the preferred and industrial partnership stock together; holders of the preferred to have one vote for each share, par value $100, and of the industrial one for every ten shares, par value $10 each.

"You see, this reorganization was made three years ago. Now the employees have bought the necessary $1,000,000 of industrial stock and so just as soon as they had the corporation was turned over to them.

"Now the employees have entire control, as the charter provides.

"You see, we want to make this company the employees' entirely, so we hit upon this plan. And, furthermore, we have thought it wise to provide that when an employee leaves the company, no matter what the reason, or dies he must sell back his shares to the company at their par value, or his assignees must turn them back.

"All salaries of $1,200 or more must be approved by a two-thirds vote of the full board of directors, of whom there are to be not less than five nor more than nine, as a majority vote of the stockholders will have to determine.

No Charity In Plan.

"The principal employees are subject, like every other employee, to the same rules and discipline, and they can be dismissed for incompetency, misconduct or any other cause. But if they are discharged or forced to resign they have the right to appeal to their own board of directors, and the decision of this board will be final.

"There is no charity involved in this scheme. We are not giving the employees anything. We are simply getting away from the curse of absentee ownership. The employees live right by the factory, and the directors will be of their number.

"After all," she continued, "I do not expect to ever see the world reformed. I am interested in labor questions, in equal suffrage, in a number of outside things, but the greatest interest I have is my children.

"I don't think that women, even if they had the vote, would make this old world radically better. They aren't any better than men. Some of the suffragettes make a mistake by pretending they can get along without men. They can't. Men are not inferior to women.

"We should all try to learn, and the best thing for us to study is humanity. That's the great essential. Learn each other and each other's viewpoints, and then we will be more willing and better able to give each other justice."

FINDS STRANGE NEW METAL.

Russian Savant Stupefied by Cold Produced in Experiments.

A marvelous new metal, likely to have as farreaching effects on science as radium had, has been discovered by a Russian savant, working on specimens of minerals from Ferghana, in Turkistan.

In the presence of an acid this metal, which as yet is nameless, generated such an excessive degree of cold that the glass vessel containing the acid was immediately reduced to powder. An iron vessel met with the same result. A large piece of granite was decomposed suddenly without explosion or emanation of gas, but with a stupefying lowering of the temperature.

Treated with an alkaline reagent, the substance, which stubbornly resisted every analytic process, lost 20 per cent of its weight.

DIGS HIS GRAVE TOO SMALL.

Eccentric Farmer Forgets to Allow For Size of Coffin.

Dwight E. Hewitt, an eccentric farmer of Weston, Conn., having a premonition of death, dug his own grave and ordered his tombstone a month ago.

When interment was attempted it was found that Mr. Hewitt had not counted on the size of the casket and the grave was eight inches too short. The only way the coffin could be lowered was endwise. Burial was delayed two hours until the grave could be made large enough.

BANKER WON'T HAVE PHONE.

Takes Up New Job at Eighty-five, but Does Without Typewriter.

Henry Parish, who has just retired at the age of eighty-five years after being forty-four years president of the New York Life Insurance and Trust company, would never allow a telephone in the institution, and permitted typewriters only on condition that they were placed where he could not hear them.

Though he has quit the presidency, Mr. Parish, who is probably the oldest active banker in New York city, is staying right along in business as chairman of the board of trustees of the company. He will still continue his resistance to all the inventions of modern progress and will have the correspondence with many of the old time customers of the institution still written with a pen, for he can't stand the typewriter's click.

$100,000 HOTELS FOR IDLE.

Banker Builds One In Chicago and Promises Boston Another.

Charles G. Dawes, a Chicago banker, has promised to build a $100,000 hotel in Boston for unemployed men, similar to the Rufus F. Dawes Memorial hotel, which he has given to Chicago in memory of his son.

"The site has been purchased and plans have been completed," Mr. Dawes says, "and it will be finished before the 1st of next January."

The efficient workman—and his colleague, the efficient work-woman—are needed "in the ranks" of the workers today just as surely as in times of world-peace.

BORO TENNIS TEAM GETS W. T. C. COURTS

N. P. H. S. Racquet Wielders Will Play Matches on Mountain Avenue Courts.

Arrangements have practically been completed between the manager of the North Plainfield High School tennis team and the management of the Watchung Tennis Club, of the borough, for the use of the courts for the coming season. The borough school racquet wielders are planning to form a team to represent the school and matches with outside schools will be played there. The courts are located on Mountain avenue, near Watchung, and a good-sized crowd can be accommodated.

The schoolboys will start practice for tryouts as soon as the courts are in condition and will have the privilege of one court three afternoons each week until the close of school. There are seven home games on the schedule issued by Manager Elmer French, the first one being booked for Saturday, May 8, with Nutley High School. This will be the only Saturday home game and will be played off in the morning. A return game with Nutley has also been arranged for Thursday, June 18. All games during June will be played on opponents' courts.

The first game of the season will be played at Summit on Tuesday, May 4. Singles matches will be counted as one point. When but one set of doubles is played it will be scored as two points, but when two sets of doubles are played each will be scored as one point.

Captain Hoyt Tomkinson, '15, has a large number of candidates from which to select a team. There will probably be five on the squad. Among the most promising candidates for positions are Duclos, VanMater, Sherman Chandler, Elmer French, Warren Townley, VanDeventer, Roy Force, Tom Ball, Edward Moraller, Sidney Dunning, Andrew McDonough, Martin McDonough and Robert McDonough. Practice will begin within the next few days.

ATLANTIC LEAGUE SURVIVES, PERTH AMBOY A WINNER

The long deferred meeting of the Atlantic League was held yesterday afternoon in the offices of President Rosslyn M. Cox, in the Woolworth building. It was decided to continue through the 1915 season as a six-club league, with all clubs located in New Jersey.

Dr. Carlos Henriquez, of Long Branch, was elected president, and Billy Pfau, of Perth Amboy, secretary. The season will open on Saturday, May 29, and will close on Labor Day. Paterson, Long Branch and Perth Amboy, of last year's league, will be represented, while Ernest Landgraf will transfer his Danbury franchise to Red Bank. Herman F. Spellman, a New York lawyer, and Milton H. Baker, a New York butcher, took over the Asbury Park franchise and will locate in Passaic.

A New Jersey sportsman has been obtained to back a sixth club, which will probably be placed in Hackensack. The league will meet again at the Elks' Club in Paterson, on Wednesday, May 5, when the circuit will be completed and the schedule committee appointed. The schedule will be issued not later than May 15. Middletown, Newburg and Poughkeepsie were not represented at the meeting and their franchises were forfeited to the league.

SCHOLASTIC GAMES.

The Leal baseball team will play the Morristown School nine on Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon, while N. P. H. S. is taking a trip over the mountains to meet the Bernardsville High School aggregation. P. H. S. is idle because of the game with New Brunswick yesterday.

"ERNIE" STAHL TO GET A PITCHING PARTNER

Shortstop Oscar Dilts to Be Used for Relief Purposes When Necessary.

Ernest Stahl, the North Plainfield High School's twirler, has hopes of getting a mate who will share the burden of the season with him. After waiting until now with hopes of unearthing another pitcher, Captain Smalley and Coach Mullin have decided to break up the infield occasionaly and send Oscar Dilts to the mound, giving Stahl an occasional rest. The team will go to Bernardsville tomorrow afternoon and, although Stahl will take the trip he will probably not start the game. If Dilts can hold the "Bernard" batters under control Stahl will not have to work again until Saturday, when Battin appears on Hyde Oval. He has already pitched three full games, a total of twenty-eight innings, in eight days.

Although "Germany" has not yet given any sign of letting up, Coach Mullin is looking to the future and does not intend to let him wear out before the season is half over. His plan of using Dilts in the box and putting Conroy in short with Dawe on second has worked out fine in practice and that arrangement will probably be used tomorrow.

Dilts was a good pitcher until last year when he worked himself into the shortstop position on the borough team. Mullin does not like to break up the infield, which worked to perfection last season, but something has to be done to relieve Stahl and that seemed the only way out. Bernardsville should not prove a difficult problem although they may turn a big surprise.

"BILL" SCHOOLEY CAPTAIN OF TUSCARORA PADDLERS

William Schooley, formerly of this city, but now of Elizabeth, was last night elected captain of the Tuscarora Canoe Club crew at a meeting held at the Branch Brook Park boathouse, Newark. Schooley is the State hurry-scurry champion. Twenty-seven candidates are out for the crew this season.

Dual meets will be arranged later in the season. The "Tuscs" were runners-up for the State "champs" at Asbury Park last July, and are the Newark city titleholders.

TWO HARD GAMES REMAIN FOR P. H. S. THIS WEEK

The members of the Plainfield High School baseball team have two hard games before them this week, one on Friday and the other on Saturday. The local team will go to Newark, Friday, and meet the Central High School team and on the following day will entertain Princeton on Parker Field.

Both of these aggregations have always put out some fast nines and the local team will have to do their best to come out in the lead. Denny and Brick will probably both be worked.

FIRST GAME THROWN OUT.

Although the St. Joseph's baseball team of the borough, left the field in the ninth inning of the first game of the season with the St. Mary's T. A. B. team, Saturday afternoon, the umpire refused to give the "Tabs" credit for the game and it will not be counted in the three-match series that has been arranged between these two teams. The umpire upheld the St. Mary's end of the argument over a fly ball which resulted in a triple play and when the boroughites left the field he should have awarded a 9 to 0 decision, but instead refused to do so. The series will probably be played between these teams later.

"DON'T PLUG UP KNOT HOLES," ORDERS BARROW

Ed Barrow sent out sweet news to the young fans of Jersey City recently. Barrow asserted that all the lads who had reserved their knot holes for the season can be assured that the corps of carpenters now working on the fences will not plug the holes up, for he has given orders that under no consideration were the rights of the youngsters to be infringed.

Barrow used to be a knot hole fan himself once upon a time, and he appreciates what havoc would be wrought if the various "outside season passes" were obliterated.

McGraw's Opinion of Golf.

"Nobody loves outdoor exercise more than I do," says John McGraw of the New York Giants, "and I find that golf is the best game for keeping in the open air that I ever saw. I still have my doubts about it being a good thing for ball players, especially those who are expected to hit well, during the regular season, but it is a good thing for me, and I expect to keep it up until I play a pretty good game. I improved enough at Havana to do the nine holes in 54, which, they tell me, is pretty good for a raw beginner. Hitting a golf ball is entirely different from hitting a baseball."

FIRST GAME IN 40 YEARS.

Boston, April 20—From the window of his cell in State Prison, Jesse Pomeroy, a life prisoner, saw his first game of baseball yesterday in forty years. The match was played between prison nines. Pomeroy said that in the last game he saw several players were caught out in the first bound of a third strike.

ONE ARMED OUTFIELDER VARSITY STAR IN TEXAS.

The University of Texas has a one armed athlete who plays baseball, basketball and is a star on the cinder path. He is Dick Hooper, who is without the left arm from the elbow down.

But it is a treat to see this boy play the infield, grab a line drive with the right paw, toss the ball into the air, drop his glove to the ground, catch the ball again and then heave it home. He batted .310 last summer, and they say he would be a big leaguer today but for his physical handicap.

CHARLIE DOOIN HAS CONTRACTED A TRUE THESPIAN LANGUAGE

The stage has surely had its effect on Charlie Dooin, catcher of the Cincinnati Reds. He has contracted the true Thespian language and can't seem to shake it loose.

When Leon Ames asked him how the Cincinnati club impressed him he responded: "It'll be a scream. Believe me, when we put on our act we'll hold the curtain and take six bows. Betcha some jitneys right now that we'll be the show, and there won't be anybody walk out on us either.

"All new stuff; clean comedy; good dressers on and off. Say, bo, it'll be a knockout! I know the act didn't go good last year. It oughta been played over the small time for a chaser. But we've got some good workers this time. They won't want to close us anywhere after the opening matinee, and any place where it isn't a cold house we'll be a riot!"

THIS CARD PITCHER IS A BOTANY PROFESSOR

One St. Louis Cardinal player who doesn't have to depend upon baseball to earn his support is Lee Meadows, the goggle eyed recruit moundman who has been the subject of quite a few feature stories since he was purchased for the Cardinals by Scout Bob Connery last fall.

In addition to being a pitcher of no small promise, Meadows is a botanist. While Meadows was a student at Horner Military academy in Oxford, N. C., two years ago he taught a primary class the study of nature and plant life.

When he left Oxford to join the Durham club of the North Carolina league the academy board of control assured Meadows that the position as professor of botany is open to him any time he decides to quit baseball.

WOMAN BOWLER AFTER TITLE

Mrs. Booth of Boston Will Roll In International Tenpin Tourney.

Mrs. Roy Booth, who has been recognized as the champion woman big pin bowler for the last four years, is considered by many bowlers to be better at the game than the average male bowler. She bowls a regulation size sixteen pound ball and has practically the same delivery and speed as the men champions.

She is a slight woman, weighing 118 pounds, but bowls with great ease and is known nationally as the most remarkable woman in the bowling world.

MRS. ROY BOOTH, CHAMPION WOMAN BOWLER.

She will roll exhibition matches at the international bowling tournament in Boston from April 29 to May 15. Matches in which women will take part will be one of the features of the big tournament held under the auspices of the Atlantic Coast Bowling association.

Mrs. Booth defeated some good bowlers in the men's division last week, when in practice she made a high score of 238, with an average of 193 for six games. The women champion will roll in a special match against one of the prominent men bowlers the opening night of the tournament.

Meyers Hands Out Compliments.

Chief Meyers says that, with Hans Lobert on third, it will be the first season in which he has been able to throw the ball down to the dizzy corner without danger of the guardian there bobbling it. Not exactly complimentary to Shafer and Herzog.

SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE COMPLETES ARRANGEMENTS

The scholarship committee of St. Mary's Holy Name Society held a meeting last night and completed details of the plan to send a boy to St. Peter's College at Jersey City, as previously arranged. The scholarship will be open to any boy of St. Mary's parish in the parochial or public schools. The lucky youth will be started at the opening of the college September term.

Timothy J. Meaney is the chairman of the scholarship committee; Albert F. LaRock, secretary and M. B. Caffrey, treasurer. It was decided last night to start the fund with a scholarship euchre and dance to be given in St. Mary's school hall on Thursday evening, June 10. LOCAL MOTORISTS HAVE CLOSE CALL

James Cahill and Charles Shirley, of this city, after being reported as seriously injured and in the hospital, are today congratulating themselves on their escape with a few cuts and bruises from an accident which completely wrecked the automobile in which they were riding from Metuchen Sunday night.

The two Plainfielders, according to Mr. Cahill, were admitted by a night watchman to a stretch of the New Brunswick road, just west of Metuchen, which had been closed for repairs and was barricaded.

On their return trip, at a point about three miles west of Metuchen, their car, a roadster, struck a heavy piece of apparatus used for ripping up the road surface, turned completely over and came to rest right side up, after throwing the occupants to the ground with stunning force.

The car was demolished, although Mr. Cahill, the owner, says he was only driving at about a twenty-mile pace. The obstacle with which they collided was unmarked by any lights to warn them in time to avoid it, and was nearly in the center of the road. On the outward trip it escaped the notice of the autoists by reason of the fact that it was on the off side of the road.

It was indicated by Mr. Cahill today that he contemplated legal action against the contractor in charge of the road work as being responsible, through his watchman's carelessness in opening the barrier when the road was unsafe. Several other vehicles were allowed to enter the road by the watchman, and at least one, a carriage drawn by a horse, is said to have collided with the same obstruction.

Devotional exercises were held before the business meeting. Four commissioners were elected to the General Assembly for this year. Two ministers, Rev. L. B. Crane, of Elizabeth, and Rev. Dr. Hoyt were chosen, and there were also two elders elected.

Various reports were presented, including a lengthy one from the Sunschool committee, read by Dr. Crane, of Elizabeth. In it the speaker commented on the different systems used, and also on the part a pastor has in the service. An invitation received from the Basking Ridge church for the June meeting was read and accepted by a unanimous vote. The guests were entertained at noon at lunch by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church.

A small committee was appointed to complete plans for the occasion, of which Herbert Buxton is a member. Practically nothing was done concerning the fall campaign, as this is considered an off year for politics.

ered several violent counter attacks on the morning of the 18th in an effort to recapture Hill No. 60. They were completely repulsed after stiff hand to hand fighting. The British losses were heavy, while those of the Germans were even greater, four officers and forty-five Germans being captured. Gen. French characterizes as false the statement contained in an official German communique that asphyxiating gases had been used near Ypres.

Paris, April 30.—The French War Office gave out the following statement this afternoon: "There is nothing to add to the communique of last night as to the operations in Lordaine and in the Vosges. On the rest of the front there were artillery combats; yesterday particularly they were violent in the region of Soissons, in the sector of Rheims and in the Argonne."

Amsterdam, April 20.—Coincident with the resumption of an active offensive by the British on the line of the Yser, the warships off the Belgian coast bombarded the German positions at Ostend and Middlekerke, says a dispatch to the Telegraaf.

Bucharest, via Rome, April 20.—It is declared in political circles here, including officials high in the Roumanian Government, that an official declaration of the intentions of Bulgaria in regard to the war may be expected within a few days.

WEST FILLED WITH OPTIMISTIC SPIRIT

James Rascovar Returns With Glowing Account of Business Conditions.

New York, April 20.—James Rascovar, president of the New York News Bureau, returned today from a week's business trip in the West, having visited Chicago, Elkhart, South Bend, Conneaut, Cleveland and Buffalo. He said regarding conditions as he observed them.

"The West is filled with the spirit of optimism. It is perhaps a little greater than the actual improvement which has taken place in business, but nevertheless there has been betterment and what has been developed seems to be substantial and well held. Commercial travellers with whom I talked going and coming generally testified that a rising movement of trade could be seen and felt in nearly all sections of the country.

"At the great industrial centres the factory and mill stacks all seemed to be smoking up in reality. At Gary, improvement is evident and I got reports from Pittsburg which were quite encouraging. When I was West in December last the stretches of idle railroad equipment were painfully in evidence, but on this recent occasion I am sure that fewer idle cars are to be seen. The high price of wheat is making all the Western people feel good. The farmers are certainly in a prosperous state. It was assuredly cheering to see the indications of better times on all hands. In the Western country the atmosphere was electric with hope and the best judges of business with whom I have talked are confident that we are on the eve of decided revival."

GREAT DEEDS, FEW WORDS.

Brief Dispatches That Told of Famous Victories In War.

It is fitting that the great soldier, who should be a man of deeds rather than words, should set an example of terseness in his dispatches. Thus, after the capitulation of Prague, Suvaroff thus communicated the joyful news to his empress: "Hurrah! Prague!" To which Catherine, not to be outdone in brevity, answered, "Bravo, field marshal!"

That grim seadog Robert Blake, after gaining one of his famous victories over the French, sent the news in this concise and businesslike form: "Met with the French fleet; beat, killed, sunk and burned as per margin."

The Vicomte de Turenne, marshal of France, was a man of equally few words, as he proved when, after his brilliant defeat of Conde at the Dunes in 1658, he announced his triumph in ten words. "The enemy came, was beaten; I am tired; good night."

But the world's greatest generals have always been models of brevity as of modesty since the days of Cæsar, whose "I came, I saw, I conquered," sent to his friend Amintius after the glorious victory over Pharnaces at Zela, is the most famous "dispatch" in the annals of war.—London Saturday Review.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you would your bowels, removing all the poisonous urinous waste else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

CHAPTER XXV.

I Burn a Few Bridges.

WE went over the castle rather hurriedly, I thought, but he explained that Saks merely wanted a general idea of the structure; he would return another day to make a careful inspection.

"I dare say you are surprised that I should be willing to pay double your original price for Schloss Rothhoefen," he ventured, pausing in the corridor to light a cigarette. We were on our way to the top of the east wing.

"Oh, no," I said calmly. "I am aware that treasure is buried here. As a matter of fact, I've tried to unearth it myself, but without success. I wish you better luck."

"Thanks," said he laconically, after the first swift glance of inquiry. "It is doubtless a fairy tale, handed down by tradition. I take no stock in it. My principal object in acquiring Rothhoefen is to satisfy a certain vanity which besets me. I have it on excellent authority that my ex-father-in-law—the man Titus, you know—talks of buying the property and performing the stupendous, characteristic American feat of removing it, stone and timber, just as it is, to his estate north of New York city. No one but a vulgar, purse proud American would think of doing such a thing."

The news staggered me. Could there be anything in what he said? If it was true that Jasper Titus contemplated such a quixotic move there could be but one compelling force behind the whim—sentiment. But not sentiment on the part of Jasper Titus.

"I cannot believe that he considers doing such a thing," I said, rather blankly. "You see, if any one should know, I am that one. He has not approached me, of that you may be sure."

He did not appear to be interested.

"My information is not authoritative, Mr. Smart," said he. "It came to me through my representatives who conferred with his lawyers a fortnight ago in regard to certain difficulties that had existed between us. From what they were able to gather, the idea has taken root in the old man's head. Now, I want to buy this place for no other reason than to tell him that he hasn't enough money in his possession to purchase it from me. D'you see? Vanity, you may call it, as I do, but it pleases me to coddle it."

Very thoughtfully I strode along beside him. Would I be serving the countess ill or well by selling the place to Tarnowsy? It was her whim, of course, and it was a foolish one.

"Suppose that he offered you twice what you are to pay me for the place," said I, struck by a sudden thought.

He laughed easily. "You will not, it seems, acquit me of cupidity, Mr. Smart. I should not sell to him under any consideration. That is final. Take it or leave it."

By this time we were in the rooms once occupied by the countess. He glanced about the apartment carelessly.

"Deserted, I observe," he remarked with a queer smile.

My heart almost stood still. "Eh? What do you mean?"

"If I am not mistaken, these are the rooms once occupied by your valet's wife. Am I right?"

I steadied myself. "She has gone away," I said. "Couldn't stand the climate."

"I see," said he, but he was still smiling. "How does your valet stand it?"

"Nicely," said I, with a conscious blush.

"I mean the separation, of course."

"Certainly! He is used to it."

"Isn't it rather odd that he should still think she is here in the castle?"

"Does he?" I murmured.

"I inquired for her when I encountered him downstairs. He said she was quite well this morning, except for a headache."

"She is subject to headaches, I believe," said I, with the utmost nonchalance. He lifted his right eyebrow slightly, but said no more on the subject.

A pile of rubbish lay heaped in one corner of the room, swept up and left there by the big Schmicks to await the spring housecleaning season, I presume. Tarnowsy at first eyed the heap curiously, then rather intently. Suddenly he strode across the room and gingerly rooted among the odds and ends with the toe of his highly polished boot.

To my horror a dilapidated doll detached itself and rolled out upon the floor, a well remembered treasure of Rosemary's and so unique in appearance that I doubt if there was another in the world like it. Indeed, I have a distinct recollection of being told that the child's father had painted in the extraordinary features and had himself decorated the original flaxen locks with singular stripes of red and white and blue, a sardonic tribute to the home land of her mother.

I turned away as he stooped and picked up the soiled, discarded effigy. When next I looked at him out of the corner of my eye he was holding the doll at arm's length and staring at it with a fixed gaze. I knew that he recognized it. There could be no doubt in his mind as to the identity of that telltale object. My heart was thumping fiercely.

An instant later he rejoined me, but not a word did he utter concerning the strange discovery he had made. His face was set and pallid, and his eyes were misty. Involuntarily I looked to see if he had the doll in his hand and in that glance observed the bulging surface of his coat pocket.

In silence we stood there awaiting the reappearance of Saks, who had gone into one of the adjoining rooms. I confess that my hand trembled as I lighted a fresh cigarette. He was staring moodily at the floor, his hands clasped behind his back. Something smacking of real intelligence ordered me to hold my tongue. I smoked placidly, yet waited for the outburst. It did not come. It never came. He kept his thoughts, his emotions, to himself, and for that single display of restraint on his part I shall always remember him as a true descendant of the nobility.

We tramped down the long flights of stairs side by side, followed by the superfluous Mr. Saks, who did all of the talking. He was, I think, discoursing on the extraordinary ability of ancient builders, but I am not absolutely certain. I am confident Tarnowsy did not hear a word the fellow said.

In my study we found Poopendyke and the two strangers.

"Have you made out the papers?" demanded the count harshly. An ugly gleam had come to his eyes, but he did not direct it toward me. Indeed, he seemed to avoid looking at me at all.

"Yes, Count Tarnowsy," said the lawyer. "They are ready for the signatures."

"Perhaps Mr. Smart may have reconsidered his offer to sell," said Tarnowsy. "Let him see the contracts."

"I have not reconsidered," I said quietly.

"You may sign here, Mr. Smart," said the notary as he gave me the document, a simple contract, I found.

"Jasper Titus will offer more than I can afford to pay," said the count. "Please do not feel that I am taking an unfair advantage of you. I am absolutely certain that he wants to buy this place for—his granddaughter, a descendant of barons."

The significance of this remark was obvious, and it was the nearest he ever came to uttering the conviction that had been formed in that illuminating five minutes upstairs. If he suspected—and I think he did—he preferred not to ask the questions that must have been searing his curious brain. It was a truly wonderful demonstration of self restraint. I would have given much to be able to read his innermost thoughts, to watch the perplexed movements of his mind.

"Schloss Rothhoefen is yours, Count Tarnowsy," said I. "It is for you to say whether his whim shall be gratified."

His lips twitched. I saw his hand touch the bulging coat pocket with a swift, passing movement.

"Will you be good enough to sign, Mr. Smart?" he said coldly. He glanced at his watch. "My time is valuable. When can you give possession?"

"The day the deed is transferred."

"That will be in less than three days. I have satisfied myself that the title is clear. There need be no delay."

We signed the contract after I had requested Poopendyke to read it aloud to me. It called for the payment of 50,000 kronen, or a little over £2,000, at the time of signing. His lawyer handed me a package of crisp banknotes and asked me to count them. I did so deliberately, the purchaser looking on with a sardonic smile.

"Correct," said I, laying the package on the table. He bowed very deeply.

"Are you satisfied, Mr. Smart, that there are no counterfeits among them?" he inquired, with polite irony; then to his lawyer: "Take the gentleman's receipt for the amount in the presence of witnesses. This is a business transaction, not a game of chance." It was the insult perfect.

As he prepared to take his departure he assumed an insinuating air of apology and remarked to me:

"I owe you an apology, Mr. Smart. There was a time when I did you an injustice. I suspected you of keeping your mistress here. Pray forgive my error."

Five days later I was snugly ensconced in the ducal suit at the Bristol, overlooking the Kartnerringstrasse, bereft of my baronial possessions, but not at all sorry. My romance had been short lived. It is one thing to write novels about medieval castles and quite another thing to try to write a novel in one of them. I trust I may never again be guilty of such arrant stupidity as to think that an American born citizen can become a feudal baron by virtue of his dollars and cents any more than an American born girl can hope to be a real, dyed in the wool countess or duchess because some one needs the money more than she does. It would be quite as impossible, contrariwise, to transform a noble duke into a plain American citizen, so there you are, even up.

My plans were made. After a fortnight in Vienna I expected to go west to London for the autumn and then back to New York. Strange to relate, I was homesick. Never before had my thoughts turned so restlessly, so wistfully to the haunts of my boyhood days. I began to long for the lights of Broadway (which I had scornfully despised in other days) and the gay peacockery of Fifth avenue at 4 in the afternoon. It seemed to me that nowhere in all the world was life so joyous and blithe and worth while as in "old New York;" nowhere were the theaters so attractive, nowhere such restaurants. Even, in retrospect, the subway looked alluring, and as for the Fifth avenue stages, they were too beautiful for words. Ah, what a builder of unreal things a spell of homesickness may become if one gives it half a chance!

As for Schloss Rothhoefen, I had it on excellent authority (no less a person than Conrad Schmick himself) that barely had I shaken the dust of the place from myself before the new master put into execution a most extraordinary and incomprehensible plan of reconstruction. In the first place, he gave all the servants two weeks' notice and then began to raze the castle from the bottom upward instead of the other way round, as a sensible person might have been expected to do. He was knocking out the walls in the cellars and digging up the stone floors with splendid disregard for that ominous thing known as a cataclysm. The grave question in the minds of the servants was whether the usual and somewhat mandatory two weeks' notice wouldn't prove a trifle too long after all. In fact, Hawkes, with an inspiration worthy of an office boy, managed to produce a sick grandmother and got away from the place at the end of one week, although having been paid in full for two.

The day on which I left for Paris still saw Tarnowsy at work, with his masons, heroically battering down the walls of the grim old stronghold, and I chuckled to myself. It was quite evident that he hadn't found the hiding place up to that time.

After several days in Paris I took myself off to London. I was expecting letters at Claridge's, where I always take rooms—not because I think it is the best hotel in London, but because I am to some extent a creature of habit. My mother took me to Claridge's when I was a boy, and I saw a wonderful personage at the door, whom I was pleased to call the king. Ever since then I have been going to Claridge's, and while my first king is dead there is one in his place, who bids fair to live long, albeit no one shouts encouragement to him. He wears the most gorgeous buttons I've ever seen, and I doubt if King Solomon himself could have been more regal, certainly not Nebuchadnezzar. He works from 7 in the morning until 7 at night, and he has an imperial scorn for anything smaller than half a sovereign.

There were many letters waiting there for me, but not one from the Countess Aline. I had encouraged the hope that she might write to me. It was the least she could do in return for all that I had done for her notwithstanding my wretched behavior on the last day of our association. While I had undoubtedly offended in the most flagrant manner, still my act was not unpardonable. There was tribute, not outrage, in my behavior.

Poopendyke fidgeted a good deal with the scanty results of my literary labors, rattling the typed pages in a most insinuating way. He oiled his machine with accusative frequency, but I failed to respond. I was in no mood for writing. He said to me one day:

"I don't see why you keep a secretary, Mr. Smart. I don't begin to earn my salt."

"Salt, Mr. Poopendyke," said I, "is the cheapest thing I know of. Now, if you had said pepper I might pause to reflect. But I am absolutely, inexorably opposed to rating anything on a salt basis. If you"—

"You know what I mean," he said stiffly. "I am of no use to you."

"Ah," said I triumphantly, "but you forget. Who is it that draws the salary checks for yourself and Britton and who keeps the accounts straight? Who, I repeat? Why, you, Mr. Poopendyke. You draw the checks. Isn't that something?"

"If—if I didn't know you so well I wouldn't hesitate to call you a blooming fool, Mr. Smart," said he, but he grinned as he said it.

"But he who hesitates is lost," said I. "This is your chance. Don't let it slip." He looked at me so steadily for a moment that I was in some fear he would not let it slip.

Before I had been in London a week it became perfectly clear to me that I could not stretch my stay out to anything like a period of two months. Indeed, I began to think about booking my passage home inside of two weeks. I was restless, dissatisfied, homesick. On the ninth day I sent Poopendyke to the booking office of the steamship company with instructions to secure passage for the next sailing of the Mauretania, and then lived in a state of positive dread for fear the confounded American tourists might have gobbled up all of the cabins. They are always going home it seems to me, and they are always trying to get on a single unfortunate ship. In all my experience abroad I've never known a time when Americans were not tumbling over each other trying to get back to New York in time to catch a certain train for home, wherever that may be. But Poopendyke managed it somehow. He must have resorted to bribery.

Runaway June

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

"So you were strangers," remarked Ned, and there was an implied sneer in his tone. "You helped her on the train, and I saw you in the car talking with her!"

"You?" Both the runaway bride and the dark, handsome Blye asked that question.

"Yes, I!" this triumphantly. "I caught an express and overtook your local as we pulled into the station at New York, and through the car windows I say you bending over her and smiling, and she was smiling up at you!"

There was a pause, and the listeners looked from June to Blye and then at Ned.

"Oh, yes!" and June's brow cleared. "I had sold my watch to a funny old lady on the train to pay my fare. Mr. Blye bought the watch from her and very kindly offered to let me repurchase it whenever I found it convenient. He gave me his card; that was all."

"All!" Ned thundered. "He chased you from the train in a taxi, and I followed, but I lost you both."

"I did not!" Blye heatedly retorted "I jumped in a taxi and tore straight for Cunningham's hotel," and he turned to the white mustached man for corroboration. "We were due at a dinner party that night and were to stop at Mrs. Russel's, where all the girls of the company afterward boarded."

"And I went straight to Iris!" added the aggrieved June.

"Indeed she did!" heartily agreed Iris. "She told us she had left you because you had given her money." And Bobbie Blethering was still profoundly perplexed.

"You remember I came out to the house for June's purse." Iris turned to Mr. and Mrs. Moore. "She wouldn't even let us lend her money, because she had a principle about being independent. When you and Ned chased in and drove poor June from our house and Ned found Gilbert Blye's card in her glove, then it was all off!"

"When I slipped out of Iris' window I had my purse, but no clothes," June pathetically remembered. "So I went out home to Brynport and stole my clothes and Marie."

"Why did he go to Brynport at the same time?" Ned glared savagely at Blye.

"It was an inspiration." Gilbert Blye smiled suavely and stroked his black Vandyke with his long, lean white fingers, and his black eyes glowed. "We had just formed the Blye Stock company at the dinner party. Mr. Edwards," and he nodded to the heavy man with the thick lidded eyes, "is our financial backer. Mr. Cunningham," a nod for the white mustached man, "is our leading actor, who has also an interest in the company. I showed them the picture of the beautiful girl in the watch. It had given me a great idea for a motion picture play, 'The Runaway Bride.' They were delighted with it, but we had no girl of the type."

"Wasn't I the jealous little party?" laughed Tommy Thomas. "I was to be the only leading lady of the Blye Stock company."

Gilbert Blye favored the vivacious brunette with a pinch on the ear.

"I remembered hearing Mrs. Warner tell the old lady on the train that she must earn her own living. I was certain that she would screen well. Why not get the original heroine of the idea? Edwards and Cunningham were enthusiastic. I had her address in her watch. I jumped in Cunningham's limousine and hurried right out to Brynport."

"And we reached the cafe just in time to chase you." Bobbie Blethering was beaming with eager interest. He was pieceing together a puzzle which had baffled him. "When Ned found your card we went to your house, and your wife told us you were at the dinner party."

"My wife," and a shade of annoyance passed over Blye's dark, handsome face.

"And on the way in from Brynport my taxi broke down," June went on. "Mr. Blye appeared out of the darkness as if by magic and offered his limousine."

"I have a confession to make," interrupted Blye. "I threw glass on the road." And there was a general movement of shocked understanding. All their cars had popped tires on that glass. "It was my only opportunity to stop the runaway bride. On the way in to the city I persuaded her that she could earn her independence easier and quicker in moving picture work than in any other way."

"So I became a temporary member of the Blye Stock company. I was to play the lead in the feature which he elaborated after I told him about my money problem."

"That was a great idea!" Blye was very enthusiastic. "The man, the woman and the money! It will appeal to every class and condition of people. We're spending a fortune in advertising it. Look at this new twenty-four sheet poster." And, moving a piece of scenery, he displayed a big lithograph of "The Runaway Bride," by Gilbert Blye; Portrayed by the Blye Stock Company."

"I was to be the only leading lady."

Ned Warner was the only one who paid no attention to the lithograph. His arms were still folded; his eyes were still cold. June looked at him, and her eyes filled with despair.

"Why was it necessary to bind and gag me and leave me all night in the woods?" the husband demanded.

"Ned, what do you mean? Did some one do that to you?" June was half sobbing, and there was general surprise on the part of the Blye Stock company.

BERUFFLED AGAIN IS THE MODISH BLOUSE.

Many will rejoice that the ruffled blouse has again returned. Both double frills and side frills frivolously trimmed with lace edging adorn the front of the batiste blouses. That shown in the sketch is of white batiste the ruffles edged with "Val" lace and closed with pearl buttons. A neat tailor-made and one of these crisp blouses makes a charming costume for spring and street wear.

DAINTY VACATION UNDERWEAR.

Perhaps there is nothing more conducive to physical comfort during the hot summer days than cool dainty underwear. Simplicity usually spells comfort, and often luxury. It is sometimes to be wondered that the obviously more practical designs were not made use of long ago. A delightful illustration of the new simplicity and practicability is to be found in Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8905. This is a Ladies' and Misses envelope combination corset-cover and drawers, to be made with round neck, perforated to be cut off for straight outline and to be shirred at the bust-line. Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

Dick sat up with a jolt at his wife's angry, "Read that," when the crumpled letters fell in his lap. Her eyes blazed. He had never seen her so angry before, and for a time he was too dazed to pick up the letters and try to learn the cause of this sudden transformation.

When he read Mrs. Ellson's crafty note he ground his teeth, but he paled and dropped the letter taken from Miss Rudolph's waste basket, which showed that the shallow girl had boasted of him as a conquest. A wave of fierce anger swept him.

"Just because I was civil to her and helped her in getting started with her work! Oh, fool that I was! Nell told me what she was and I accused her of jealousy, and would not see, and now Nell believes that there has been a flirtation. She has been so sick and this will make her worse."

He rose and strode to the house, but the door of their room was locked. A window opening on the porch was open; he called through the screen to the limp figure on the bed, but there was no response.

"Oh, Nell," he pleaded, "let me in; it's all a lie. Why did I not believe you when you told me what sort she was?"

There was no movement on the bed to indicate that she heard. Nell was so angry that all the love of her heart was scorched as was the corn by the hot wind that blasted the earth. She heard Dick, but did not heed what he said. The storm that raged within was too violent, too absorbing, to admit any other thought.

By this time everybody in Fairport knew of that letter; knew of Dick's cheap flirtation with a stenographer. They were pitying her. She could never hold up her head again. She hoped she would die when her baby came, hoped they could die together. Then he could marry the fool he was so devoted to.

So absorbed was she in her thoughts that she did not hear Dick go away and return with a wire, with which he unhooked the screen and stepped inside. He came to the bed and tried to take her in his arms, but she pushed away his hands and crept to the back of the bed. The poor fellow was desperate. He sat down on the side of the bed and, leaning over, whispered:

"Dear little wife, will you take that woman's word against mine? Do you think I'd lie to you?"

She turned and fixed a fiery glance on him. "Certainly, a man who would make secret love to a girl would lie about it."

"Oh, Nell!" The pain in his voice was so real that she turned to look at him; his head was bowed in his hands. "Will you take that letter to her in my presence and let me ask her about it? But of course she would deny everything to save herself, just as you do." Nell again turned her back to her husband.

Dick rose, unlocked the door, and went out to the hammock where they had been so happy a half hour before, and when his parents returned from church he was sitting with his chin in his hands looking listlessly over the fields.

Household Hints

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

A severe coughing paroxysm can be relieved by taking a teaspoon of glycerin in a swallow or hot milk.

Salt Bath—Very beneficial and restful. Purchase of druggist a box of sea salt; dissolve about a fourth of it in hot water. Saturate a bath towel in the salt water, then let it dry. After the regular bath, rub the body with the salted towel, or use it mornings after the cold bath.

To Prevent Sneezing—If you want to keep from sneezing, press the finger on the upper part of the nose, or rub the forehead just above the nose.

A bag of hot sand with a tablespoon of vinegar sprinkled on will relieve neuralgia.

OMELET RECIPE

To four teaspoons of cornstarch add one-half teaspoon of salt and one-third teaspoon of baking powder. Rub smooth with one tablespoon of cold milk. Add the beaten yolks of four eggs and eleven tablespoons milk. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs and turn into heated skillet or omelet pan in which one tablespoon of butter has been melted. Cover and cook over flame till brown, then set in moderate oven a few moments.

An omelet made with milk browns better and is more nutritious than one made with water.

"EXCUSES" FOR MAPLE SYRUP

Delicious French Toast With One Egg—Beat egg in small bowl or teacup; add pinch of salt and tablespoon of flour. In another bowl place one-half cup sour milk (more if wished) and add one-half teaspoon soda. Add this to egg mixture. Dip slices of bread in batter, fry in hot greased pan and serve with maple syrup.

milk, one pint flour, two eggs, one teaspoon baking powder, half teaspoon salt, six medium-sized apples chopped fine. Beat all thoroughly together, dip one tablespoon at a time into hot lard, fry a deep brown. Serve with maple syrup. (One-half of this can be made and will serve four people.)

Waffles—One heaping cup flour, three teaspoons baking powder, half teaspoon salt, one cup sweet milk, yolks of two eggs, whites of two eggs, two tablespoons melted butter. Mix and sift dry ingredients, add milk gradually, yolks of eggs well beaten, butter and whites of eggs beaten stiff. Cook on greased hot waffle iron. Serve with maple syrup.

NOVEL USES OF LETTUCE

At this season of the year we crave for something green and most green vegetables are too dear, and not very good.

Many overlook the possibilities of lettuce. It can be bought for 10 cents at the market now and can be prepared many ways.

Cream of Lettuce Soup—Put half a pound of lettuce through the food chopper. Heat a pint of milk in the double boiler, thicken with one tablespoon of flour rubbed smooth with one tablespoon butter. Add the lettuce, season to taste with salt, pepper and paprika and serve with croutons.

Greens—Cook lettuce alone or in combination with dandelions, mustard or young horseradish leaves. Serve hard-boiled eggs and sliced lemon.

Lettuce Sandwiches—Use either white or Boston brown bread. The lettuce can be spread with mayonnaise, cream cheese, cottage cheese, peanut butter or you can put a lettuce leaf between slices of bread spread with any meat paste or mash

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

How the Animals Made Garden.

In telling of the garden plots, I think I will commence
With J. Augustus Rabbit's, which was planted next the fence.
"If I may plant just what I please," young J. Augustus said,
"I'm very sure that I would like a splendid cabbage bed.

"A cabbage is a lovely thing; it's pleasing to the eye,
And will be pleasant to the taste," he added, "by and by."
And so he set some cabbage plants, all neatly in a row,
Then watched them with an anxious eye to see if they would grow.

And grow they did, until one day young J. Augustus said,
"I'm sure that it would do no harm to eat one cabbage head;
I never had experience," said he, "with garden stuff;
I'll have to eat one so I'll know if they have grown enough."

Next morning when the children went to see their garden beds
They found that all the cabbages had lost their nice green heads.
They ran for J. Augustus and said, "Come out here quick!"
But J. Augustus only moaned, "I can't; I am too sick."

The reason for this state of things is very, very plain;
Augustus dined on cabbage till he got a dreadful pain.
Said he, "I have decided the next garden that I make
Will only have things in it that won't make my stomach ache."

Then Mother McGrew shook her kindly old head,
"I know you'll be wiser the next time," she said,
"For I'm sure you'll agree, there's no uglier weed
That a young child can grow than the one that's called greed."

"UNCONSCIOUS SPECULATION."

Many people appreciate the dangers of speculation and aim to avoid it. And yet these same people will often put their money into uncertain ventures, such as not insuring their interests, that represents investment. When a fire comes along and wipes them out they realize, too late, that they have been indulging in unconscious speculation. You are not speculating either consciously or unconsciously when you insure here.

3COOP, THE CUB REPORTER — THE CHIEF'S PERISCOPE WAS UNDER WATER — BY "HOP"

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

How would you like to be placed in a fifty gallon milk can filled with water and then have the lid of the receptacle tightly clamped down with six padlocks, then being left to yourself to get out? That's what happened to Hardeen, the handcuff king, at Proctor's Theatre, yesterday, when he made his first appearance in an engagement for the first half of the week. There was no doubt about the can being absolutely water tight and air tight, or that it was sure enough locked. Plainfield men, among them Constable George York, Patrolman Russell McIntyre and representatives of the local press, saw that Hardeen was locked in; yet within forty-five seconds he had freed himself and was standing before the audience. How this seemingly impossible feat is done is not known as a curtained cabinet shuts off the view of the audience for the time being.

Many other sensational feats were shown by Hardeen yesterday and last night, all of which astound the spectator. His act is positively the most sensational offering of the time that Proctor's Theatre has had in years. Hardeen frees himself from a half dozen varieties of handcuffs, emerged from a straight-jacket in three minutes, and in other ways demonstrated his right to the title, "The Handcuff King."

Hardeen has several other marvelous feats to show during his engagement, one of which will be presented tomorrow night. A heavy packing box is now being made by the shipping department of the A. E. Force Company and Hardeen will be securely nailed inside. Within a given time he will emerge, the same as from the milk can, without breaking his enclosure. Hardeen has been seen in all parts of the world and recently performed in the presence of 80,000 persons at Shrewsbury Gala, England.

Proctor's will have another special added attraction Thursday and Saturday of this week when the grand, spectacular film, showing the opening of the season at the Federal League Baseball Park in Newark, last Friday. The introductory pictures the baseball parade which was held about the Newark streets previous to the contest on the diamond. Many Plainfielders were in the enormous crowd which witnessed the game and it is possible that they might be easily descerned.

LITERARY

"Some one has said that "the greatest effort of civilization up to date has been attaching man to the family." Very likely, but in many ways the attachment has been bad for him and bad for the family. It has developed in him a pernicious type of pride which has led him to deem women and children as possessions—a pride no less false when sugar-coated with sentimental or chivalrous talk of the "my wife, my mother, my sister, my children" variety. Men's families have been for the most part either a source of this false pride or else a millstone round their necks; sometimes both. Most middle-class men are hopelessly dulled and stupefied by mere grubbing to get the family bills paid. In the "wage-slave" class, both the men and th ewomen share the same stupid fate, the women always geting the worst of it, however, for child-bearing is added to their other labors. Men have been apt to assume that their responsibilities to women and children were wholly discharged by merely paying over cash, without much personal service. Both men and women have meant well, but the men have been rather stupidly selfish, and the women stupidly unselfish."—Mary Ware Dennett in May Century.

What the gentlemen of the liquor fraternity fail to see is that they have created and are daily creating the prohibition movement. A generation ago Prohibitionists were simply those people who deemed it wrong to drink alcoholic liquor in any quantity, large or small. Today Prohibitionists are chiefly those who have determined that the only way to get rid of the saloon, viewed as an institution, and to cure the ravages of intemperance, is to abolish the whole traffic as past redemption. And the reason for this fast growing belief is that practically the brewers, the distillers and the saloon-keepers of the land have forced upon the American people this ultimatum: Take us as we are, or enact Prohibition. The answer to this ultimatum is to be found in the rapidly growing sentiment for prohibition.—The Living Church.

ORDINATION OF A. R. MANGIONE

Interesting Exercises Held Under Auspices of Elizabeth Presbytery.

DR. J. S. ZELIE PRESIDES

Examination of W. R. Simpson for License Results in Lively Debate Owing to His Belief—W. L. Imes Admitted for Ordination.

After successfully passing an examination before the Elizabeth Presbytery, in the First Presbyterian church, yesterday, A. R. Mangione was ordained at last night's meeting. He will become the pastor of the Italian Mission of this city, which is connected with the First church as its home mission. There were a large number of the Italian congregation present, and the charge to the congregation was given in Italian.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, acted as moderator, and asked the constitutional questions of the ordination ceremonies. In the absence of Dr. A. Pirazzini, of New York, Rev. Dr. Whitfaker, of Elizabeth, preached the sermon to the congregation. Dr. P. Di Nardi, of Newark, gave the charge to the minister, and F. J. Pametta, of Brooklyn, the charge to the congregation. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, made the ordination prayer, and Mr. Mangione pronounced the benediction.

The Presbytery had a lively session yesterday afternoon when candidates appeared for license and ordination. William G. Simpson, of Elizabeth, a student at Union Theological Seminary; William L. Imes, colored, also a student there, who has been called to the pastorate of Bethel chapel; and A. R. Mangione, the pastor-elect of the local Italian Mission, were all before the Presbytery, and passed creditable examinations.

The examination of Mr. Simpson, who still has another year in the seminary, was the occasion for considerable debate, chiefly because of a difference in views regarding the Virgin Birth and the Atonement. Mr. Simpson was somewhat nervous, and yet he appeared to have some very clear and definite views. However, he said that he was not dogmatic; that he was ready to be convinced either way.

There did not seem to be any doubt in the minds of a majority of the members of the Presbytery present but that the views held by Mr. Simpson were orthodox, but the way he had of expressing them did not appeal to some of the ministers, who did not hesitate to express their opinions.

Following the examination Mr. Simpson was requested to retire from the room, and then followed the debate. Finally, the candidate was recalled, questioned further on certain points and when the final vote was taken only two members dissented. Mr. Simpson, as well as Mr. Imes and Mr. Mangione, were accepted. Mr. Imes will be ordained at Bethel chapel in May. The next session of the Presbytery will be held in June at Basking Ridge.

During yesterday's session four commissioners were elected to the general assembly. They were Rev. L. B. Crane, of Elizabeth; Rev. Charles E. Hoyt, of Pluckemin; William D. Murray, of the Crescent Avenue church, and J. H. Manning, of the First Presbyterian church.

EXCURSION TO SUNDAY MEETING IS CANCELLED

The proposed excursion to Paterson to hear "Billy" Sunday, which had been planned for Saturday, April 24th, under the direction of the Y. M. C. A., churches and the Christian Endeavor Local Union, has been cancelled owing to the inability of the committee to secure a reservation.

The committee had received assurances that reservations could be arranged, but have just received word that the Paterson authorities have changed their mind about allowing reservations outside of that city.

The burial was at Milton, Mass.

BORO SENIORS NAME CLASS DAY OFFICERS

Committees Elected to Take Charge of Various Activities.

A meeting of the Senior Class of the North Plainfield High School was held at noon yesterday to appoint the committees and arrange the details of the class day exercises, which will be held during the latter part of June.

The entertainment committee, which will take care of the refreshments, dancing, time and place for the entertainment, consists of Frank Fetherstone, chairman; the Misses Mobus, Douglas and Meany, and Wesley Hughes. The class poem and the words of the class song are entrusted to Miss Doughty, by a unanimous vote. Elmer French was appointed class historian, and a motto committee was composed of Miss Hogan and Messrs. Lee and Chandler. A class prophesy and the last will and testament are to be arranged by Viola Hauser, chairman; Elva Lippincott, Frank Fetherstone, Elmer French and Hoyt Tomkinson.

The arrangements will be undertaken by the Misses Rowley and Schmidt and Ralph Smalley. This committee will also provide the program for the affair and the dance cards. The dance will be made a feature and will continue until a late hour, as it is the last the seniors will attend as members of the student body.

HIGH SCHOOL WILL BE REPRESENTED

Local Institution's Debaters to Compete in College Event.

Ten of New Jersey's most prominent preparatory schools will send representatives to a contest in extemporaneous speech, to be held in the auditorium of the East Orange High School, Friday evening. Each High School is entitled to one representative. The subject for discussion is "The Merchant Marine of the United States." The speakers are to secure all possible information on this subject preparatory to discussing any phase of it. One hour before the contest, a special topic, drawn from the general subject, will be announced to the competitors. This will be stated in the form of a proposition to be debated. At this same time the speakers will draw lots for sides and for positions on the program. The competitors will then each be furnished a quiet room and will be given one hour in which to arrange their arguments for presentation.

At the end of that period the sides will be arranged upon the platform as for a debate. Each speaker will have eight minutes for his argument. The prizes are to be awarded for extent and accuracy of information, its relevance to the specific topic, and effectiveness in organization and presentation.

The winning school will receive a trophy plaque. The winners of first, second and third places will be awarded individual medals, mounted with the Colgate seal.

The schools entered for the competition are: Morristown School, Orange, Montclair, Bayonne, Rahway, East Orange, South Side, of Newark, Battin of Elizabeth, and Plainfield High Schools, and Peddie Institute.

The contest is carried on under the auspices of the Public Speaking Department of Colgate University. Prominent Colgate alumni will officiate as judges. The East Orange High School orchestra will furnish music for the occasion.

SECOND ELECTION IN THE BOROUGH

New Vote on Consolidation Question Made Necessary by Senate Bill 286.

IMPORTANT CHANGES

Amendment Calls for Retention of Borough Council for Period of One Year After Consolidation Takes Effect.

If Plainfield and North Plainfield are to be consolidated, as has been hoped by a large number of residents in both municipalities, it will be necessary for the borough to hold another special election on the question. That was determined when the Legislature passed the so-called consolidation bill shortly before the adjournment yesterday. The bill, as introduced, originally provided a method for bringing about the consolidation of the two municipalities, following the vote taken last September in the borough, when the people there decided that they wanted to become a part of Plainfield. But the opponents of consolidation went before the Legislature and had the act so amended that the election last fall is superceded, and the matter will have to become a campaign issue again.

Another amendment to the act which makes consolidation possible provides that in order to complete the work, after the city and borough have voted in favor of the proposition, the Borough Council must remain in office for a year to settle any disputes which may arise over ward lines, or other questions. In case such disputes cannot be settled, it is provided that a circuit court judge shall appoint a commission of six men, three representing each municipality, and such commission is to work out the program.

President William Newcorn, of the Board of Trade; Dr. William L. Saunders, chairman of the Board of Trade Consolidation Committee, and Mayor Robert Clark, of the borough, were among those who went to Trenton yesterday to urge the passage of the bill, and Councilman Alexander Milne was there looking after the interests of the anti-consolidationists. Both sides seem satisfied with the bill as finally enacted.

U. S. NEUTRALITY CANNOT BE IMPEACHED, SAYS BRYAN

Washington, April 21.—Reply has been made by the United States to the recent German note protesting against this country selling arms and munitions of war to the Allies and failing to enforce the delivery of foodstuffs shipped to Germany. Announcement to this effect was made by Secretary Bryan today. The reply in contrast to the German note is said to be dignified in tone but to maintain with emphasis that this country's neutrality cannot be impeached.

AUSTRIAN TROOPS FEAR AN INVASION

Whole Line of the Isonzo River is Being Strongly Fortified.

Rome, April 21—New Austrian troops are being gathered on the Italian border fearing an invasion by Italian soldiers, according to reports from the frontier.

A large contingent of Austrian troops have been quartered at Monfalcone, Ronchi and Sagrado. The Austrians also are said to have strongly fortified the whole line of the Isonzo River with intrenchments, behind which batteries are already in position.

The eve of the birthday of Rome was observed with great patriotic demonstrations throughout the city last night. The dominating note of the manifestation was a desire for the complete unity of the country.

Senator Roselli Doyen, president of the Society Dante Alighieri, addressed a manifesto to the country. In his statement Senator Doyen said, "This year on its birthday Rome is on the eve of great events. Consolation is approaching for the Italians who have waited and suffered."

He urged the confidence in the government, order and calm concord recalling that Dante Alighieri has only one party—that of United Italy. In the name of Dante he wished Rome "victory" tomorrow.

THREE APPOINTED TO POLICE FORCE

Common Council Affirms Committee's Action and Names New Men.

ORDINANCE AMENDED

New Department Ranking Passed on Two Readings and Ordered Advertised—Residents Say Avenue is Used for "Speeding."

Mayor Leighton Calkins at an adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, appointed Joseph Dunlap, Samuel Kriney and Raymond G. Strayer special policemen to serve fro June 1 next to January, 1916, to fill vacancies now existing in the police force. The three men recently passed the police examinations with high marks. John Wurth, the fourth man to pass the examination, was omitted from the appointments at this time. He may be named later in case another man is needed.

The new men will serve the usual probationary period and if found satisfactory will be given regular berths in the department. All of them measure up well to the physical and mental requirements and should make valuable additions to the police force.

The police ordinance was amended last night, when Mr. Claybrook, in the absence of Chairman Babcock, presented an ordinance which was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised. This provides for the following ranking of the force: Chief, captain, lieutenant, sergeants and patrolmen. The ordinance gives the Police Board the right to regulate the pay of the men in case of illness. No change is made in the salaries, they being the same as before.

Residents of Prospect avenue recently complained to Mayor Calkins about the constant use of that thoroughfare by automobile owners and dealers as a place to try out cars, and Mr. Calkins referred the matter to the Council last night, with a statement that he had directed Police Chief Kiely to stop the practice complained of. The street committee was also requested to repair Prospect avenue and this will be considered at a future meeting.

A resolution by Mr. Hylan and adopted, authorized Street Commissioner Gavett to give the usual notice to property-owners who have failed to comply with the sidewalk ordinance and in case of failure the city will lay the walks and charge it up to the property-owners.

ASSEMBLYMAN RUNYON IS HONORED BY COLLEAGUES

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, majority leader, is the proud possessor of a one karat diamond ring, which was presented to him by Assemblyman Kates, on behalf of the members of the House, during the closing hours of the Legislative session which closed yesterday. The presentation was one of several made to members. Speaker Godfrey received a gold watch, which was engraved with the State seal.

Former Minority Leader Thomas Martin, now Secretary of State, received a beautiful clock; Sergeant-at-Arms Swan was presented with a tick-pin. Speaker Godfrey also received an ivory gavel, a gift from the State. During a social time which followed, Assemblyman Runyon entertained his colleagues with vocal solos. There were also instrumental numbers.

POISONED FROM SCRATCH.

Edward Jackson, son of Stonewall Jackson, is confined to his home on Somerset street with a severe attack of blood poison, which for a time threatened to result fatally. The young man was scratched along his forearm by coming in contact with a horse's tooth as he was giving it some medicine. The poison spread rapidly and Dr. Yood, who was called, found it necessary to make a long incision. Mr. Jackson has been in bed for the past ten days, but is now able to be about the house.

WARNED BY COURT.

Samuel Rabinowitz appeared before Judge DeMeza in the city police court yesterday on a complaint filed by Health Officer Randolph Chandler. He was charged with neglecting cesspools in his premises. He was reprimanded and allowed to go on a suspended sentence.

IMPERSONATION OF "MOTHERS IN COUNCIL"

Young Woman Represent Different Nationalities in Costume.

A marked feature of the program of the mothers' meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room, was the presentation of "Mathers in Council," by a number of young women, representing different nationalities, in costume. The names of those taking part were as follows:

Missionary, Miss Emily Gilger; Christian Chinese, Miss Lucy Douglas; Chinese, Miss Dorothy Lee; African, Miss Mary Buchanan; Syrian, Miss Catherine Endress; Persian, Miss Anna Sherwin; Japanese, Miss Helen Roseberry; Hindu, Miss Arline Chandler; Chilean, Miss Helen Ryno. Miss Elizabeth McGee directed the impersonations and ably managed the entire affair, which gave a vivid picture of the influences surrounding "motherhood and childhood in non-Christian lands" and the hope of happier lives and homes held out by the Gospel. The appreciation of the audience was expressed by a rising vote.

The impersonation was preceded by a devotional service led by Mrs. Charles H. Smith. Routine business followed and interesting missionary intelligence. Notice was given of the meeting of the Woman's Baptist Home Mission Society of the East Association, New Jersey, to be held in Peddie Memorial church, Newark, tomorrow, beginning at 10:30 a. m.

LOCAL DEMOCRATS SIDE WITH COLLINS

Owens and Coddington Included in Union Protest Party.

Trenton, April 21.—Against the protest of Democratic State Committeeman Dennis F. Collins and some of the most prominent Democrats in Union county, Governor Fielder nominated Lucius T. Russell, chairman of the Democratic County Committee, of Union, and chairman of the State Association of Democratic County Chairmen, as president of the new State Board of Taxes and Assessment.

The Union county delegation visited Governor Fielder on Monday in opposition to Russell, and the appointment is said to be the beginning of a battle in the election of a member of the Democratic State Committee in Union county next fall and in the selection of a county chairman. Russell will have vigorous opposition when he comes up for re-election to the county committee. This is also true as regards Collins. It was said that Collins will have one of the hardest fights of his career to face if he decides to try for re-election as a member of the State committee in Union county next September.

In the protesting delegation were, besides General Collins: Frank J. Travers, Democratic leader in the First ward, Elizabeth former Assemblyman William A. Leonard, of Elizabeth; former Judge William A. Coddington, of Plainfield, a member of the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes; Mayor Thomas Fyffe and Postmaster Kirschgasner, of Rahway, and John P. Owen, inheritance tax collector, of Plainfield.

The delegation urged the appointment of Francis V. Dobbins, of Rahway, a former member of the Assembly, who is a candidate for Democratic county chairman in Union to succeed Russell.

The delegation brought to the attention of the Governor facts regarding Russell's political record in Union county which it was believed would influence the State executive against the latter. The majority of those in the party joined in branding Russell's record as un-Democratic. Very little was left unsaid, it is claimed, when the delegation put their case before the Governor, some of the party even declaring that Russell waited for the Wilson word before getting in line for Fielder as against Wittpen for the Governorship.

BAPTIST WOMEN TO MEET.

The Baptist Women's Home Missionary Society of Eastern New Jersey will meet in the Peddie Memorial church, of Newark, on Thursday, April 22, for an all-day meeting. The 8:36 train or 8:30 trolley from this city will reach Newark in time for the morning session, which begins at 10 o'clock. A basket lunch will be served at noon, and the afternoon meeting will be held at 1:30 o'clock. Several interesting speakers have been secured for the meeting.

FLEET BOMBARDS AS BRITISH LAND

Heavy Cannonading Taking Place Between Turks and Allies' Warships.

INCREASED ACTIVITY

French Aerial Squadrons Again Attack Railway Positions Along the Rhine—Bombs Are Dropped Over Habsheim.

Berlin (wireless to Sayville, L. I.), April 21—The "Tages Zeitung" today, publishes a special despatch saying that 20,000 British and French troops have been landed near Enos, in European Turkey, on the north side of the Gulf of Saros.

A heavy cannonading took place between the Turkish batteries around Enos and the warships of the allies.

A despatch received in Berlin from Athens says great activity has been noted among the British forces on the Island of Lemnos, which lies to the west of the entrance to the Dardanelles.

Troop transports are arriving daily at Lemos from Alexandria, Egypt. The censorship is more rigid, and all indications point to strong action against the Dardanelles at an early date.

A despatch received in London yesterday from Dedeagatch, Bulgaria, a short distance to the west of Enos, said a violent cannonading occurred on the Gulf of Saros Sunday evening. The firing was so heavy that buildings at Dedeagatch were shaken.

London, April 21—The "Daily Telegraph's" correspondent wires Zurich that French aerial squadrons again attacked the railway positions along the Rhine yesterday afternoon, bombarding successfully Muehlheim and Habsheim stations and setting fire to immense forage stores at Mannheim.

French aviators appeared over the neutral zone about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, flying in the direction of Wiesenthal, where they were met immediately by a heavy fire from the heights of Tullinger, the sky being dotted by puffs of smoke from the exploding shrapnel.

The squadron, which consisted of four aviators, was seen to have headed north, and soon the news came that they had dropped bombs over Habsheim. Then proceeding further north, they must have reached Mannheim about dusk. The news was then received that the vast depots, containing fodder for 1,600 head of cattle at Mannheim, were ablaze. They burned down during the night.

Paris, April 21.—The French War Office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"Cannonades of some violence took place in the region of Arras, between the Oise and Aisne and between the Meuse and Moselle yesterday. In the Montmare wood, close to the Flireyessey highway, our attacks made a slight progress. Two German counter attacks on a line of trenches we succeeded in gaining April 20 were repulsed. Belgian aviators bombarded the arsenal at Bruges and the aviation grounds at Lisseweghe."

An agreement between Italy and Servia, which will have a direct bearing upon Italy's position, will be signed within a few days, states Le Matin, which declares that representatives of England, France and Russia have taken a hand in the negotiations.

The Journal states that the British successes in the region south of La Bassee have resulted in an advance of 600 metres, more than one-third of a mile.

Rome, April 21.—The reported clash between Austrian soldiers and Italian customs patrols on the frontier, near Lora Pass, is denied by the Government. The report is said to have grown out of the fact that thirty soldiers were sent to the hospital at Verona. These are declared to be ill and not suffering from wounds.

Petrograd, April 21.—Another naval raid against the Turkish coast positions in the Caucasus region was announced by the Russian Admiralty today in the following statement: "The first flotilla of our torpedo destroyers in the Black Sea has bombarded the Turkish positions at Archave and near the village of Soumivitze."

Constantinople, April 21 (By wireless to Berlin and London).—An official statement issued today by the war office says: "It is now known definitely that six torpedo boats attempted to penetrate the Dardanelles Monday night."

BOROUGH PLANS FOR A "CLEAN-UP DAY"

Council and Health Board Fix on May 1 as Time for Housecleaning.

At an adjourned meeting of the Mayor and Common Council held last evening, a letter addressed by W. S. Frederick, president of the Board of Health, asking for the co-operation of the Council in the matter of making May 1 general "cleanup day," was read as follows:

"The Board of Health has designated May 1 as 'cleanup day' in our beautiful borough. Will it be possible for you to arrange to have the debris which will be collected from backyards, etc., carried to the dump or otherwise disposed of so as to make our borough more sanitary?

"We desire to dispose of all matter that is unhealthful, unsightly or unclean in the borough and feel you will be glad to co-operate with our Board.

"In addition to the above we would thank your honorable body to give the project a big boost."

A motion was made and seconded that the street committee co-operate with the Board of Health in the matter. The Mayor commented in most high terms on the project and referred to Mr. Frederick, who is responsible for the movement, as a live-wire. Mr. Frederick was only recently appointed a member of the Board of Health and the Mayor in lauding Mr. Frederick said that the borough had needed him for sometime.

Mr. Frederick was present and he said that the Board had had circulars headed "A Cleanup Call," printed and that one would be distributed to each household. In addition twenty-five larger circulars had been printed to be placed in the stores. In answer to a question as to whether the Board was going to compel everybody to cleanup their place on that day, Mr. Frederick said that the people were being coaxed now and if this did no good then something else would have to be done. Mr. Frederick, however, didn't seem to think that any stringent action was going to be necessary as he thought that everybody would enter into the spirit of the movement and lend a helping hand. In speaking of "cleanup day" being observed in Philadelphia last year, Mr. Frederick said that one would be surprised to see the things that came out of the back yards. Mr. Frederick suggested that the committees of the Council get together and form a garnish commission.

Ordinances relative to the acceptance of Dunellen avenue, Second street and Schwartz place, streets which are shown on the maps of the Equator Realty and Improvement Company, were passed on their first readings.

A communication was received from the W. C. T. U. cordially inviting the Council to hear Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Georgia, orator, reformer and evangelist, speak on temperance in the Methodist Episcopal church on Wednesday evening, May 5. The receipt of the communication was ordered acknowledged.

The report of the tax collector, showing receipts and disbursements for the months of January and February, was as follows:

Balance in bank December 31, $2,184.29; 1914 taxes, $6,877.29; 1913 taxes, $3; taxes prior to 1913, $19; interest on taxes, $13.85; receipts, $9,097.75. Disbursements: School bond and interest, $2,354.72; treasurer of library, $500; borough treasurer, $6,242.51; balance in bank, 52 cents.

The report of the borough treasurer, showing receipts and disbursements for the same months was also submitted as follows.

Balance in bank December 31, $29.13; taxes for collection, $6,242.51; clerk licenses, $34.60; Mayor's fines, $2; recorder's finies, $5; poor fund, $5; rebate on lighting bill, 33 cents; miscellaneous receipts, $2.18; total receipts, $6,320.75.

Disbursements: Street improvements and maintenance, $209.29; maintenance and extension of fire department, $8; salaries of borough officials, $12.50; printing ad advertising, $5.76; interest general fund, $114.50; support of borough poor, $2; miscellaneous expenses, $34.60; maintenance of police department, $197.61; catching and dispensing with dogs, $7.75; maintenance of Borough Hall, $48.92; lighting of streets and buildings, $346.19; drainage system expense, $125; notes payable, $4,425; balance, $783.83.

Statement of joint sewerage account: Expenditures, $757.66; balance, $15,313.02. Statement of collecting sewerage account—Expenditures, $804.37; balance, $54,453.35.

It was decided not to have the streets of the borough oiled this year in view of the sewerage work. They will be kept well sprinkled, however, and a motion was made and carried to advertise for bids for the contract of doing this by the hour.

The residence of former Mayor William Wyckoff, on Dunellen avenue, is being repainted.

DENY VOTE TO WOMEN AT GENERAL ELECTION

Trenton, April 21—The New Jersey Legislature was adjourned at forty minutes after 9 o'clock last night, nearly seven hours later than the time set by resolution.

Governor Fielder and Walter E. Edge, Senate president, both issued statements reviewing the results. The former declared the session had provd to be the most tedious and wearisome, with more promised and less accomplished, that he had ever been through. Senator Edge asserted that there had been much construction work and that the Republican majority was sure to be returned next winter to carry on the work so well begun.

The closing hours of the session in the Assembly resulted in killing the Morris Canal abandonment legislation and in denying women the right to vote at the general election, in the event that the proposed amendment to the constitution is adopted.

TYGARD ENGINE ON THE MARKET

L. W. Randolph, of This City, Heads Concern to Manufacture Product.

The Tygard steam engine, considered by experts to be one of the most remarkable of the present time, and which is the invention of J. W. Tygard, of South avenue, promises to give steam power a new hold on engineers' attention. In view of the recent developments in internal combustion engines, this field has held the center of the stage. But the simplicity of the Tygard engine has won the approval of hundreds of those who have witnessed a demonstration.

L. W. Randolph, of West Front street, became interested in this invention sometime ago and under his guidance engines have been constructed and tested and further tests made at Stevens Institute at Hoboken. Mr. Randolph consulted engineers of national reputation, who inspected the drawings and models, all of whom assured him the field for the use of this type of engine was unlimited. In view of the inquiries from all parts of the world for this type of engine, it was considered advisable to organize a company to market the product, which was done under the name of L. W. Randolph, Inc. The home office of the company is in the Babcock building and a general sales office has been opened in the Union building, Newark.

As the demand appeared so great for its products, and in consideration of present conditions of the financial markets, it was deemed advisable to contract for the manufacture of engines with a large up-to-date firm. The contract was made with the Universal Castor & Foundry Company, who have a large plant located on the Plank road at Newark, with railroad sidings. This company has a group of buildings composed of foundry machines, plating, japanning, finishing, shipping and power plant covering three and a half acres.

Before entering this contract, the Universal Castor & Foundry Co. had the merits of the engine gone over with the best of engineers, who indorsed the engine. The signing of the contract was concluded with a dinner at the Queen City Hotel, by the officers of both companies.

The manufacturing company has commenced work on equipment of their shop with special tools to turn out the engines in quantities. This appears to be warranted, as the Newark office reports the first inquiry for consideration is for 100 engines for a local electrical company for direct connection to generators.

Following this, an inquiry was received for 350 engines for stoker drive on locomotives.

Very few, if any, companies have started out with as good prospects of success as the local one, and it is to be regretted that the manufacturing plant was not located in our own city.

MILLSTONE-NEW BRUNSWICK ROAD TO GO UNDER HAMMER

Those living along the route of the road are hopeful of the purchase of the line by the Public Service Railway Company.

NO INCREASE IN MICHIGAN.

WAR NEWS

The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Western Theatre—An enemy battery was observed not far from the cathedral at Rheims and was silenced under our fire. In the Argonne, the French employed a sort of bomb the effect of which was to cause our men to vomit. An attack by the enemy north of Four de Paris failed. Between the Meuse and Moselle an attack extending over a large front was repulsed at Flirey yesterday with heavy losses to the French. In Priest Wald, Le Pretre forest, we gained further ground. In the Vosges the enemy unsuccessfully attacked our positions northwest and southwest of Metzeral and Sondernach. He suffered serious losses.

"Eastern Theatre—The situation on the front remains unchanged."

Despatches published in Berlin today announce the complete evacuation by the Russians some days ago of their positions at Tarnow, Galicia, 135 miles west of Lemberg.

VINCENT ASTOR'S NEW FLYING BOAT COMPLETED

The 100-horse power flying boat ordered by Vincent Astor, has been completed by W. Starling Burgess, Marblehead, Mass., yacht builder, and within a week Mr. Astor will make his first trial trip on the Hudson River. The craft has two seats and Mrs. Astor is expected to accompany her husband.

Although Mr. Astor is a member of the Aero Club of America, and has taken great interest in aviation, the purchase of this boat marks his first active interest in flying. While on the Pacific coast recently, both Mr. Astor and his wife made several flights with professional aviators.

Mr. Astor suggested the general design of the craft, although it is of the Burgess-Dunne type, being the first flying boat to be constructed unde rthe Dunne patents. He told the builders he wanted the craft for pleasure, and would sacrifice speed for safety.

BRITISH CRUISERS IN NEW YORK HARBOR

A squadron of three cruisers, the most powerful gathered here since the war began, lay off the entrance to New York harbor today.

Closest to the shore lay a four-funnel British cruiser, seven miles east of Ambrose channel lightship. Her name and the names of her companions could not be made out, even through glasses. Ten miles east of the Highlands rose the second ship, an auxiliary cruiser, big and with lines that spelled speed.

This cruiser, observers thought, was a stranger here, the Caronia having departed, presumably for supplies.

The largest ship of the squadron, a four-funnel cruiser, lay fifteen miles southeast of the Highlands. This vessel, too, had not been seen previous by shore observers. Through glasses her signal man could be seen, flag in hand, spelling off a message to the auxiliary cruiser.

The cruiser replied and for a time there was a lively exchange of signals between the two ships.

KAISER ORDERS NEW ZEPPELINS FOR RAIDS

Genevia, via Paris, April 21.—German and Swiss newspapers published in town around Lake Constance, where the Zeppelin works are situated, say Emperor William seems displeased at the Zeppelin results and has ordered much larger dirigibles constructed.

Two of the new aircraft are to be finished each month. The number of workmen at the Zeppelin plant have been nearly doubled, and the machinery has been greatly augumented.

Count Zeppelin has arrived at Friedrichshafen to supervise the execution of the new order, the object of which, according to the newspapers, is organized raids against Paris and London.

INVESTING IN STOCKS.

Best Wall Street Tip to Those Anxious to Buy Securities.

I have noticed during a quarter of a century's observations that when all the financial writers are proclaiming the merits of a particular stock and, at the same time, insiders, who are supposed to know all about it, are pointing out its good points, increasing earnings, etc., somebody stands waiting to sell. I have also noticed that when a stock advances day by day or week by week without anything being said in explanation or without any effort being made to attract attention to it there must be something "worth while" going on, especially if transactions in that stock be large. Perhaps some of my observant readers have noticed the same peculiarities of the stock market.

It is perfectly natural that when one wants to sell his goods he should extol their merits and that if he wants to buy a property he should go about it quietly and if he has knowledge of its merits should say as little as possible about them until he has completed the purchase. The same motives and principles that move men to buy and sell commodities of any kind inspire men and movements in Wall street.

For this reason I have advised my readers who wish to be successful in speculating not to take tips so freely given by those who have their own purposes to serve, but to note with care the operations of the market and news that has bearing on the values of securities. I do not mean by this the rumors that financial writers and tipsters give out, but the real news found in official reports of declining or increasing earnings and the statements required by law to be made and sworn to.—Jasper in Leslie's Weekly.

True Actors.

In an interview F. R. Benson, the English actor-manager, once said: "I draw my recruits from every phase of society. The best have often come from the gutter. They know life. The two greatest geniuses I have ever had in my company, actors that I would place beside Jefferson, Booth, Got or Rachel, couldn't have told you six lines on the subject of art, but they could make people laugh and cry."

It's No Use.

"There's no use in talking," began Mrs. Nagg.

"I know it," interrupted Mr. Nagg, "and the fact that you persist in talking after making that declaration simply proves what I have often asserted, regarding the lack of logic exhibited by some women. Now proceed with your lecture."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

War.

Admiral Decatur once said in behalf of war that it "shortens life, but also broadens it." Most people, however, would rather have a narrow long life than a broad short one.—Kansas City Journal.

HUERTA'S RETURN UPSETS MEXICANS

All Factions Keep Close Eye on Former Dictator.

DECLARE HE IS POWERLESS

But Firmly Believe That "Personal and Family Business," the Reason He Gives For Coming Back to America From Spain, Foreshadows Attempt to Regain Authority In Mexico.

When General Victoriano Huerta, the expelled dictator of Mexico, landed at New York he denied that he had come from his refuge at Spain to seek to regain his former power. He had come merely on personal and family business, he said.

All the same, many of his friends seem firmly to believe that he is back for the purpose of re-entering the imbroglio in Mexico to try to re-establish himself now that he is sure Carranza has lost the backing of the United States and has failed. But if that is his intention Huerta had not been long in New York city before he found himself completely cut off from affiliation with any of the four most important political organizations in Mexico—the Villistas, Carranzistas, Felicistas and the Clericals.

"There is no chance for him to re-establish himself in Mexico," say Carlo de Fornaro, Carranza adviser and chief publicity agent, and Colonel Alfredo Breceda, General Carranza's private secretary, who is in Washington on a diplomatic mission.

"If he goes into Mexico and Villa catches him the same thing will happen to him that happened to Licenciado Bonales Sandoval—Villa will shoot him," declared a prominent Villista.

Has Alienated Strong Men.

"He has alienatel himself from every 'strong man' in Mexico," said the most important member of the Felicista party now in New York city.

While all Mexican political factionists agreed that General Huerta could not start a revolutionary movement in Mexico that would assume any importance, they were all, with the exception of the partisans of General Felix Diaz, uneasy about his presence in America. Detectives were set to watch the one time dictator in the interest of the Carranzistas, the Villistas and the Felicistas.

Only the Clericals seemed to take little interest in General Huerta's presence.

Carlo de Fornaro said no one knew positively what General Huerta's "personal and family business" here might prove to be, and there were many who thought such a term might very well cover an attempt to regain the presidency of Mexico, since that was a very "personal and family" affair for Huerta.

Agents for the department of justice were also sent to the Hotel Ansonia, where General Huerta is staying in New York with his companions, Abraham Z. Ratner and Colonel Jose Delgado, the deposed dictator's secretary. The general paid little heed to these attentions. Whenever he passed the men on his way to go for an automobile drive about the city he smiled at them genially.

Diaz "Not Interested."

General Felix Diaz happens also to be in New York, but did not appear to be worried by Huerta's arrival.

"He is not at all interested in General Huerta or what General Huerta can do," said one of General Diaz's important men. "He knows that the one time dictator can do nothing. He has alienated himself from every man who could help him. Nobody will have anything to do with Huerta now. There is no man of importance in Mexico who would affiliate with any Huerta movement."

"General Huerta came here in answer to an appeal from a certain henequin grower of Yucatan," Carlo de Fornaro asserts. "He was asked to head the Auguemedo revolt and was on his way to Yucatan. When he arrived in New York city he found that the revolt had been quelled.

"The scheme was to buy munitions in the United States, purchase a yacht or a small schooner and make a landing at Belize or somewhere along the coast of Guatemala. They hoped to gather an army sufficiently strong to break the Carranza power in Yucatan, Campeche and Quintana Roo and to form a small republic of those three states with Huerta at its head."

Friends of Villa admit that they regard the Huerta trip to the United States as menacing, so far as Mexico was concerned, but say they hoped that he would go into Mexico, for they wanted to see "Villa catch him."

Enrique C. Florente, Villa's confidential agent at Washington, states that the Villa government will take formal steps seeking to have the United States deport Huerta on the ground of being the murderer of President Francisco Madero.

THE FORTY IMMORTALS.

Origin and Checkered Career of the French Academy.

The Institute of France had its inception in 1570, when there was founded in Paris by the French poet, Antoine de Baif, a literary and musical society, known as the Academy of the Valois. Charles IX. granted it letters patent on Nov. 20, 1570, as the Academy of Poetry and Music. It had, however, no stability. Attacked upon every occasion and criticised by its opponents, its members ceased to meet after 1584. Almost half a century passed before a revival took place.

For some time, since the year 1629, a small circle of enthusiastic students was wont to meet at each other's homes for the study of French language and literature. From year to year its membership increased, and in 1634 Cardinal Richelieu proposed to the society to have their private status changed into a public institution, with many rights and privileges. Upon agreement by the society it was henceforth known as the French Academy, with a charter from Louis XIII. of January, 1635. It consisted then of forty members, the "forty immortals," and at no time and under no pressure whatsoever has this number been increased.

True it is, also, that here royal prerogative and personal intrigue often added an inferior member, while the far superior remained excluded, for whom popular indignation created the world known "forty-first seat." For a century and a half the academy held stated meetings until Aug. 5, 1793.—Argonaut.

WOMEN PEARL DIVERS.

In Japan They Are Taught to Swim While Mere Babies.

In Japan, where pearl fishing is an important industry, nine-tenths of the pearl divers are women. Tiny girls, mere babies, are taught by their mothers to swim, and later to dive, the seashore is their playground, and at thirteen or fourteen, when they leave school, they are usually ready to begin diving in earnest. A good mother superintends her daughter's diving exercises as carefully and instructs her as faithfully as any good German hausfrau instructs her daughter in domestic tasks.

A girl does not reach her highest point of efficiency until she is about twenty-five years old. She works from eight to ten hours a day, with only two holidays a month, diving in from fifteen to forty-five feet of water. January and February are too cold for all day work, but even then she often spends from one to five hours daily on and under the water. She wears a special dress of white cotton bloomers and short skirt, her hair is twisted into a tight knot with a cloth wound through it on top of her head, and she wears goggles to protect her eyes. A small tub attached to her waist holds the oysters. She earns from fifteen cents to a dollar a day.

On this small pay she often saves a considerable amount of money, which constitutes her dowry.—Youth's Companion.

Crossing the Channel.

What landing at Sandwich was like in 1533 we learn from Hubertus, the envoy of the Palsgrave Frederick to Henry VIII., whose story is given in Mrs. Henry Cust's "Gentlemen Errant." Hubertus was detained for a week at Calais by stormy weather and had a terrible time when he finally hired a ship and crossed. A young Englishman compelled the sailors to do their duty by ropes' ends and threats of death, and taught Hubertus, who was "middling seasick," to pump out the water, which he did "till at the break of morning the winds fell, and we saw the mountains of England spread out before us." They found themselves off Sandwich (that mountainous district) and were taken off the ship in small boats and carried "on neck or back" to land.—London Chronicle.

The Moth and the Flame.

A naturalist states that a moth—and for that matter many other insects—will fly toward a flame for the same reason that a plant seeks the light. Insects, it seems, move in the direction of the light rays that fall upon them. But the light must be of considerable intensity to produce a marked result. Toward a feeble glare the insect would move but leisurely, but in the case of a concentrated light like the flame of a candle or lamp the insect travels with great rapidity to its death.

NEW TREES PLANTED.

A consignment of persimmon trees has just been received by M. Latzko, of this city, for plantage in his orchards on Rahway road. The shipment came from the Agricultural Department at Washington. As a rule, trees of this variety do not thrive in this locality, but the government officials have requested Mr. Latzko to give this consignment a trial. Mr. Latzko has had unusual success with his California fruit trees on his farm, and out of 800 planted last year only two have died.

I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. TIME TO CLEAN UP.

The Board of Health tells us to swat the fly now, and prevent some million or two of ancesters appearing in a few weeks, provided of course that the particularly fly swatted happens to be a lady fly. All of which calls attention to the fact that with the coming of warm weather it is also time to start a clean up campaign.

Nothing would be more timely than for Mayor Calkins to issue a clean-up proclamation, urging upon the people of the city to follow the example set last year, when with the aid of the Boy Scouts the back yards and out of the way places in the city were relieved of hundreds of barrels of rubbish that had been accumulating for months, and in some cases for years.

The Newark News points out that this annual municipal clean-up system takes the place of the old-time desultory cleaning up by the individual families here and there. The old plan was good as far as it went, but there was always difficulty in getting the rubbish carried off, and while some people were ambitious to clean up their premises early in the season, others delayed it till late, and still others neglected it till taken in hand by the health authorities.

The new plan brings this business to the minds of all the citizens at the same time. All are expected to clean up the same day or week. All are guaranteed that the refuse will be carried away without expense, all are given opportunities on the special clean-up day in their respective districts that they will not enjoy any other day in the year for this purpose.

Clean-up day is a fixed institution. The cleaning must be done every spring as a sanitary precaution and as a protection against disease. The only question is, whether it shall be neglected, as it used to be, and left to individual convenience, or be made at a time when all the property owners help themselves and help the city, and when the city, in turn, helps the citizens in a duty necessary to the welfare of both.

Governor Fielder's appointment of William L. Saunders as a member of the newly created Department of Commerce and Navigation was a worthy tribute to a man who has given much valuable time to the State in the past. Dr. Saunders was one of the most valuable and active members of the old Harbor Commission, which was legislated out of office by the Economy and Efficiency bills, and that he will give an equal amount of painstaking service to the State on the new board goes without saying.

Mayor Calkins' determination to put a stop to rowdyism by some of the pupils of the Washington School is putting into action something that was suggested in these columns a month or more ago. It makes no difference who the young people are, they must be taught to respect the rights of others, and a few of them should be haled into court and given to understand that they must behave themselves in the future.

As a genuine philanthropist Judge Silzer, of New Brunswick, takes a front seat with the automobile fire company agent who gave up $500 of his commission so the city could get a better engine. Judge Silzer paid $2.50 out of his own pocket yesterday for a disputed bill, so that Middlesex county would not be put to an expense of $150 to decide a question of charges in the court over which the judge presided.

The passage of the act to make easier the consolidation of the city and borough means that another election will have to be held "over the brook." It delays the desired result just that much longer. It is a shame that two municipalities, so closely related in every way, should be forced to have separate government, with one division not able to enjoy the advantages which come to the other.

The talented members of the House of Assembly gave a vaudeville show on Monday night. The prepared program was not half as funny as the efforts of some of the members earlier in the session to try to fill the places to which the people had selected them.

The Republican county committee is already planning for an excursion next August. At that rate we will have to start using the "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early" slogan some time in July.

The man who collected $5.15 interest on a deposit made some years ago on a gas meter deserves a lot of credit. Anybody who can get anything out of the Public Service Corporation is a wonder.

The exhibition by the Boy Scouts on Monday night was a credit to the city and to those who have so unselfishly devoted their time to the work of making good citizens out of the coming men.

As a real genuine live topic of discussion the shingle roof question seems to be the most popular thing that has been stirred up in Plainfield in many a day.

Might start using that new auto fire aparatus for a jitney bus. The way it is being run about the streets leads to the belief that it should be put to some use.

It certainly is a tough job keeping one's mind on business these days, and off of the garden or the golf links, or the baseball diamond.

It didn't take any stretch of the imagination to believe that yesterday was the warmest April 20 on record.

Yes, gentle reader, we think it's safe to take 'em off.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Idaho Women Get What They Ask For.

The thirteenth session of the Idaho Legislature passed every measure which the club women of the State asked for with one exception, all but one asked for by the State Congress of Mothers, and killed three measures which the women opposed. In his record-making veto of measures, Governor Alexander signed all of the women's bills. Included among these were the red light bill and women's property bill.

New York's Infamous Cannery Bill.

The Legislature of New York State, consisting of men elected by men, and therefore representing only men, is about to perpetrate a crime against women. A bill introduced by Representative Bewley, passed by the Assembly and Senate, and now before the Governor, provides for increased hours of labor for women workers in the large canneries of that State. Until now ten hours a day, sixty hours a week, was the limit the law would allow—and close to the limit that human endurance would permit.

Montana Women Clever Voters—First Municipal Election Since Equal Suffrage is Also First Without Arrests.

The women of Montana had little difficulty in mastering the intricate voting machines in their first municipal election last week. In Butte and Bozeman and other towns they had previously conducted schools of instruction, so that they knew just how the machines worked.

The men voters were not so well prepared. The Butte Miner says: "None of the judges were forced to explain the machine to women, while many men seemed at a loss to know what to do after pulling down the levers." This was the first election in Butte during which no arrests were made, either for infractions of the election code or for ordinary election disturbances.

The fact that the women voted and were in and near the polls during the entire day is believed by the Butte police to have had a good moral effect, and to account for the orderly and quiet manner in which the voting progressed. "There were no instances reported of violent or profane language, and few intoxicated men were to be observed on the streets or at the polls."

Bad Bills Swell Suffrage Ranks—Catholic Society and Teachers Converted by Actions of New York Legislature.

Large numbers of women last week joined the suffrage movement in New York openly avowing that recent legislation affecting women is responsible for their feeling that women ought to have a vote.

One of the most significant announcements of the week was that the St. Catherine Welfare Association, an organization of Catholic women working for civic, social and industrial reforms, would hereafter have votes for women meetings and nothing else.

In making this announcement the St. Catherine Association states that the record of the Legislature for the last few months "has not been satisfactory to an organization pledged to work for shorter hours for women, equal pay for equal work, the minimum wage for women and the abolishment of child labor." The advantages secured by years of effort on the part of bodies like the Consumers' League and the St. Catherine Welfare Association are nullified to a great extent, it is declared, by the action in Albany.

New Jersey News—Suffrage Auto Campaign Begins April 29.

The first of a hundred or more automobile tours to be held throughout the State of New Jersey within the next six months is planned for April 29 and 30 and May 1. The party will consist of Miss Florence Halsey, Bergen county organizer, whose automobile will convey the tourists; Mrs. E. F. Feickert, of Plainfield, the State president; Mrs. F. H. Colvin, of East Orange, first vice-president of the State Association; Mrs. Emma M. Funck, president of the Maryland Woman Suffrage Association, and Doctor Mary G. Cummins, president of the Paterson Woman Suffrage League. The party will leave Paterson at 9 o'clock on April 29 and proceed to Passaic, where a street meeting will be held. The next stop will be Elizabeth, where the tourists will be entertained at luncheon by the Elizabeth Equal Suffrage League, after which an open air meeting will be held. Proceeding south from Elizabeth, stops will be made in two or three towns for short meetings, and Lakewood will be reached in time for dinner, after which a mass meeting will be held under the auspices of the new Lakewood Equal Suffrage League. Leaving Lakewood early Friday morning, the party will proceed to Atlantic City, reaching there in time for the board meeting of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, which will be held at the headquarters of the Atlantic City Equal Suffrage League, 2550 Boardwalk, of which Doctor Alma H. Edgar is president. In the afternoon a reception and tea will be held in honor of the members of the State Board at the home of Mrs. Joseph Marvel, sister-in-law of Miss Lulu H. Marvel, president of the Atlantic City Woman Suffrage Club. In the evening a mass meeting will be held in the auditorium of the Atlantic City High School.

The automobile tourists will leave Atlantic City on Saturday morning and proceed to Philadelphia, reaching there in time to march in a Suffrage parade with the large New Jersey continent which is going over from Camden, Merchantville, Moorestown, Riverton, Haddonfield and other South Jersey towns. In the evening the tourists will speak at the Suffrage Day celebration in Camden, which will be held at the City Hall Plaza, where prominent Suffragists will speak at each of the four corners of the square. Many leagues in towns through which the party will pass are planning to furnish an escort of decorated cars which will accompany the visitors for a few miles on their trip.

Suffrage Day in New Jersey.

Elaborate plans are being made by suffrage organizations throughout the State for the celebration of Suffrage Day, which falls on May 1 this year. Mass meetings will be held in every large city in the State, and there will be automobile parades, suffrage balls and many other demonstrations.

Politicians for Suffrage.

After the speech by Mrs. E. F. Feickert on Aphil 16, before the Ninth Ward Democratic Club, of Jersey City, every man present signed a slip saying he intended to vote for woman suffrage next fall.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The conceasus of opinion among Plainfield devotees of the movies is that the Plainfield Theatre offers the latest and best in the moving picture world. This playhouse has the exclusive local contract for the latest Paramount releases, a service that costs almost double that of other houses. The Paramount concern has paid well into the millions for the rights to popular and standard plays of the last twenty years and to see these when they are newly put out and being talked about means that you must become a Plainfield Theatre patron.

The attraction for Monday and Tuesday of this week was the picturization of Henry W. Savage's "The Million" and the thousands of people who saw it were loud in their praise of it. This is being followed today and tomorrow by the comedy dramatic sensation, "The Italian," featuring George Beban, numbered among America's foremost comedians. There are many Plainfielder's who remember his work as a member of the Weber and Fields Company, in Cohan and Harris' musical production and his own playlet, "The Sign of the Rose."

For the last two days of the week, Manager Shannon has booked Cohan and Harris' "Stop Thief," featuring Mary Ryan and Harry Mestayer. It is in five parts and shows all the scenes that made this production one of the biggest hits of the last two season's on the legitimate stage. There is a long laugh every half minute and the breathless interest of the audience is held from start to finish.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Miss Campbell, the High School civic teacher, has been absent for a week on account of an attack of grip at her home in Short Hills. She is recovering rapidly. During her absence her place is filled by Miss Mair.

The committee appointed for that purpose has ordered the commencement invitations from a New York firm. They will be engraved, and the class seal is embossed in gold on the heading.

A delegation has been detailed from the junior class to arrange for transportation to and from Watchung on the night of the junior play. The dancing on that night will continue until 2 o'clock and some of the Mt. Bethelites will have trouble getting home at that hour.

Your "for sale" ad will be found and considered—probably investigated—by some of your "logical buyers."

WELL KNOWN WOMEN TOUR NEW JERSEY FOR SUFFRAGE

Mrs. Churchill and Mrs. Funk Lead the Way.

The New Jersey suffrage campaign is bringing into the state many well known national leaders who are going to reach the voters in a series of automobile trips. Mrs. Winston Churchill and Mrs. Antoinette Funk of Chicago are leading off with an automobile trip which, beginning in the southern part of the state at the end of April and gradually working north, will extend over several weeks. Every detail of the trip is being carefully planned, and at different points they will be met by local suffragists, who will conduct them to meetings and receptions.

Mrs. Winston Churchill, who is treasurer of the campaign committee of the National American Woman Suffrage Society, hopes that as soon as her husband has finished his new book he will join her and aid in the New Jersey campaign, while Mrs. Funk is to be assisted by her daughter, Virginia, who is one of the youngest speakers for suffrage in the country.

MRS. WINSTON CHURCHILL

Mrs. Churchill, who was Mabel Harlakenden Hall of St. Louis before her marriage to the well known author has for a number of years been one of the most popular hostesses in her beautiful country home, Harlakenden Hall, Cornish, N. H. In 1908, when her husband entered political life, Mrs. Churchill became most keenly interested in the question of woman suffrage and has since done much hard work for the cause.

Mrs. Funk can claim to have been born in a political family. Her grandfather was Judge James Leland, the man who named the Republican party, while her father, Cyrus Leland, was a Democrat of the old school.

She is by profession a lawyer, and her legal acumen and political insight have put her into the front rank of the national leaders in Washington.

"I am so vitally interested in the campaign here," says she, "that I wish I could write New Jersey into my name."

Even Nietzsche admitted woman was a riddle to him. No man professes to understand her. Is that the reason men feel so competent to represent her in politics?—Puck.

NEW JERSEY MEN WORKING FOR SUFFRAGE.

A State Dinner Will Be Held.

Large numbers of New Jersey men are going to play an active part in the suffrage campaign, according to Champlain L. Riley of Plainfield, president of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage.

"We have engaged a special worker for the campaign who is co-operating with the women's organizations all over the state in reaching the voters. Our league is growing rapidly in numbers and influence.

"We are planning to hold a state men's dinner in Newark in the middle of May, and already we are promised wide support from all the cities around. Some of the counties have county committees of men, while other cities, such as Newark and Paterson, have formed committees of men who are pledged to reach as many voters personally as they possibly can. In Westfield, L. J. Turner has been chosen campaign manager and will use the forces of men and women to the best advantage until the vote is taken in September."

EARNERS' DAY.

Working Women Give to Suffrage.

Hundreds of women in the states of New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, where the question of woman suffrage goes to the vote this fall, are setting aside April 24 as the special day for their contributions to the campaign funds. As many as are able are giving the whole day's earnings to the cause of their own and their sisters' enfranchisement. New Jersey has nearly a quarter million of wage earning women.

Bringing Up the Voters.

The quick march of woman suffrage in New Jersey is due largely to the caliber of the women who are working for it, according to Mrs. Minnie J. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Women's Union of New Jersey.

"To take a few examples out of many," says Mrs. Reynolds in supporting her claim, "our leader in Rocky Hill, Somerset county, is Mrs. Bolmer, who, left years ago the widow of an Episcopalian clergyman, became a successful farmer and reared five sons, all of whom are going to the polls to vote loyally for the enfranchisement of their mother.

"Mrs. F. E. Sturgis of Westfield has brought up her four sons, all of whom are voters and suffragists, while the two sons of Mrs. Leslie I. Cooke of Hackettstown are successful business men. Mrs. Clara Laddey, so long a leader among the New Jersey suffragists, has brought up her son and daughter, both of whom are successful lawyers in New York.

"We could continue the list indefinitely of such women in our organization. It is to be noted that not only are these women able to put into their work for suffrage the judgment and ability which have made them able to bring up their families, but they have the definite advantage of being able to bring their sons to the polls. Each of them is a living argument for woman suffrage and an argument which is not lost on the people living in their neighborhood."

Unions Work For Suffrage.

Members of the labor unions of Essex county anxious to give organized and effective support to woman suffrage have formed a labor union suffrage league in Newark.

The league is still very young, but it has well over a thousand members with Percy Suc of the Hatters' union as president and for vice president Frank A. Fetridge, president of the Essex county trades council.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is opening the campaign for the Labor Union Suffrage league.

FUNISH SPECTATORS FOR ELEVEN ROUNDS

Schoolboys Perform in Listless Style, Locals Losing to Brunswick.

As the old story goes, with three men on bases, two strikes and three balls on the batter, Casey struck out. But New Brunswick's Casey, alias Fulton, set a precedent by starting a rally that resulted in seven runs. His clout, coupled with an error by Rosenson, helped land the first three tallies. This all happened in a timely rally in the eleventh inning when the visitors boosted the score to 13—8.

Brick pitched fairly good ball for eight innings, when Denny took his place after the tieing two runs had been scored by the opposing team. He quickly closed the inning by fanning the next two. But in the last inning he allowed a trio of hits which, accompanied by a few errors, gave the game away. Budinot started the first with a hit, but Brick caught him asleep on first. The next batter got hit, and was sent to second on a sacrifice. Then aided by a bunch of errors and a few bone-head plays, N. B. H. S. sent three tallies across the home plate. That ended the visitors' scoring until the fifth and after that they got one in every stanza until they tied the score in the eighth.

The local youths got started in the third inning and did some fine work with the stick. O'Leary grafted first, being hit by a pitched ball, but was caught out at second by the pitcher when Kyle hit into his hands. Mills got a hit and Rosenson a pass filling the bases with Peacock up. The veteran knocked out a twin-sacker, scoring three men. Noonan then got on base on an error by the centerfielder, and Hirsch brought both home with the remaining two of the locals' five runs.

Plainfield ended their scoring in the next inning, when Kyle got a safe hit and then advanced to third when Mills got to first on an error. Rosenson slammed out a timely three-bagger, sending ahead of him two counters. He died on third when Peacock struck out.

The fielding of both teams was very ragged and had they supported their pitchers as well as they handled the clubs, the story might have been entirely different. In all, there were sixteen errors made, the local institution counting for ten of them. The only good piece of work done in the field was the double play by Rosenson, who made a spectacular catch of Brestopf's grounder, touched second and threw the runner out at first.

CENTRAL LEAGUE OPENS.

The expanded Central League opens its season of 1915 today, with eight teams battling in four cities. Wheeling, Erie and Youngstown are the newcomers in the Central, and Springfield has been dropped. Fort Wayne has been through a process of reorganization, and Dayton and Terre Haute are also under new management. President Essick is himself handling the reins at Grand Rapids, while "Punch" Knoll retains field-marshalship of the Evansville club.

WESTERN LEAGUE OPENING.

The pennant race of the Western League opens today, with the promise of another successful season. The champions of the league are entertaining Des Moines at Sioux City, Omaha is at St. Joe, Denver is at Lincoln and Topeka opens at Wichita. President Tip O'Neil declares that baseball will cure all the headaches that war news may bring, and that the Western was never in better condition at the opening of a season.

FITZ GAVE WILLARD FIRST BOXING LESSON

Also Tried to Land Manager Job But Terms Floored Kansan.

Bob Fitzsimmons was the first to teach Jess Willard how to use his big fists with the best results. It was just after Willard, a greenhorn, had boxed the late Luther McCarthy in Madison Square Garden, New York, that Fitz took the Kansan aside.

"You'll never beat anybody with those overhand wallops," said the Cornishman. "They don't hurt at all. If you'll learn to hook that left hand up to the jaw and to drive your right into the body underneath the other fellow's guard, you'll win."

"I wish you'd show me how," replied Willard, who was ready to learn. so they went to a private gymnasium one day and put on the mitts. Fitz told Willard how to handle himself and illustrated his lesson by clipping the big fellow on the chin with a left hand hook that didn't travel more than six inches.

"Let me manage you and I'll make you champion of the world," said Fitz as they pulled off the gloves.

"How much do you want," asked Willard curiously.

"Half what you win!" was the rejoinder, whereupon Willard said he didn't care to engage a manager just then. But the Kansan never forgot Old Bob's instructions.

Y. W. C. A. NINE CHALLENGED BY OUT OF TOWN TEAMS

Baseball practice for the members of the Y. W. C. A. will be held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the Belmont avenue field. All members wishing to try for a position on the nine are requested to report. Since notice of the organization of the local feminine ball tossers, the association has received several offers from out-of-town aggregations.

Among them are the Bloomer Girls' Baseball Club, of Brooklyn, and girls' nine of Jersey City. Arrangements are being made to schedule a series of games between the newly organized East Front street nine and the North Plainfield High School girls.

BORO TEAM SEES GAME.

The members of the North Plainfield High School baseball team witnessed the P. H. S.-New Brunswick game on Parker Field, yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of giving the local team the double "O." North Plainfield took the measure of the New Brunswick team last week by a 5 to 3 score while the representatives of the Ninth street institution met with a disastrous defeat in the eleventh round of yesterday's contest.

PLANNING BIG MEET.

The athletic meeting, for the completion of arrangements of the Central New Jersey Interscholastic meet to be held in this city on Decoration Day, is booked for next Monday afternoon in the Plainfield High School. At that time representatives from about fourteen schools in this section of the State are expected to be present. The meet will be held under the auspices of the Union County Athletic League.

BIG RACE SEASON.

Lexington, April 21.—Horsemen are here in unusual numbers today, looking over their faithful steeds and trying them out with the watch over the Association track, in preparation for the opening of the twelve-day meet tomorrow. Sixty races will be run during the dozen days, and interesting contests are in store for the followers of the sport.

JACK SAILS FOR SPAIN.

Havana, April 12—Jack Johnson, the former champion heavyweight pugilist, and his wife sailed yesterday for Spain on the steamer Maria Cristina. From Spain Johnson intends to proceed to England. Although he has no passport, Johnson says he expects to experience no trouble. He says he will return to Havana in June and open a gymnasium.

"MIDGE" KLINE ASSUMES MANAGER'S RESPONSIBILITIES

The Royal A. C. baseball team, of this city, has re-organized this year and will be under the management of William A. "Kline, who will have for an assistant Paul Coleman. The candidates will begin practice this week and Manager Kline expects to have a faster team than last year. The team will travel, playing games on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Some of the fast semi-pro teams of New York and Newark will be booked. The season will open on May 15 and Manager Kline will be glad to hear from any team in this vicinity.

SPORTING NOTES

"Pants" Rowland, the new White Sox leader, will blush tomorrow when he sees the bunch of silverware the fans have wished on him.

Lexington goes on to the racing map tomorrow, and will share interest with Havre de Grace. Some of the Maryland horses have gone to the bluegrass events.

A strange report comes from Lexington that Marvin Hart may make his re-entry into the ring during the race meet.

Willard is making hay while the clouds are away, but followers of the fight game can't figure out a long term for him in the limelight.

The professor tells us that the athletic heart is a reality, and not a joke. The heartless athlete is also with us, according to Willie Ritchie's sister. Who says Willie copped off all of the kale.

The star college athletes meet at Philadelphia, Friday and Saturday. Three hundred and forty-one teams are entered in the relay and other springs.

Hobey Baker the hockey and football star, goes in for swimming this summer, representing New York in the water.

George Moore, the new three-cushion billiard champion, is a little fellow, hardly higher than his cue. He was defeated only twice in thirteen games at Chicago.

Barney Oldfield was the heaviest winner in the coast auto races. He pocketed $7,000 in cash, besides trophies.

Patsy Donovan, the new manager of the Buffalo International team, is showing his boys today in his home city of Lawrence, Mass.

Buffalo has an armless golfer, who plays good billiards also, and writes. He holds his golf club between his cheek and shoulder, and makes the course in 108, with 8 as bogie.

Don Lippincott says the limit has been reached in the 100-yard dash. Nine and three-fifth seconds seems to him to be the lowest we can expect.

Al Reich, who meets Carl Morris in New York tonight, is picked by the Gotham sports as the next heavyweight champion.

Harvard and the Navy cross bats at Lacrosse today at Annapolis. The Cambridge boys will tackle John Hopkins on Saturday.

The Athletics' line-up looks natural, and assures us Connie is at the helm with the steady arm as of yore.

The Pacific Association boxing championships will begin at Frisco tomorrow, under A. A. U. rules.

The motorcyclists are having a big meet at Oklahoma City today and tomorrow. Road races are the events scheduled.

BERNARDSVILLE CANCELS.

The North Plainfield High School baseball team was handed a disappointment this morning, when Manager Roscoe VanCamp received a telephone message from the Bernardsville manager canceling the game for this afternoon. His excuse was a misunderstanding of the date, which he claims to have changed to Friday of this week and of which VanCamp knew nothing. The auto bus had been hired for the occasion, so the team took the ride for pleasure, as no other date is available for the game. The Bernardsville manager very kindly offered to pay half expenses of the trip anyway to make up for his mistake.

FOURTEEN IN BIG RACE.

London, April 21.—The City and Suburban Handicap of 2,000 sovereigns for three-year-olds and up was won by J. B. Joel's "Black Jester." Lord D. Abermon's "Diadumenos" was second, and J. Buchanan's "Dan" Russel" finished third. Fourteen ran.

MEET OFF.

The dual athletic meet between the Plainfield High School and Montclair High School athletes, which was scheduled for next Friday at Montclair, has been cancelled. The baseball team will go to Newark that afternoon.

NEW N. P. H. S. GAMES.

Manager VanCamp, of the N. P. H. S. baseball team, has filled an open date on May 22 and added another date on June 9 with two West Hoboken teams, the former at that place and the latter here.

PARK CLUB BOWLING.

Five-back competition will be staged at the Park Club tomorrow night and handicap ten pins on the following night. These will be the next to the last night's play for the season.

CRANFORD GAME.

The game between N. P. H. S. and the Cranford School, of Cranford, which was postponed from April 6 on account of the snowstorm, has been fixed for May 17.

BOROUGH BOWLING.

There will be two matches in the Borough One Man Bowling Tourney tonight. Two will also be staged tomorrow night.

BOY AGAIN IN TOILS.

Joseph Moore, a young colored youth, who has been giving the police considerable trouble of late, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, to answer to a disorderly charge. The court ordered him locked up until tomorrow morning and in the meantime his case will be investigated. Last week the boy was arrested for snowballing a Rabbi.

Two Interesting Views of the Johnson-Willard Battle

Photos by American Press Association.

THE two photos above show the passing of Jack Johnson, the negro champion. Upper one shows Johnson with his arms in air making a feeble attempt to block Willard's blows and the lower one Willard going after Johnson with body blows in twenty-sixth round. Twenty seconds later he was knocked out.

HOW WILLARD BECAME FIGHTER

Up to Jeff-Johnson Mill He Never Saw Battle.

HAS DRAWN COLOR LINE.

Says He Will Not Meet Another Negro Scrapper—Will Tackle Any White Man Worth While—Has Had an Interesting Career.

When asked recently how he happened to take up boxing Jess Willard, the new champion and right now the most talked about man in the world, said:

"I first got ideas of taking up the sport when I heard that Jim Jeffries, the famous fighter, had been knocked out by Jack Jackson, a colored man. I got it into my head that on account of my extraordinary size I would have a good chance to defeat the negro, provided I made a careful study of the game. Up to this time I had never seen a boxing match, let alone had a pair of gloves on my hands. I moved to Sapulpa, Okla., and saw Carl Morris, an avowed white hope, box, and as boxing didn't look very hard to me I decided to start learning at once. I sparred with Morris, with the idea always in my mind of some day being fit to meet Johnson.

"Well, I've done it, and I'm pretty happy. Johnson is the first negro I ever fought, and I'll never fight another. Yes; I'm going to draw the color line, and draw it sharp. I think it dangerous for a white man and a black to meet in any contest causing such bitterness of feeling. Why, when Jeffries was beaten in Reno, in the riots following there were twenty-six people killed in the United States."

Willard was never knocked down in four and a half years in the ring or in training. He hopes to end his career with the same record. He's so well put together that he doesn't look his six feet six and a half inches. He has a thin, keen face, is dark in complexion, has gray eyes shaded by long lashes, a high forehead and wavy black hair parted on the side. He has a sensitive mouth and a well turned chin.

He doesn't look like a prizefighter; he doesn't act one, nor are his instincts those of a fighter. In fact, his handlers complain it's hard to arouse his fighting spirit; that he's too much inclined to take things easy and not hurt the other fellow. He has a common school education, received in Kansas, with a year in high school. Then he punched cattle for a couple of years.

He was a good man at this and made enough money to marry and keep his family comfortably. He has four children, three girls and a boy, Jess junior, four months old. The oldest is seven years old. His wife and children now live in Los Angeles.

Willard is soft spoken and uses good, plain English. He thinks well and forms his own opinions. Distinctly he is of a far higher type than the prize ring usually produces. In mental equipment only Corbett, to whom he bears slight resemblance, is his equal. Those who like "dope" can add this fact to their store—the battle in which the championship passed was the longest heavyweight championship fight since the ring passed under Marquis of Queensberry rules. It went twenty-six rounds. Corbett beat Sullivan in twenty-one in 1892. Fitzsimmons beat Corbett in fourteen in 1897. Jeffries beat Fitzsimmons in eleven in 1899 and Johnson beat Jeffries in fifteen in 1910.

Sullivan was champion fourteen years; Corbett lasted five. Fitz only two. Jeffries stretched over eleven. Johnson held the crown five. That gives the average champion a seven year term.

Willard ought to last as long. He is young, a clean liver, ambitious, strong and is daily adding to his fighting equipment. Willard hasn't any politics. His father was a Republican, but he has independent political thought, which goes with his Kansas breeding.

He played some baseball and likes to see it played. Now his training gives him all the athletic amusements he needs, so he doesn't golf, but he is thinking of taking that up. He likes to read newspapers and magazines. That is his chief diversion, and he doesn't insist upon reading only articles about himself.

Altogether he is an unspoiled, well behaved, clean living, upstanding, quiet mannered young countryman. He isn't the sort of fellow that looks as if Broadway could get him as it got Jeffries on his visits to New York and some of the others. He shows no mark of the fight save a cut lip and a bruised ear. He said Johnson's hardest blows didn't hurt him, and they were mighty blows.

Wagner's Future Assured.

Honus Wagner's years of service in baseball will not be unrewarded. "The grand old man" of the diamond will not spend his last days with the minors.

Barney Dreyfus, owner of the Pirates says Wagner is still good for two or three years of active service, and after that he will continue to draw salary from the Pittsburgh club as long as he lives.

"He will never be released to go to any minor club" said Dreyfus. "He will remain on the pay roll of my team and when his active days are over I will use him as a scout or as a coach for the younger players on the team."

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the page that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Dr. Norman H. Probasco, of Park avenue, entertained the members of the Plainfield Clinical Society at his home last night. There were about twenty-five local physicians present, Dr. John Erdman, of New York city, being the guest of honor. He is the chief surgeon in the Post-Graduate Hospital of New York and is an expert on stomach surgery.

During the evening he addressed those present on the subject of "The Operative Condition of the Stomach." His talk was very instructive as well as interesting. After the meeting a dinner was served.

WEST END RUNAWAY.

A horse belonging to Charles Feller and attached to his milkwagon, became frightened while standing on Darrow avenue, this morning, and ran away. The animal galloped through West Fourth street, Spooner avenue and West Third street, striking several curbs and narrowly avoiding two collisions with other vehicles. The runaway was finally captured at Muhlenberg place, the only damage to the wagon being a bent axle.

CHAPTER XXVI.

I Change Garden Spots.

I AWOKE one morning to find a long and—I was about to say interesting—letter from the countess! It was a very commonplace communication I found on the third or fourth reading. The sum and substance of its contents was the information that she was going to Virginia Hot Springs with the family for a month or two and that Lord Amberdale was to join them there. It appeared that her father, being greatly overworked, was in need of a rest, and as the golf links at Hot Springs are especially designed to make it easy for rich men, his doctor had ordered him to that delightful resort. She hoped the rest would put him on his feet again. There was a page or so of drivel about Amberdale and what he expected to do at the New York horse show, a few lines concerning Rosemary, and a brief, almost curt intimation that a glimpse or two of me would not be altogether displeasing to her if I happened to be coming that way.

It may be regarded as a strange coincidence that I instructed Britton that very evening to see that my golf clubs were cleaned up and put into good shape for a little practice on a course near London, where I had been put up by an English author, and who was forever dingdonging at me to come out and let him "put it all over me." I went out and bought a new brassie to replace the one destroyed by the experimenting Rocksworth youth, and before I got through with it had a new putter, a niblick and a spoon, neither of which I needed, for the excellent reason that I already possessed a half dozen of each.

Keyed up to a high pitch of enthusiasm, I played golf for ten days and found my friend to be a fine sportsman. Like all Englishmen, he took a beating gracefully, but gave me to understand that he had been having a good deal of trouble with rheumatism or neuritis in his right elbow. On the last day we played he succeeded in bringing me in two down, and I've never seen neuritis dispersed so quickly as it was in his case. I remember distinctly that he complained bitterly of the pain in his elbow when he started out and that he was as fit as a fiddle at the eighteenth hole. He even went so far as to implore me to stay over till the next sailing of the Mauretania.

But I took to the high seas. Mr. Poopendyke cabled to the Homestead at Hot Springs for suitable accommodations. I cannot remember when I had been so forehanded as all that, and I wonder what my secretary thought of me. My habit is to procrastinate.

I almost forgot to mention a trifling bit of news that came to me the day before sailing. Elsie Hazzard wrote in great perturbation and at almost unfeeling length to tell me that Count Tarnowsy had unearthed the supposedly mythical Rothhoefen treasure chests and was reputed to have found gold and precious jewels worth at least a million dollars. The accumulated products of a century's thievery! The hoard of all the robber barons! Tarnowsy's!

Strange to say, I did not writhe nor snarl with disappointment and rage. I took the news with a sang froid that almost killed poor Poopendyke. He never quite got over it.

Nor was I especially disturbed or irritated by the telegram of condolence I received on board ship from Tarnowsy himself. He could not resist the temptation to gloat. I shall not repeat the message, for the simple reason that I do not wish to dignify it by putting it into permanent form.

We were two days out when I succeeded in setting my mind at rest in respect to Aline, Countess Tarnowsy. I had not thought of it before, but I remembered all of a sudden that I held decided scruples against marrying a divorced woman. Of course that simplified matters. When one has preconceived notions about such matters they afford excellent material to fall back upon, even though he may have disregarded them after a fashion while unselfishly thinking of some one else. As I say, the recollection of this well defined though somewhat remorseless principle of mine had the effect of putting my mind at rest in regard to the countess. Feeling as strongly as I did about marriage with divorcees, she became an absolutely undesirable person so far as matrimony was concerned. I experienced a rather doubtful feeling of relief. It was not so hard to say to myself that Lord Amberdale was welcome to her, but it was very, very difficult to refrain from adding the unamiable words "damn him."

This rigid, puritanical principle of mine, however, did not declare against the unrighteousness of falling in love with a divorcee.

If I have by any chance announced earlier in this narrative that the valley of the Donau is the garden spot of the world I must now ask you to excuse the ebullience of spirit that prompted the declaration. The Warm Springs valley of Virginia is infinitely more attractive to me.

I arrived there early one bright November morning three days after landing in New York. You will be rendered unhappy, I fear, by the announcement that I left Mr. Poopendyke behind. He preferred to visit an aunt at New Rochelle, and I felt that he deserved a vacation.

Before leaving New York I had a rather unpleasant encounter with my publishers. It was in the nature of a luncheon at which I was led to believe that they still expected me to supply them with the manuscript of a novel at a very early date. They seemed considerably put out when I blandly informed them that I had got no farther along than the second chapter.

"We have been counting on this book of yours for January publication," said they.

I tried to explain that the muse had abandoned me in a most heartless fashion.

"But the public demands a story from you," said they. "What have you been doing all summer?"

"Romancing," said I.

I don't know just how it came about, but the suggestion was made that I put into narrative form the lively history of my sojourn on the banks of the Danube, trusting implicitly to the imagination yet leaving nothing to it.

"But it's all such blithering rot," said I.

"So much the better," said they triumphantly—even eagerly.

"I don't suppose that you, as publishers, can appreciate the fact that an author may have a soul above skittles," said I indignantly. "I cannot, I will not, write a line about myself, gentlemen. Not that I consider the subject sacred, but"—

"Wait!" cried the junior member, his face aglow. "We appreciate the delicacy of—er—your feelings, Mr. Smart, but I have an idea, a splendid idea. It solves the whole question. Your secretary is a most competent, capable young man and a genius after a fashion. I propose that he write the story. We'll pay him a lump sum for the work, put your name on the cover, and there you are. All you will have to do is to edit his material. How's that?"

And so it came to pass that I took myself off that evening for Hot Springs, secure in the thought that Poopendyke would attend to my literary estate far more capably than I could do it myself and that my labors later on would be pleasantly devoted to the lazy task of editing, revising and deleting a tale already told.

If you are lucky enough to obtain rooms in the Homestead looking out over the golf course, with the wonderful November colorings in the hills and gaps beyond; over the casino, the tennis courts and the lower levels of the fashionable playground, you may well say to yourself that all the world is bright and sweet and full of hope. From my windows I could see far down the historic valley in the direction of Warm Springs, a hazy blue panorama wrapped in the air of an Indian summer and redolent with the incense of autumn.

Britton reminded me that it was a grand morning for golf, and I was at once reminded that Britton is an excellent chap, whose opinions are always worth considering. So I started for the links, stopping first at the office of the hotel on my way out, ostensibly to complain about the absence of window screens, but in reality to glance over the register in quest of certain signatures.

A brisk, oldish little man came up beside me and rather testily inquired why there were no matches in his room; also why the hot water was cold so much longer than usual that morning. He was not much of a man to look at, but I could not fail to note the obsequious manner in which the two clerks behind the desk looked at him. You couldn't possibly have discovered anything in their manner to remind you of hotel clerks you may have come to know in your travels. A half dozen boxes of matches were passed out to him in the twinkling of an eye, and I shudder to think what might have happened if there had been a hot water faucet handy, they were so eager to please.

"Mr. Brewster gone out yet?" demanded this important guest, pocketing all of the matches. I could see at once that he was a very rich man. "Did he leave any message for me? He didn't? He was to let me know whether he could play golf with—eh? Playing with Logan, eh? Well, of all the— He knows I will not play with Logan. See if Mr. Scott is in his room. Tell him I'd like to take him on for eighteen holes this morning."

He crossed to the news counter and glanced over the papers while a dusky bellboy shot off in quest of Mr. Scott.

"They all hate to play with the old geezer," said one of the clerks—a young one, you may be sure—lowering his voice and his eyebrows at the same time. "He's the rottenest player in the world."

"Who is he?" I inquired, mildly interested.

"Jasper Titus," was the reply. "The real old Jasper himself."

Before I could recover from my surprise the object of my curiosity approached the desk, his watch in his hand.

"Well, what does he say?" he demanded.

"The—the boy isn't back yet, Mr. Titus," said one of the clerks, involuntarily pounding the call bell in his nervousness.

"Lazy, shiftless niggers, the whole tribe of them," was Mr. Titus' caustic comment.

At that instant the boy, quite out of breath, came thumping down the stairs.

"Mr. Scott's got rheumatiz, Mr. Titus. He begs to be excused"—

"Buncombe!" snapped Mr. Titus. "He's afraid to play me. Well, this means no game for me. A beautiful day like this and"—

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Titus," said I, stepping forward. "If you don't mind taking on a stranger I will be happy to go around with you. My name is Smart. I think you must have heard of me through the countess and your"—

"Great Scott! Smart? Are—are you the author James Byron Smart, the—the man who"— He checked himself suddenly, but seized me by the hand and as he wrung it vigorously dragged me out of hearing of the men behind the desk.

"I am John Bellamy Smart," said I, a little miffed.

His shrewd, hard old face underwent a marvelous change. The crustiness left it as if by magic. His countenance radiated joy.

"I owe you a debt of gratitude, Mr. Smart, that can never be lifted. My daughter has told me everything. You must have put up with a fearful lot of nonsense during the weeks she was with you. I know her well. She's spoiled, and she's got a temper, although, upon my soul, she seems different nowadays. There is a change in her, by George!"

"She's had her lesson," said I. "Besides I didn't find she had a bad temper."

"And, say, I want to tell you something else before I forget it. I fully appreciate your views on international marriage. Allie told me everything you had to say about it. You must have rubbed it in. But I think it did her good. She'll never marry another foreigner if I can help it, if she never marries. Well, well, I am glad to see you and to shake your hand. I—I wish I could really tell you how I feel toward you, my boy, but I—I don't seem to have the power to express myself. If I"—

I tried to convince him that the pleasure had been all mine and then inquired for Mrs. Titus and the countess.

"They're both here, but the good Lord only knows where. Mrs. Titus goes driving every morning. Roads are fine if you can stick to them. Aline said something last night about riding over to Fassifern this forenoon with Amberdale and young Skelly. Let's see, it's half past 10. Yes, they've gone by this time. Why didn't you write or telegraph Aline? She'll be as mad as a wet hen when she finds you've come without letting her know."

"I thought I should like to take her by surprise," I mumbled uncomfortably.

"And my son Jasper—why, he will explode when he hears you're here. He's gone over to Covington to see a girl off on the train for Louisville. You've never seen such a boy. He is always going to Covington with some girl to see that she gets the right train home. But why are we wasting time here when we might be doing a few holes before lunch? I'll take you on. Of course, you understand I'm a wretched player, but I've got one virtue: I never talk about my game and I never tell funny stories while my opponent is addressing the ball. I'm an old duffer at the game, but I've got more sense than most duffers."

We sauntered down to the club house, where he insisted on buying me a dozen golf balls and engaging a caddy for me by the week. Up to the moment we stepped up to the first tee he talked incessantly of Aline and Rosemary, but the instant the game was on he settled into the grim reserve that characterizes the man who takes any enterprise seriously be it work or play.

I shall not discuss our game further than to say that he played in atrociously bad form, but with a purpose that let me to some degree into the secret of his success in life. If I do say it myself I am a fairly good player. I don't believe I was ever in better humor than on this gay November morn. I even apologized for Mr. Titus' execrable foozles. I amiably suggested that he was a little off his game and that he'd soon strike his gait and give me a sound beating after the turn. His smile was polite, but ironic, and it was not long before I realized that he knew his own game too well to be affected by cajolery. He just pegged away, always playing the odd or worse, uncomplaining, unresentful, as even tempered as the May wind, and never by any chance winning a hole from me. He was the rarest "duffer" it has ever been my good fortune to meet.

Runaway June

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

"Oh, Miss Junie, I didn't mean it to go so far!" the high cheek boned maid, Marie, cried, and she was pulling her thumbs in rapid succession while Aunt Debby glared ferociously at her.

"You!" June cried. "Why, Marie!"

And she looked in fright at Ned. There was a sneer on his lips.

"Well, Bouncer found Mr. Ned in Mrs. Villard's garden, and I knew you were hiding from Mr. Ned until you could make some money, so I told the chauffeur and the gardener not to let Mr. Ned see you or speak to you, and the next thing I knew Nr. Ned was gone."

He glared at Marie and June's heart sank. He shrugged his shoulders, as if dismissing Marie's narrative.

"I saw no cameras at Mrs. Villard's that night." And now he turned scowlingly to Orin Cunningham. "Yet I saw this man distinctly making love to my wife. And I saw Gilbert Blye doing the same thing!"

"We were rehearsing, Mr. Warner," explained Blye quietly.

"Yes, Ned!" June was crying, but, though Ned saw her, he paid no attention to her.

"We were to take the actual picture the next morning in the studio, and we were working out some scenes. It may help you if I tell you that Mr. Cunningham is the pursuing villain in 'The Runaway Bride.' I have been directing the pictures. I have taken the liberty several times of showing Mr. Cunningham how I wished scenes enacted. I also play the deserted groom." And his black eyes flashed.

Ned laughed, but there was no mirth in it. June shrank under his contemptuous gaze, and her mother patted gently the hand which lay in her arm.

"I'll swear it was not a moving picture rehearsel the night you dragged my wife out of the New York cafe and took her on board your yacht."

"You bet it wasn't." It was the heavy T. J. Edwards, and he was bobbing his round head vigorously. "A contract is a contract. When your wife saw you she wouldn't go on board the yacht; she wouldn't finish the pictures; she couldn't do anything. My heavens, man, do you know I had already spent $75,000 on this feature? And if this girl quit we couldn't get another one to take her place, could we? So we dragged her on board the yacht." And he glared his defiance at all of them. Money was money.

Ned Warner had been sitting on the edge of a table. Now he sprang to his feet, and his eyes flamed. He caught his wife by the wrist and pulled her away from her mother.

"Here's one thing you can't explain." He dropped her wrist, and she stood swaying with half closed eyes, but there was no mercy in him. "I saw you rush from a house in a filmy stage costume."

There was a strained tensity in the group which surrounded them. John Moore started to come to his daughter, but Ned fiercely waved him back. "It was moving picture work. Very well. But tell me this—how could any girl who could not endure the humiliation of accepting money from her husband consent to appear on the street for any purpose in such a costume?"

There was a deathlike stillness among them, broken by a wild sobbing from the little runaway bride.

"Ned!" she cried. "Oh, Ned!" And she clung upon his arm. He held coldly rigid. "Forgive me! You can't know how I've suffered! You can't know how I've loathed it all! I was so mistaken, so wrong! I thought I had such a wonderful ideal. When I had achieved my independence, when I need no longer look to you for money, I was to return to you, and we were to walk hand in hand through life in that love which can be founded only upon mutual respect, which asks love for love and nothing more. I meant our love to be without a flaw. No man can understand the hurt to a woman when that marriage she becomes absolutely dependent on his charity."

"Why, Junie!" The small, mild voice of Mrs. Moore, and she stepped forward with deep concern on her gentle face. "What is all this talk about a husband's charity?" And she turned with wonder to Father Moore. "A husband makes only one gift to his wife, and that is at the altar. After that everything he has is hers, if people will only remember the marriage service. Your ring is a symbol of it. 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow.'"

Gilbert Blye clutched his black Vandyke and looked at the ceiling; then he smiled suavely.

"That's a great idea! I'll work it into the feature!" But no one heard him. There was an audible sniffle from Iris Blethering, and Tommy Thomas was looking intensely sentimental.

"And you, my son!" She turned with surprising severity on Ned Warner. "Have you forgotten that you promised to love, cherish and protect my daughter?"

There was a cry from the little runaway bride and a sob from Ned Warner as, oblivious to all around them, they clasped each other in a solemn embrace.

From that loving clasp the beautiful wife of Ned Warner raised a radiantly happy countenance to her mother.

"And I have no problem," she [illegible]ed, and then she cried. And Iris Blethering and Tommy Thomas sobbed together and formed a lasting friendship. And everybody was happy, including Marie and Officer Dowd, who had become conscious at the mention of the marriage service, and Aunt Debby, who was praising her Redeemer in an unconsciously audible voice, and Bouncer, who was leaping and barking indiscriminately for the benefit of everybody and anybody.

"Where are they? Where are they?" screeched a shrill voice, and Honoria Blye burst into the group.

Gilbert Blye walked serenely over to meet her.

"You may go home to your parrot, Honoria," he advised her quite happily. Then there came a cold somberness in his black eyes. "You can't interfere with my business this time, as you have done ever since we were married, and you can no longer assume a dominance over me with your money." Suddenly the glow returned to his black eyes, and he looked to June and smiled his suave smile. "I have worked out my independence."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

GATHERS HELD IN LEASH MAKE THIS SILK GOWN GRACEFUL.

A very clever treatment of the circular skirt is to be observed in this dinner gown of pussy willow taffeta with big black tulip motifs on a white ground. Bands of shirred silk control the fullness of the skirt at the sides, the flare coming at the foot. The gathered bands trim the bodice effectively and knots of black velvet echo the black tulips in the silk.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Although he has already introduced several sensational feats, Hardeen, the King of Handcuffs, will present one of his most astonishing acts at Proctor's Theatre tonight. A large packing box, built especially for the purpose in the shipping department of A. E. Force & Company will be placed on the stage, and after Hardeen has been placed in it, the lid will be nailed down tightly by Plainfield men. Within a few seconds after this is done, the King of Handcuffs will emerge without breaking his wooden cell. This novelty is one that always causes wonderment but no one has ever solved the mystery. Hardeen continues to [illegible] his escape from a milk can filled [illegible] and [illegible] gives Proctor patrons one of the most original "stunts" they ever witnessed.

In addition to the change of vaudeville which comes to Proctor's tomorrow the program will include several added picture attractions. Among these will be a two-reel Chaplin comedy entitled, "His Trysting Place," another one of those screamingly ludicrous films; also the five-part Paramount photo-play, "Wildflower," and the pictures taken last Friday at the opening of the Federal League baseball season in Newark. The latter show the parade held about Newark streets, previous to the game and afterward the scenes on the diamond. The thousands of fans in the grandstand and bleachers are thrown on the screen at intervals and as many Plainfielders are at the game it is probable they may be discerned. This film will also be shown again on Saturday.

Tomorrow's new vaudeville acts will include the following: Reidy and Currier, offering a high-class musical conception, in which harp playing is featured; Gardner and Leonard, singing and talking comedians; the two Silverton girls, extraordinary tight-wire artists, and Morrisey and Rich, comedy skit.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD.

"Where is Nell?" asked Dick's mother as she climbed out of the carriage on returning from church. It was the Sunday when Mrs. Ellison's letter was received.

"In her room," answered Dick without looking up.

"Is she asleep?"

He shook his head.

"Something has happened. Can't you be trusted to care for her a couple of hours?" and his mother stalked toward the house.

Dick rose and followed his father to the barn. "I'm in trouble, father," he said when the old horse had been turned into the pasture. His father looked up inquiringly.

"Come out to the orchard," continued Dick. "Read these letters," he said, handing him the crumpled sheets. The old man put on his glasses and read.

"Richard," he said, straightening himself, "is there any truth in this?"

"Not a word, father," and he steadily met the searching gaze. "I was a fool. I was civil to the little silly and got myself talked about going back and forth to dinner with her. Mother tried to stop it when she was there, but she antagonized me. She always did, you know, and made me mulish. Nell believes this, and will not listen to a word from me. It will make her worse. Tell her, father, that she could have listened to every word I ever said to the girl; tell her——" his voice broke, and the sentence trailed off.

"Poor little girl, I'll go to her at once," and the old man turned and left Dick with his head bowed on his hands leaning against a tree.

"May I come in, little daughter?" asked the father, tapping on Nell's open door. She tried to rise, but fell back dizzily on her pillow. He drew a chair to the bedside and took her hand. The old face was so anxious that teams came to her eyes. She began to sob convulsively.

"There, dear child, try to be quiet; I have something to say to you. Dick has told me all about it, dear. He has showed me the letters, the one from the spiteful meddler and the boasting one from the shallow little trifler. Dick tells me he never said a thing to that girl that he could not have said in your presence; never was any more than civil to her. He blames himself for his obstinate refusal to avoid all this gossip and save you this pain, but that is all he has to repent of, and I believe him."

Then, as Nell continued silent:

"May I send him to you, little daughter? He needs you and you surely need him. Let him tell you what he told me." She nodded acquiescence.

Low rumbles of thunder were heard as Dick sank on his knees by the bed and took his wife in his arms; as the cooler air reached him he picked her up and carried her to a chair by the window and tucked a shawl around her, for she was shaking from head to foot. Nell snuggled her face on his shoulder and took long, quieting breaths of the cool air as the chair swayed back and forth.

Household Hints

PREVENT MOTHS.

Place pieces of camphor, cedarwood, Russia leather, tobacco leaves, whole cloves or anything strongly aromatic in the drawers or boxes where furs and other things to be preserved from moths are kept, and they will never be harmed.

Mice never get into camphor or trunks where gum camphor is placed.

If moths are discovered in carpets, wash floor with benzine and scatter red pepper on it before putting carpet lining down.

Clean carpets, when laid, sponge with warm water and ammonia. All crevices, joints and cracks should be brushed with boiling hot alum water if the presence of insects or vermin exists. Housekeepers should begin at top of her house and clean everything well, using a good disinfectant, whether or not there are croton bugs in them.

Special attention should be given to old furniture.

Ammonia is the most powerful and useful agent for cleaning anything it touches.

All bedding should be carefully washed and packed in boxes or trunks.

THESE DISHES ELIMINATE DEMAND FOR MUCH BREAD.

In these days, with flour prices soaring high, it behooves housewives to utilize left-overs in an appetizing way.

For left-over meats take a box of noodles and boil with two small onions about fifteen minutes, drain off part of the water, season to taste and add one and one-half or two cups of the cold meat run through a grinder, heat this thoroughly and serve. It makes a good, neat dish and enough for a good supper.

For a cheap and palatable dinner, take one and one-half pounds of boiling beef and cook until nicely done with two onions, then add nearly a box of macaroni and salt accordingly and cook about twenty minutes, which will make a good meat dish at a small cost.

Another good dish is to take about eight medium sized potatoes and three good sized onions and cut in dices. Then take your kettle and when hot put in one large tablespoon of butter and one of lard and two and one-half tablespoons of flour and let brown.

Then add onions and let brown and add about two quarts of boiling water. Then add potatoes and salt and pepper to taste and stir frequently.

Another good dish is to cook one-half box of macaroni in salted water with a couple of onions about twenty minutes.

Have hot at this time one pint of tomatoes, add a lump of butter and a little thickening to tomaties, and then drain water off the macaroni and pour the tomatoes over macaroni and then set in the oven to brown.

THE TABLE

Caramel Tapioca—Soak one cup tapioca over night in enough warm water to make moist. Add one cup brown sugar, small piece butter and pinch salt. Bake in oven until clear; remove from oven and beat into it one cup cold water. Serve with cream. Nuts may be added if desired.

Planked Steak With Macaroni—Use one small flank steak, one can tomatoes, two small onions, chopped, one green pepper chopped, one-third package macaroni cooked, one level teaspoonful salt, out-fourth level teaspoonful pepper, one teaspoonful kitchen bouquet, two level teaspoonfuls butter. Trim and score the steak; lay it flat on a board; sprinkle with salt, pepper and the chopped vegetables; roll and tie. Put butter into a pot, melt, brown the meat in this, add one cupful boiling water and the tomatoes, and cook slowly until the meat is tender. Add the cooked macaroni, and one tablespoonful of flour dissolved in a little cold water, stir for a moment, add the kitchen bouquet, and cook again slowly for twenty minutes. Serve on a hot platter, heap the macaroni around the meat, sprinkle with grated cheese and a little chopped parsley.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

How the Animals Made Garden.

"If I'm to have a garden," said Ella Elephant,
I rather think that peanuts are the things I want to plant.
I've always liked to eat them, but really I don't know
So very much about them; I wonder how they grow."

Miss Elephant inquired and very soon she found
The way to grow a peanut is to plant it in the ground.
She quickly made her garden, and as the soil was fine,
It wasn't long until she had a splendid peanut vine.

And then a sad thing happened; Miss Ella Elephant
While working in her garden espied Amelia Aht.
This little Ant was sitting upon a peanut vine.
"Get out of here!" Miss Ella cried; "this garden bed is mine!"

Amelia Ant was saucy and dearly loved to tease;
Said she, "You're very impolite, you really should say 'please.'"
And then Miss Ella Eelephant got angry as could be;
The way she stamped about that bed was terrible to see.

Amelia Ant slipped quickly off and wasn't hurt a speck,
But Ella tore around until her garden was a wreck.
And when her naughty temper had spent itself she found
There wasn't one small peanut left sticking in the ground.

"The weed of bad temper grows quickly, you see,"
Said wise, kind old Mother McGrew;
"Next time if you'll try self-control you will keep Your temper and your garden, too."

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — DISTANCE LENDS ENCHANTMENT — BY "HOP"

BRAIDINGS GIVE SMART MILITARY TOUCH TO CLOTHES.

No. 8889.

With the militaristic atmosphere that is now pervading every nook and cranny of the globe, it is but natural that our modes should reflect it. Very delightful are the effects, and particularly adapted to young girls. Very often the garment itself is not cut in military style, but the trimmings give this touch as in Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 8889. This is a misses' Princess dress cut with a slightly raised waistline, with standnig collar that may open either front or back, while the sleeves can be made in full or elbow-length. Developed in cadet blue cloth or taffeta, as in the illustration, with braidings of scarlet and a broad ribbon draped into a military sash, this will be smart in the extreme. The pattern cuts in sizes 16, 17, 18 years; size 18 requiring 8 yards 27-inch material and 2½ yards 6-inch ribbon.

Patterns can be purchased at the store of A. E. Force & Company.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

New York, April 21.—A new children's hospital, the gift of Mrs. Anna Woerishoffer, was opened here Sunday. It is named the Dr. Jacobi Hospital, in recognition of the fame of Dr. Abraham Jacobi, the nestor of pediatrics in this country, who is now 85 years old. Mrs. Woerishoffer gave $100,000 toward the hospital which is fashioned after German hospitals.

Des Moines, Ia.—A bankrupt pawnbroker of this city holds a bill of sale for the body of Miss Dottie Morgan, now living in Denver. When Mose Levich went into bankruptcy he presented the unique agreement by which he was to have the woman's body after death, for it represented one of his assets. The agreement was signed by the woman in return for ten dollars, loaned from the pawnbroker. The unusual agreement also says that the woman can buy back the agreement for ten dollars at any time. The court must now say whether the agreement is worth ten dollars.

Berlin—One of the hardest working volunteers in the hospitals for wounded soldiers is Countess Ina von Bassewitz, the morganatic wife of Prince Oscar, the fifth son of the Kaiser. The pretty romance of the prince and the noblewoman had many interruptions, and it seemed for a time that the bars of royal custom were to keep them apart forever. The prince is now at the front, while his morganatic wife is patiently working under the rigors of war times in the hospitals. The countess is highly talented, and her father was minister of foreign affairs and president of the Council of State for Macklenberg-Schwerin. When she was chosen one of the ladies-in-waiting on the Empress she became greatly endeared to the royal family. When Prince Oscar wooed her he met with opposition from his father, and Count von Bassewitz refused to have his daughter become a morganatic wife. But the young prince won the affection of the count, and through his mother and sister brought influence to bear with the Kaiser to allow the marriage. Everything was set for a brilliant wedding in October when the war broke out last August, and the young prince would not take the field before the wedding. The Emperor and Empress were present at the nuptials, and soon afterwards the young lovers were separated by the war.

$500 DONATED TO ITALIAN MISSION

Mrs. A. L. Cadmus Gives That Amount in Memory of Her Husband.

FOR BUILDING FUND

First Presbyterian Church at Annual Meeting Decides to Deed Back Property Given to Mission—Officers Elected.

Announcement was made at the annual congregational meeting of the First Presbyterian church, last night, that Mrs. Abram L. Cadmus had given $500 to the Italian Mission building fund, in memory of her husband, who was deeply interested in this work and who before his death had expressed a desire to do something to help the mission. Mrs. Cadmus said that in accordance with his wishes she had decided to give $500 to the fund.

There was considerable discussion of the question of the lot given by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bettman four years ago "for the use of the Italian Mission or other purposes," and agreeable to the present wishes of the donors the trustees were authorized and decided to deed the lot back to Mr. and Mrs. Bettman. The lot is located on Johnston avenue near East Second street.

Three trustees were elected for a term of three years. They were John Abbott, William H. Shotwell and C. E. Bond, all re-elected. William H. Shotwell was unanimously elected treasurer by a rising vote of the congregation for his fifty-first successive year. Mr. Shotwell thanked the members for their continued faith in him and hoped that he might continue the work for some time as he loved to work for the church.

Mr. Shotwell also tendered his year's report which was approved of by the auditing committee, composed of George B. Wean, E. D. George and F. O. Dunning. The report showed the amount of receipts to be $5,450.47 and the disbursements the same. There was a small deficit, but the treasurer donated funds to make the year figures balance. The amount that the church holds in trust totals $7,201.71 and $3,586.32 has already been subscribed for the proposed addition to the Sunday-school room.

The report also showed that a total of $16,822.94 had been raised by all the organizations of the church during the past year and the disbursements had been $10,807.90 leaving a small balance on hand. The auditing committee was re-elected for another year. The pastor's salary was voted the same as last year and during the evening several members expressed their commendation of the work that Dr. Herring is doing for the church. The matter of music was referred to the session with power to act. There was a long discussion as to a change in the financial scheme of running the church. The Duplex system seemed popular, but it was decided to retain the same method this year as last and the chair was authorized to appoint a committee to look into the matter and report at a meeting to be held nine months from date.

Grove P. Hinman was chairman of the meeting and William Hamilton secretary, with E. P. Morris assisting.

INTERESTING LECTURE ON "THE GHETTO OF FICTION"

The members of the Plainfield Y. M. H. A. heard an interesting talk last night in the association rooms, by Milton Goldsmith, of New York, who spoke on "The Ghetto of Fiction." Mr. Goldsmith is the author of the book, "Rabbi and Priest." The talk was an interesting one and was enjoyed by all present. Samuel Rothberg presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers.

Rabbi H. L. Martin and Dr. M. D. Moldesky, both of this city, made short speeches. After the regular program was concluded a social time was held, and refreshments served. The refreshment committee consisted of Arthur Richards, chairman; Charles Kuntzman, Dr. Ellis Campus and Louis Rothberg.

FATALLY STRICKEN AT DIVORCE TRIAL

Mrs. Alice Bunce, of Westfield, is Overcome in Courtroom.

Mrs. Alice Bunce, prominent in social affairs at Westfield, and former president of the Women's Club there, and her three grown children appeared yesterday in Jersey City before Vice-Chancellor Lewis. Mrs. Bunce was suing her husband, Theodore D. Bunce, for separate maintenance. Bunce is wealthy, an inventor and president of the Storage Battery Company of Manhattan.

Mrs. Bunce charged cruel and inhuman treatment, alleging her husband refused to go to church with her; that he neglected her; was selfish in his treatment of her, and had called her "a piece of meat," "an imitation woman," "a cold blooded lobster" and other names she regarded as offensive.

Mrs. Laura Swaney, of Westfield, said she and a woman friend were passing the home of Bunce's sister one night and heard a noise.

"I said it must be a dog fight," Mrs. Swaney testified, "and my friend said: 'That's no dog fight, that's just Theodore,' and then I saw Mr. Bunce."

"Did you hide?" asked John Angleman, attorney for Bunce.

"There wasn't a tree in Westfield big and broad enough to hide me," laughed Mrs. Swaney, a buxom young woman.

Every person in the court laughed at this sally except Mrs. Bunce. She was pale as death and several times she gasped as though breathing were difficult.

Miss Mildred, called to the stand, told of her father's large income and of presents on her birthday and at Christmas.

Mrs. Bunce was listening intently to every word her daughter uttered. Plainly she was growing weak and was swaying in her chair.

"He was fond of sauce on his food and gave me a dollar for every new sauce I could make."

Suddenly Mrs. Bunce slid from her chair and lay unconscious on the floor. Bunce did not move. He had a similar experience last fall, during a hearing in her suit, when she fainted from excitement. When she was revived then he handed her smelling salts and she exclaimed: "Not from you, sir."

Mrs. Bunce was taken to Christ's Hospital, accompanied by her daughter. The doctors were unable to revive her, and an hour later she died.

The body was removed to her home last night. Bunce, who lives in Westfield, in another house, had not called to see his wife's body, nor had he communicated with his children.

It was said that friends of the family were doing their utmost to bring the father and children together, and it was believed a reconciliation could be effected.

Engel told the United States District Attorney his client, who is in the Tombs, in default of $10,000 bail, is anxious to be brought to trial as soon as possible.

PLAN SUGGESTED FOR COUNTY JAIL REFORM

Committee on Relief of Unemployed Suggests Scheme for Prison Work.

Elizabeth, April 22—Sheriff George C. Otto has received a letter from Richard B. Boardman, of the Plainfield Committee for the Relief of the Unemployed, asking his support of the plan to put male jail prisoners, physically capable, to work. This step is permitted under the Berry act, known as Chapter 119 of the Laws of 1915. It gives the Freeholders power to pay the jail warden fifty cents a day for each prisoner employed on county roads or on the grounds of county institutions, the warden to pay this money to dependents of the inmates. Sheriff Otto, who has given prison reform much thought since his term commenced has the matter under advisement. Whether or not he will take it up with the Freeholders he has not yet stated.

It is known here there is some opposition to this plan in Union, and that the opposition manifested by the board of managers of Bonnie Burn Sanitorium still exists. Mr. Boardman write enthusiastically of the plan and suggests that a farm adjoining Bonnie Burn be purchased to give the prisoners work. His organization, he states, has among its members Judge William G. DeMeza, A. M. Harris, William H. Lunger, J. D. Loizeoux, Samuel D. Carter and Henry L. DeForest.

TRUCK WITH HUMAN FREIGHT TURNS OVER

Fifty Men in Transportation Automobile When Mishap Occurred Early Today.

An automobile truck carrying fifty men turned turtle on the South Plainfield extreme of Plainfield avenue shortly before 7 o'clock this morning, the vehicle being badly damaged but the human freight luckily escaping with a bad shaking up. The truck, which is an extra large one, has been fitted up by the Spicer Manufacturing Company, to transport its men back and forth between this city and the South Plainfield plant. It was while making the first trip this morning from here that the mishap occurred.

Eye witnesses absolve the driver, Adam Fritts, from all blame. The accident happened when the chauffeur attempted to pass a wagon on the left side. The slight incline in the road surface and the fact that the wagon was travelling in the center of the street, caused it to turn completely over.

When the big machine rolled over on its side the men inside the canvas enclosure were tossed to one side and the escape of all from injury is considered little more than miraculous. The jostling received was a severe one, but all were able to proceed to work.

LADIES' AUXILIARY WILL BE ORGANIZED

Proposition Favorably Received at Social Affair in Junior Club.

A proposition to organize a Junior Ladies' Auxiliary was launched at a "ladies' night" gathering in the Junior Club, at 311 East Front street, last night. The suggestion was received with great enthusiasm by the 100 members of the fair sex who were present and the preliminary details will be worked out during the next few weeks. Each woman who was present last night has been asked to submit her views on the question and attend the general meeting at which a decision will be arrived at.

Last night's affair was one of the most successful socials the Junior Club has yet conducted since taking passession of the commodious building a year ago. Dancing was one of the features and the guests also enjoyed pool playing and the other diversions of the clubhouse. Music was provided by Thomas Leacock and Neil Sheets, while vocal selections were rendered by Harry Hoffman and several other members of the club. The organization has decided to hold a "ladies' night" the third Wednesday af every month and men who are not members will be invited to enjoy the privilege of the clubhouse the first Wednesday af each month.

The committee in charge of last night's affair was composed of William J. Hartpence, Franklin Farmer and Forster Hartpence.

KENNEY APPEALS TO STATE BOARD

Interesting Disclosures Made in Local Man's Examination of Witnesses.

SEBRING ALSO APPEARS

West Seventh Street Property Value at Issue—Number of Petitions to Come up for Argument—Board to Announce Decisions Later.

Many interesting disclosures, some of which will have an important bearing on future hearings, were unearthed yesterday by David E. Kenney, of the borough, in his argument for a reduction in taxes on property situated at 925 to 1018 North avenue, before the State Board for the Equalization of Taxes. Members of the Board who sat in the Union County Courthouse yesterday were President Frank B. Jess, Lucius T. Russell and George T. Bouton. Mr. Kenney appealed from an assessment of $6,850 and asked for a reduction of $4,032.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield appeared as counsel for the city and the following witnesses were produced to show that Mr. Kenney's appeal was unqualified: Armstrong Mulford, Matt Stewart, Harvey Linbarger, and Charles H. Lyman. The appellant produced no witnesses but on cross-examination of the city's witnesses, brought out a number of illustrative comparisons, all of which appeared to have a noticeably strengthening effect on his claims. His specific allegation against the statement of the local assessor was "discrimination" and he sought to substantiate his contention.

One of his questions to the Board was: "Will your Board consider comparative arguments based on property values in Plainfield and Elizabeth?" This went unanswered, the Board refusing to commit itself. The city's witnesses testified to property values in the immediate vicinity of the North avenue property and gave expert opinions as to the probable selling figure of Mr. Kenney's land. The appellant attacked the testimony of several of those who appeared. Decision was reserved.

Nine appeals are listed for a hearing. The first taken up by the board was the petition of Charles P. Sebring for a reduction in an assessment on property in West Seventh street, Plainfield, from $15,300 to $12,975. The former figure was fixed by the county tax board on appeal from the original assessment of $17,800.

Two petitions from the borough of Linden ask for the restoration of the original assessments on property of the American Union Realty Company, which were reduced by the county board. In one case the board is asked to restore an assessment of $94,925 on land owned by the company, which was reduced to $81,925 by the county board. The other petition seeks to have restored an original assessment of $14,875 on seventy lots of the same company, which was reduced to $12,775 by the county board.

COST ELIZABETH MAN $25 FOR SPEEDING HIS AUTO

Charged with driving his automobile through West Seventh street at a speed estimated by Patrolman Martin Wolsh to have been thirty-two miles an hour, Frank Dayton, of Elizabeth, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning and fined $25 for the offense. On the witness stand the defendant admitted that he was probably travelling twenty-five miles an hour which is well over the speed limit.

The court took this opportunity to inaugurate its campaign against speeders and in disposing of the case Judge DeMeza remarked that repeated violations in this section have caused the people to become greatly agitated and that it was up to him to curb the flagrancy. Similar sentences will be dealt out to other speeders who are arrested in the future.

MANY GUESTS AT RECEPTION TO BRIDE

Mrs. Daniel DeWitt Brokaw Gives Pleasing Affair for Daughter-in-law.

Fully three hundred members of Plainfield's society attended the reception yesterday afternoon, given by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel DeWitt Brokaw, at their home on Sycamore avenue, the borough, in honor of the return of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Pierce Brokaw, from their wedding trip. Mr. and Mrs. Brokaw were married on March 6th, last, at the home of the bride in Indianapolis, Ind., and the affair yesterday was in the nature of an introduction of the young woman to Plainfield society. Before returning to Plainfield the couple visited Florida, spending considerable time at Green Cove Springs, on the St. John's River, and at St. Augustine. Mr. and Mrs. Brokaw will reside for the present with the bridegroom's parents, on Sycamore avenue, the latter being engaged in the jewelry business in New York city.

The home was tastefully decorated with spring flowers, palms and ferns; the color scheme carried throughout being pink. Mrs. Daniel DeWitt Brokaw and her daughter-in-law, were assisted in receiving by the former's sister, Miss Susan M. Rafferty, of South Orange, and Mrs. Alexander Hatfield Milne, of North Plainfield. The bride was attractively gowned in her bridal dress of white satin, and Mrs. Daniel DeWitt Brokaw wore a gown of white satin trimmed with black lace.

Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, of South Orange; Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mrs. Alex. Milne and Mrs. Lewis Williams poured, in the dining room. The following assisted in serving: Mrs. Charles Corning, of Baltimore; Mrs. Brown Rolston, Mrs. Loomis Dana, Mrs. Edward Suffern, Mrs. George Grande, Mrs. Leslie Hallock and the Misses Helen Joy, Elizabeth McGee and Ethel Most.

MISS NEWELL BRIDE OF M. H. MATSCHKE

Popular Young Woman Married at Home Ceremony Today.

Miss Frances Kate Putnam Newell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Newell, and Mortimer Higley Matschke, of Minneapolis, Minn., were quietly married at 11 o'clock this morning at the home of the bride's parents on West Seventh street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. L. Bumpus, rector of St. Michael's Episcopal church, Brooklyn, who is a close friend of the bride's family. There were no attendants and only immediate relatives were numbered in the small gathering of guests.

Miss Newell was attired in a taupe travelling suit and carried a bouquet of bride roses. A reception followed the ceremony during which the young couple were showered with congratulations. They left this afternoon for San Diego, Cal., where the bride's grandmother and brother, Franklin Newell, reside. They will visit several points of interest and at the expiration of three weeks will return to Minneapolis, where they will make their future home. Mr. Matschke is connected with the credit department of the Pillsbury Milling Company, in that city. Both young people were the recipients of many handsome gifts.

Mrs. Matschke has been numbered among the city's most popular young women and her removal from Plainfield is greatly regretted. She was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1910 and during her course took a prominent part in school dramatics. Mr. Matschke has made many friends in this city and in his home town is regarded highly by his employers and associates.

ORCHARD PLACE RESIDENCE HAS A MIDNIGHT FIRE

The home of V. Salvatore, at 449 Orchard place, was badly damaged by a fire discovered shortly before midnight last night. It is presumed that the blaze originated in the partition back of a kitchen range. The flames ate their way through to the parlor and also crept up the partition to the second floor. A telephone alarm was sent to fire headquarters and the flames were extinguished with chemicals.

The house is owned by A. Kahn, and is covered by insurance. An estimate places the damages at about three hundred dollars.

GERMAN TROOPS RUSHED TO FRONT

Immense Numbers Pour Into Belguim to Attack French and English.

BRITONS HOLD HILL 60

Berlin Reports That a British Submarine Has Been Destroyed Near Heligoland Bight—French Take 700 Metres of Trenches.

London, April 22.—Hill 60 in Belgium, is being held by the British against the furious attacks that the Germans are making night and day. This important position dominates the railroad from Ypres to Commines. With hundreds of troop trains rolling to the western front in Belgium, the Germans are preparing to hurl their masses forward in an unprecedented drive in the Ypres region and along the Yser.

But Britain has 750,000 men at the front in France and Belgium and the British artillery is ready for a supreme effort. Everything points to the development in the vicinity of Hillebek, Belgium, of one of the greatest battles on the western front.

For several days all the railways from Germany into Belgium have been crowded with troop trains running under close headway, and some of the best of the new German and Austrian armies are being hurried to the front. All ordinary railroad traffic has been stopped and even the guard on the Dutch border has been drawn upon for fighting men.

In view of all the German activity, it is believed that the General Staff is about to launch another movement similar to the memorable drives at the opening of the war.

Correspondents at the front are insistent in the stress they lay upon the massing of Germans in Flanders. According to the correspondent of the Daily Mail, the new German troops are for the most part keen young men who are admirably trained and equipped.

The allied airmen are more active than ever before and they have made valuable observations of the movements of the enemy. The roads in this theatre of the war have dried and hardened, and cavalry and heavy artillery can now pass with ease.

The French War Office announced that in the last few days the French have taken 700 metres of German trenches. All the German attacks from Belgium to Alsace were repulsed according to the communique. In the last twenty-four hours the French troops have been engaged only in fighting of local and isolated character.

Berlin, April 22 (By Wireless).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"On the western front, south of La Bassee Canal and northwest of Arras, accomplished several mining operations yesterday.

"In the Argonne and between the Meuse and the Moselle fierce artillery battles took place. After a surprise artillery attack the French last night attacked our position in the western part of Priest Wald, but were repulsed with heavy losses.

On the northern slope of Hartmannsweiler Kopf we destroyed one of the enemy's points of support and repulsed an attack by the enemy in the evening.

"On the eastern front the situation is unchanged."

Berlin, April 22 (via Amsterdam).—An official announcement today states that a British submarine has been sunk in Heligoland Bight.

INJURED HER FOOT.

Miss Florence Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gray, of First street, while returning with a party from a stroll to Washington Rock, Sunday, injured her foot.

IMPROVED CONDITIONS.

The general confidence inspired by the huge war orders has spread to Dunellen and effected local conditions most favorably. The Levgar Structural Company is employing 300 men against approximately 200 several months ago. The unfilled orders are sufficient to give the present force of the company employment for many months to come.

The factory of the Hall Press Works is giving employment to 200 men. The company has recently received orders for several more presses. One of these, it is said, will be one of the largest the company has ever manufactured.

SEWER WORK PROGRESSING.

The sewerage work is progressing rapidly, sewer pipe having been laid along the following streets to date: Dunellen avenue, from the middle of the block between Washington and Lincoln avenues, to Jefferson avenue; First street, from Jefferson and Washington avenues and from Madison avenue, half way to Lincoln avenue; Second street, Madison to Washington avenues; Third street, Lincoln avenue to Washington avenue, half way from Madison avenue to Lincoln avenue; Fourth street, Madison avenue to Washington avenue; Madison avenue, North avenue to Mountainview Terrace. The digger commenced working on the uncompleted part of Dunellen avenue this morning. Front street is the next street to be tackled, it is said.

SEWER ROUTE CONSIDERED.

Where is the sewer pipe to be laid along North avenue is a question which is interesting many. The Council is said to be in favor of laying the pipe under the eastbound trolley tracks, but the Public Service Co., not being at all desirous of tearing up its tracks, is trying to show the Council why the pipe should be laid on the north side of the thoroughfare where the drainage system is to be laid. The matter was discussed at Tuesday evening's Council meeting. The Public Service Company was represented by general Superintendent White. After a discussion of a full half hour the matter was left in abeyance, Superintendent White being asked by the Council to find out from his company what proportion of the additional expense, amounting to about $8,000, which would be incurred by following their plan, that necessitates the using of sheathing to protect the water main, they would be willing to bear.

WOULDN'T OBJECT TO HAVING BOY HUNG FOR THIS OFFENSE

During a quarrel in the Whittier School yard in Dunellen recently, Alfred Spurdle, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Spurdle, of that place, was bitten on the index finger of his right hand. The victim and his parents claim that a playmate did the biting after Spurdle had admonished him for squirting water from a rubber bulb.

In speaking of the matter to a Daily Press reporter, Mr. Spurdle said: "While gratified over the punishment meted out to the miscreant by the school authorities, I do not intend to let the matter rest there. Just as soon as I can get time to go over to New Brunswick to lay the matter before the county prosecutor, I will."

REPORT BIG GAIN IN MEMBERSHIP

Trinity Church Accessories Last Year Largest During Present Pastorate.

RECEIPTS OVER $6,000

E. F. Sheppard Elected Elder to Succeed Late A. L. Force—Other Officers Chosen—1915-1916 Budget Presented and Adopted.

Optimism was the keynote at the annual meeting of the congregation of Trinity Reformed church, held in the lecture room last evening. The pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, stated that the reports rendered to the Classis of Newark at their spring session in East Orange, yesterday, were very encouraging, particularly for the four Reformed churches comprising the Plainfield district. These four churches—Trinity, Netherwood, Marconnier and German Reformed—show a total net gain during the past year of 108 new members, the present membership in the Reformed churches in this district now totalling 1,200 as against about 600 five or six years ago.

During the year just closed fifty new members were received by Trinity Reformed, but the loss of twenty by death and the dismissal of seventeen to other churches makes the net gain for the period thirteen. The number of accessions is the largest since Mr. Broek's pastorate, and is very encouraging to him and his loyal corps of workers. The annual financial report, as presented by F. E. Smith, chairman of the finance committee, was also very encouraging. This report showed total receipts for congregational purposes during the year of $6,307.17, and for benevolences, $1,268.52, a very encouraging report in view of the unsettled financial conditions. During the same period the floating debt of the church has been reduced by nearly $400, over $250 has been expended for betterments and improvements, and the consistory was able to close the year with a balance on the right side of the ledger. Chairman Smith also presented the annual budget for next year, which was unanimously adopted.

At the annual election, which preceded the reports, Edgar F. Sheppard was elected elder for one year to fill the unexpired term of Elder Albert L. Force, who died on March 7, and Elders Robert Clark, Jr., H. E. Gayle and T. R. Van Zandt were re-elected for the full term of two years. J. S. Miller was elected deacon for one year to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Sheppard, and A. K. Willett, W. R. Kriney and F. S. Cutter were elected deacons for the full term of two years, Messrs. Willett and Kriney being re-elected. During the business meeting F. E. Smith acted as chairman and C. W. Belter was secretary.

The members of the congregation who were present were very much encouraged by the successful year just ended, and are looking forward with eagerness and earnestness for an even better year in every way during the next twelve months.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Although Carlyle Moore is practically unknown in the field of dramatic authors, his clever farce, "Stop Thief," is one of the most successful stage productions of the past decade. It was first presented in New York by Messrs. Cohan and Harris and crowded the Gaiety Theatre for an entire season. It is now made into moving pictures by the Paramount Association of Famous Players, the camera conception being even more funny than the legitimate predecessor.

"Stop Thief" will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow and Saturday, being presented at all performances. The film is in five parts and teems with action. Miss Mary Ryan, who is well known as a dramatic actress, is featured in the role of "Nell Jones," the light-fingered maid, and Harry Mestayer is seen as "Jack Doogan," her fiance, also a thief. The complications that arise through this pair pilfering and purloining succeed each other so rapidly the spectators are kept in a constant roar of laughter and after a wide variety of comical situations everything is straightened out happily.

The management of the Plainfield Theatre has been fortunate in securing such productions as "Stop Thief" for presentation to local audiences and there will probably be a ready response on the part of the amusement loving public. Although the film is now being shown in New York at Broadway prices, there will be no advance during the two days' engagement at the popular Second street house.

GOSPEL ADDRESS.

The subject of the gospel address to be given by Samuel Ridout at the hall, 209 East Front street, this city, at 8 o'clock this evening, will be "The Course of Time and Its Lessons." This address will be the last of the series. All are earnestly invited to attend.

YEAR'S RESUME OF GIRLS' WORK

Y. W. C. A. Curriculum Presents Many Attractions for Plainfield Young Folks.

DEVELOPMENT MARKED

Miss Elizabeth Wetherell, Who Will go to Syracuse University in the Fall, Has Worked Wonders Here —Many Phases of Endeavor.

That "health is wealth" and the most essential thing in the life of a young girl has been impressed on all the members of the Young Women's Christian Association during the year. The physical department has just ended its second term today, after a season of unusual success in recreation, development and corrective exercises. The strong, vigorous and rosy features of the young women convey the feeling that the work of the association has not been in vain.

The total enrollment for the two terms in the physical department was 150 members, beside 50 young women entered in the swimming class and 45 in the "First Aid" course.

Miss Elizabeth Wetherell has been the physical director of the association for the last three years and much of the success of the department has been due to her untiring efforts. During her stay here she has introduced many new features into the curriculum of the institution and has expanded the work in other lines. Miss Wetherell will leave the local association in the fall to take a similar position in the physical department of Syracuse University. In speaking to a Daily Press reporter, this morning, the popular young woman expressed regret in leaving the Plainfield association because of her many friendships formed during her stay here. For various reasons, however, it was best for her to accept the Syracuse position. She expects, however, to visit Plainfield often in the future and renew her acquaintances. She wished the Y. W. C. A. every success possible in the coming years.

The girls at the association say they feel refreshed and rested after a gymnasium class, even though a hard day's work preceded it. The exercises have been most beneficial to the girls and in many cases assignments of home exercises have improved walking and standing positions. In some instances corrective gymnastics for round shoulders, flat foot and spinal curvature have been assigned, with marvelous results. On alternate Monday evenings, Miss Harriet Mattison, of the Department of Health, gave lectures on sanitation and hygiene, and the association feels particularly indebted to her for splendid series of talks. Miss Mattison was elected chairman of the physical committee for next year and she will shortly begin picking her assistants.

The gymnasium course included instructions in Swedish gymnastics, aesthetic and folk dancing, apparatus, Indian clubs, dumbbells, wands, tactics, games, volley ball and basketball. Part of the more formal work, as well as the dancing, is accompanied by music. These classes are open to girls and women of all ages, from seven years up. The basketball season in the gymnasium has been very successful, the games played with other teams have been won, with but one exception, that of Trenton. Miss Marion Mair was the captain of the association five this season, and has been a most efficient pilot for the quintet, beside playing the positions of guard and center in an excellent manner. Miss Clara Smith has managed the games and the financial portion of the season, much credit being due the young woman for the splendid business-like methods in which she had conducted the affairs of the term. Miss Smith is an indispensable guard on the aggregation. The Misses Helen and Ida Hummel, retained the positions at forward and it would be a difficult thing to find anyone to fill their berths. Miss Ellen Doughty held the other guard position while the Misses Laura Smith and Mildred McAulife substituted for the quintet.

Prominent among the features added to the course during Miss Wetherell's term here is the Monday afternoon boys' class, for boys from 6 to 11 years old. In this department the lads are taught exercises, games and gymnastics. The young children's class has been particularly popular, the little "lassies" being taught the care of the finger nails, teeth and personal hygiene. Tennis has been played Wednesday afternoons during October and November, and will be continued this spring, the smooth and well-kept tennis court belonging to Mrs. James W. De Graff, on Central avenue, being generously opened for the use of the girls. Baseball has been productive of enthusiasm among the members, and large squads report for practice, which is held on Belmont avenue every Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The swimming lessons given by the director at the High School pool are greatly appreciated, and fifty girls interested in aquatic sport enrolled in the class at its organization several months ago. The gymnasium at the association has one shower for the girls. An association swimming pool is a need hoped for by a large number of girls, and this wish will undoubtedly be realized when more commodious quarters are provided. Hikes, "sunrise breakfasts" and picnics have all been popular with the girls and thoroughly enjoyed. Several new pieces of apparatus have been added to the gymnasium, the work on the apparatus being carried on in an extensive scale. Just at present the need for a "Swedish Boom" is felt, for vaulting and balancing purposes. Classes in "first aid" have been highly popular among the members, the department consisting of a practical course of lectures and demonstrations on what to do in case of illness or injury. Each lecture was given by a local doctor. Those qualifying in the final examination will receive a certificate from the National Y. W. C. A. and Red Cross Society.

The opportunities for the athletic girl of Plainfield are unusually attractive at the association, and the various departments entered into by the young women have been highly successful. Last year the gymnasium class won a silver cup, in the Y. W. C. A. meet, which was held in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, New York city, capturing first place in the hurdle relay race. Ten different associations were represented at the meet and 400 girls entered.

MISS PHILLIPS A CHARMING BRIDE

Becomes the Wife of John T. Whalen, of Brooklyn, at Home Ceremony.

A RECEPTION FOLLOWS

Included Among the One Hundred Guests Were Many Plainfielders—Bride Was Formerly a Resident of This City.

The wedding of Miss Florence Isabel Phillips, youngest daughter of Mrs. James R. Phillips, formerly of this city, and sister of Mrs. Juan A. Babcock, wife of Councilman Babcock, to John T. Whalen, of Brooklyn, took place at the home of the bride's mother, No. 226 St. James place, Brooklyn, at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, in the presence of about one hundred relatives and friends. Rev. A. W. E. Carrington, rector of the Church of the Incarnation, of which the bride is a member, officiated. The bride entered the room with her brother, Frederick R. Phillips, of Kennett Square, Pa., who gave her away. She wore a gown of white bridal satin trimmed with Duchess lace and orange blossoms. The bride carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Mrs. William Nieman, as matron of honor, and Miss F. Marguerite Phillips, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid. A. Clunan, Jr., acted as best man. Little Miss Helen Babcock, a niece, and Master Richard Phillips, nephew of the bride, were the ribbon bearers.

The house was decorated with palms and Easter lilies, and before and during the wedding service, there was a musical program rendered by John E. Leslie, a friend of the bride's family.

Many valuable and useful gifts were displayed, one of which was a chest of solid silver from an uncle of the groom. Other presents consisted of single pieces of silver, cut glass, linen, furniture and several checks for substantial amounts. The groom presented his best man with a pair of gold cuff links, and the bride's gift to her attendants were bar pins of pearls and sapphires set in platinum. The groom's gift to the bride was a ring of sapphires and diamonds. After the ceremony supper was served. KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmles and is made from the acid of grape and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray. Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

HUERTA ON MEXICO.

General Huerta, the exiled ex-President or ex-dictator of Mexico, now a visitor in this country, inevitably provokes a smile when he says that what his afflicted country needs is "a Mexican who will act as a surgeon, who will cure the sores, who will amputate the dead parts of the national body," and that under the hand of such a man "Mexico in a short time will revive and will be the paradise on earth it deserves to be."

Perhaps if General Huerta had not himself "acted as a surgeon" in dealing with Madero, or directed a surgical operation to be too hastily performed on the person of that visionary but earnest patriot, he might now still be the ruler of Mexico. In ridding himself or in consenting that his friends should rid him of a rival, Victoriano Huerta destroyed his own capacity for usefulness to his country as well as deliberately clipped the wings of his own ambition.

There is much to support his claim, however, that he maintained better order in the large part of Mexico under his control than now exists there. In spite of the mediæval method of securing the reins of power which he is widely believed to have employed, Huerta showed himself to be a capable and strong man while acting as Provisional President in a country where a dominating personality seems, at present, to be one of the chief things needful. His removal from the scene through the active participation of our State Department unfortunately has brought none of the desired results and appears even to have led to worse conditions.

Huerta is a very shrewd man and talks impressively, but even if he could clear himself of all responsibility for Madero's death, he would be no fit candidate for the role of saviour of Mexico. His presence would but add fuel to the fires of civil strife in a country where all the present warring factions execrate his name. Mexico must await another saviour.

For the first time in the history of the city the Common Council will give the people a chance to express themselves on the expenditure of city money tomorrow night, when the tentative budget, which was printed in last night's Press, will be under discussion. As the amount to be raised for city purposes for next year shows a slight decrease under the amount raised last year, it is possible that there will be little or no protest at the hearing, for the finance committee have pared things down carefully this year, in accordance with Mayor Calkins' suggestions, pending the proposed municipal survey. A casual inspection of the figures leaves no other impression than that the work of planning the city's finances for the year has been carefully done.

Evidently all is not peace and harmony in the Union county Democracy. Apparently every leader of the party, with the exception of Mr. Russell himself, was opposed to Lucius T. Russell being named to the head of the newly formed State Tax Board. It is evident that the party organization is to be split wide open again this year—even more so than in 1913. With harmony in the ranks of the Republicans and the Progressives reduced to the same class as the Socialists and Prohibitionists, the county Republican organization can sit back and look on complacently, as they elect their ticket in the fall.

October 19, the last day for registry for the general election in November has been decided upon as the time when the question of woman suffrage will be determined. In the meantime the voters must be prepared for all sorts of unique and unusual campaign methods such as have already featured the contest for votes. If the women do not receive the franchise this year, the question cannot be presented again for five years, as amendments to the Constitution cannot be submitted any oftener than that in New Jersey.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy has been trotted out by the Dalrymple crowd in Essex county as their candidate for United States Senator to succeed our own Jim Martine. After the previous painful experience which Mr. Murphy had when seeking the same job at the hands of the people, most people would think that he'd know better than to get stung twice in the same place.

The addition of Newark to the Federal League baseball circuit has created an unusual amount in interest in that organization in this city, and many local fans have visited the new park in Harrison.

"Check on Colonel by Court's Ruling" says a headline. It takes more than a ruling to put a check on T. R.

Summer is surely here—the song of the lawn mower has been heard again.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

I notice a slight inaccuracy in your report of the joint debate at the Men's Club of the Episcopal church, which I desire to correct, as I did not mean to misrepresent Hon. John A. Matthews.

You quote me as saying, "It has been said that 92 per cent. of the women are opposed to woman suffrage, and Mr. Matthews repeated this statement in a recent meeting in this city." I intended to say, and believe I did say, that Mr. Matthews declared that only 10 per cent. of the women of the country are in favor of woman suffrage. I also said that Representative Heflin, of Alabama, had claimed that the Anti's represents 92 per cent. of the women of the country. Mrs. Oliphant did not agree with me as to what Mr. Matthews said, but as I wrote him on the subject within a few days of the debate, when his remarks were fresh in my memory, I think I quoted him correctly, and he has found no fault with the statements made in my letter.

MASONIC VETERANS HONOR JOHN ULRICH

Chosen President of State Association at Session in Trenton.

Former Judge John Ulrich, a past master of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., this city, was elected president of the Masonic Veterans' Association at the session held in Trenton, last night. This is the most distinguished body of Masons in the State. Judge Ulrich succeeds Past Grand Commander O. O. Stillman, of New Brunswick.

The annual banquet of the veteran association was held last night. Interest in the elections, which will be held today, centres about the choice of junior grand warden. There are several candidates.

Grand Master Charles P. Russ convened the 128th annual communication of the grand lodge of New Jersey yesterday. Then followed reports. The deed for the old Masonic Temple in the park back of the State House, Trenton, was presented to the grand lodge. An addition will be made to the Home.

TWO LOCAL WIDOWS WILL APPEAR AS PETITIONERS

Judge James C. Connolly will sit in the Union county courthouse tomorrow to hear argunments on the petitions of thirty Union county widows for State pensions. Two of the petitioners are Plainfielders, Mrs. Lulu Wilson and Mrs. Adolphena Meyers.

In the applications sent in by the widows the total number of children accredited to the thirty applicants is 100.

DR. F. E. DUBOIS SPEAKS BEFORE CLINICAL SOCIETY

Dr. F. E. Du Bois, of this city, and Dr. Edgar B. Grier, of Elizabeth, made brief addresses at a meeting of the clinical department of the Elizabeth General Hospital last night. Both have visited the Mayo Hospital in Rocvhester, Minn., and they told of their observations there. After routine matters were disposed of a social time and dinner were enjoyed.

LUNCHEON GIVEN IN HONOR OF MRS. HOWARD W. RILEY

Mrs. Susan Wadams, of Grove street, gave a luncheon yesterday at her home in honor of Mrs. Howard W. Riley, who was recently married to her grandson. Covers were laid for fifteen, a number of the guests being from Roselle, where Mrs. Riley formerly lived. The table decorations were yellow and white.

After the luncheon progressive games were played. Mrs. James C. Riley, mother of the bride, received first prize. After the games the guests enjoyed a general social time.

FINAL TWO DANCE EVENTS OF SEASON IN PARK CLUB

Announcement has been made that the next two informal dances at the Park Club will conclude the series for this season. They will be given on Saturdays, April 24 and May 2. The Van Eps orchestra will provide music and will render their usual snappy program of novelty pieces.

Hugh Jarvis, the chairman of the entertainment committee, is to be congratulated upon the success which has greeted these dances. In each case he has been responsible for the details, and they have been extremely popular.

IMITATIVE RECITAL WILL BE PRESENTED IN HIGH SCHOOL

An imitative recital of the well-known comedy, "The Fortune Hunter," will be presented in the High School Auditorium on Friday evening, April 30, under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee. According to the policies of the committee there will be but a very slight charge for admission. Those who attend are assured of a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

Jack Barrymore made the "Fortune Hunter" famous during its run of two years in New York, and the impersonations of the various characters by Miss Lamson, who is to present the play, April 30, loses none of the force and humor of the original production.

A unique feature of the evening will be a series of classical and interpretive dances by Miss Mildred Brown, whose beauty and poetry of motion have charmed the Plainfield public in the past.

—Write a better "To Let" advertisement than is printed today, and see how quickly you'll find a tenant.

The home was attractively decorated with spring flowers and potted plants.

Lewis; solos by Mrs. Joseph Edgar, piano selections by Miss Hope Irving and the rendition of original piano compositions by Miss May Vincent Whitney. Miss Whitney's numbers all showed a thorough knowledge of musical composition and each one was enthusiastically received. PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Owing to the great success achieved during his first three days, and acceeding to popular demand, Manager Sanderson, of Proctor's Theatre, has re-engaged Hardeen, the Handcuff King, for the remainder of this week. His marvelous feats have been the talk of the town and so much attention has been attracted by his escape from a milk can filled with water and other recepticles that requests were made by many patrons to lengthen his stay. Last night, Hardeen mystified capacity audiences by the rapidity with which he emerged from a heavily built packing box, constructed especially for the purpose in the shipping department of the A. E. Force Company. To inaugurate his re-engagement, this afternoon and tonight, he will free himself from a United States hospital corps punishment jacket, a feat that has never been attempted by any similar performer. If the large attendances at Proctor's Theatre the fore part of the week can be taken as a criterion, the remainder of Hardeen's stay will result in capacity houses every night.

Beside the new vaudeville program commencing today, the bill at Proctor's for the remainder of the week will include several feature pictures. Among these will be "Wildfire," the five-part World Film photo-play, the scenes at the opening of the Federal baseball season at Newark and a two-reel Charles Chaplin comedy entitled "His Trysting Place." The succeeding episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" will be shown tomorrow and on Saturday there will be a new Chaplin comedy and a repetition of the Newark Federal League pictures.

RESUME OF WORK FOR UNEMPLOYED

Final Report is Made by the Commission Giving Detailed Figures.

OFFERED MUCH RELIEF

A Total Number of 1,705 Days' Work Provided for Unemployed and $4,288.07 Was Raised and Expended in Giving Aid.

An interesting resume of the work of the Commission for Relief of the Unemployed of Plainfield, has just been compiled and made public by the Commission, showing what has been accomplished during the past winter in relieving conditions in this city. An abstract of the report follows:

"The work of this Commission was organized early n November, 1914, and terminated on March 15, 1915. The complete figures are now available, and the Commission respectfully submits to the citizens of Plainfield the report of its activities as follows:

"During the period from November to March, the Commission secured work for 587 persons. These persons had dependent upon them some 1551.

"The total number of days' work which was secured by the Commission during the period was 1,705. The total number of permanent jobs secured by the Commission was 26. The function of the Commission was three-fold. In the first place, it investigated all cases of distress due to unemployment which was brought to its attention either by applicants for work or by other persons. In the second place, it acted as a clearing house between employers who were anxious to secure workers and employes who were anxious to sell their services. In the third place, it actually provided relief for those suffering from unemployment by creating work and disbursing relief in the form of wages. The total number of cases which the Commission investigated was 608. The total number of day's jobs which the Commission secured in its capacity as a clearing house was 1,185, and the wages from $1 to $1.75 a day. The total number of days' work created by the Commission and paid for by it was 3,520, and the wages paid was $1 a day, except in the case of foremen and carters. The Commission collected $4,838.38. The cost of the administration, including the office and the services of the investigator, printing, rent of the wood yard was $496. The amount expended by the Commission in wages was $4,288.07. In addition to the wages, the Commission furnished food for many applicants, and 405 barrels of wood. It gave second-hand clothing to 87 different applicants. In addition it secured from other employers $1,083 in wages.

"The above figures do not tell the whole story. The work of the Commission did not merely benefit the employes who were recipients of wages or other relief—the taxpayers of Plainfield and the city as a whole secured very considerable benefits. Unemployment, long continued, produces a very marked degeneration in moral standards, and every community that has faced this problem has experienced a great increase in petty crimes, in drunkenness and in chronic dependents. Many of those who have received emergency help from the poor department became chronic dependents. This has been pointed out by Charity Organization Societies time and again. By the work of the Commission these evils were almost wholly avoided in Plainfield during this winter. The police department and the poor department were very greatly helped in their work. The Commission's work was preventative, rather than curative, but all the more effective for that reason. Furthermore, the city received a direct benefit from the improved conditions of its streets, the removal of the railroad embankment, and two acres of land added to the poorhouse farm and brought into cultivation by those under the employ of the Commission."

"LOTS OF PEP" IN LEAL SCHOOL NINE

Voorhees Has Fanned Thirty Batters in Last Two Games.

Leal School baseball sluggers enjoyed a swatfest yesterday afternoon, on Crescent Oval, when they defeated the Morristown School nine by the score of 15 to 5. The local team sewed the game up in the first two innings, scoring nine runs while its opponents made but two. Voorhees was working in good form and thirteen of the visiting batters took three healthy swings at the pellet and retired to the bench.

Two plays from Voorhees to Sharp and a strikeout in the first inning retired the Morristown team and when Leal came to bat, Parmly, the new outfielder, cracked the ball into deep center for two bases. Stewart drew a pass and after Schneider had fanned, Voorhees singled scoring Parmly. Three more passes were issued during the initial round and Leal had four runs to her credit before Sharp fanned for the third out. Morristown made a brace of tallies in the second round when Captain Stewart made a misplay which was followed by a doublesacker. Twelve Leal batters faced the opposing pitcher in the second inning and five runs were scored.

Both teams failed to score in the third and fourth sessions, but in the fifth the visitors broke through with one run. Leal's received goose eggs in the fifth and sixth innings, but registered two in the seventh on a double, a pass and a bad error. The eighth was a repetition of the first inning, four runs being added to the local team's score, making a total of fifteen. In Morristown's last frame two runs were scored and the game was ended with a double play, Voorhees to Sharp to Schneider. Voorhees passed but two opponents, his first free trip being in the fifth inning. The score:

FRED WILSON HURT IN GAME YESTERDAY

Leal Third Baseman Sustains a Broken Leg in Battle With Morristown.

Fred Wilson, third baseman on the Leal baseball team, will be out of the game for the rest of the season as the result of an accident he had while playing in the Leal-Morristown game on Crescent Oval, yesterday afternoon. His left leg was broken at the shin and he was immediately carried to the hospital where the bone was set by Dr. Norman H. Probasco. The accident came in the ninth inning of the contest with one out and the game practically over. In attempting to put a Morristown runner out, Wilson played in front of the third sack and the runner, in sliding for the base, struck him on the left leg with his foot.

The runner was undoubtedly out, but Wilson fell to the ground, his leg being all out of shape. He showed much grit in taking the matter calmly and was reported resting easily this morning. Up till this year he has been a substitute on the baseball team, but held down the difficult corner in good fashion both in practice and in the two games he played. Another new man will have to be worked in at third as Wilson will not play again for several months. He has one more year at Leal. The accident was similar in many respects to that suffered by James Nash, a Leal catcher, a year ago last Decoration Day on the same field.

GOOD "FEELER" FOR NEXT YEAR'S TEAM

P. H. S. Second Squad Has Some Promising Material on Its List.

In a farce game of baseball staged at Parker Field, yesterday afternoon, the Plainfield High School second team defeated the second team of Somerville High by the one-sided score of 11 to 2. Because of poor playing and lack of interest, the game was stopped in the seventh inning, much to the delight of the scorers who were kept busy making errors.

When the local team first went to bat eleven men faced the visiting pitcher, who gave a quintet of bases on balls and two hits, helping P. H. S. get five runs. They repeated this same performance in the fifth inning.

Butler and Davidson, who pitched for the Ninth street boys, gave promise of developing into good twirlers for next year to fill the vacancies of Brick and Denny who graduate in June.

BOXING BILL LOOKS LIKE A REAL THING

Has Passed Both Houses and Now It's up to the Governor.

The bill to legalize boxing, which passed the Senate and Assembly Monday afternoon, will in all probability be signed by Governor Fielder, thereby becoming a law. The measure calls for amateur exhibitions of four rounds with eight-ounce gloves, and only gymnasiums of three years' standing, where physical culture is regularly taught will be permitted to conduct such exhibitions.
